Community Service Unit To Battle Wives' 'Cabin Fever'

by CAROL RHYNE

"I began to feel my husband was having all the fun while I was home growing stagnant. I resented having to take care of the children while he was able to leave home. I became less interested in the house and spent more time dreaming until I realized I had to either break up or break out."

That was one woman's description of a condition felt by many other women stranded in the suburbs which has been labeled "housewife isolation," alias "cabin crazy fever," and the "trapped housewife" syndrome.

The dilemma of loneliness and other problems of living in the suburbs are the purposes of a new women's committee of Elk Grove Village Community Service, which provides counseling for village residents.

"We feel many women have problems that stem from the vacuum they find themselves in when they move out here," Marilyn Quinn, co-chairman of the women's committee, said. "Sometimes the solution may be to help the woman find a group in which she can share common interests while in other cases she may only need a babysitter to get her out of the house."

JORDAN ROSEN, director of Community Services, said, "There is no good program to bring new residents into the community. Men, who usually have jobs, get out of the house and relate to other people. For women, moving here may be difficult with children to care for and without transportation to get around."

Many housewives who have come in for help have said they feel "like climbing the walls," Rosen said. "Women come in and tell me they feel they are depressed because they feel they have more to contribute to society than 'just being a housewife.'"

He said an escape to the television soap operas can be all right in some instances, but in other cases it makes things worse by portraying and accentuating the frustration the woman feels.

Sometimes the woman loses self-confidence or feels she is being shut off from the world, Rosen said. "The problem also may manifest itself in the woman becoming withdrawn, turning to alcohol or sleep or taking the frustrations out on the children or the husband.

"The situation may reach the breaking point when the husband comes home tired and she wants to go out, and there isn't money available for entertainment in the budget or a babysitter can't be found," he said.

MRS. QUINN SAID young mothers who move to the suburbs with their families in the winter can be especially isolated by the cold weather and not seeing neighbors for months. "There are many lifestyle changes in moving to the suburbs, and some women are at a loss on how to relate to the community," she said.

The women's committee, which was started this summer, has been considering sponsoring an "organization fair" this fall for women in which local clubs set up booths to distribute materials and information to prospective members.

There also has been some talk of helping mothers in the community set up a cooperative babysitting arrangement to give the housewives a place to leave the children while running errands.

"What we're trying to do is 'preventive maintenance' to relieve the feelings of isolation and worthlessness that some women feel," she said. "It's all a part of an effort to meet the mental health needs of the community."

Road To Open Before School Starts In Fall

Arlington Heights Road from Ill. Rte. 72 to the Salt Creek Bridge should be opened before the start of school this fall, an official of the Cook County Highway Department said Thursday.

Although the spokesman would not release a specific date, he did say it would be after Labor Day, Sept. 4. School will open for elementary and high school students in Elk Grove Village Sept. 5.

A 1.4-mile-section of Arlington Heights Road at the Salt Creek Bridge was closed in February by Rock Road Construction Co. The road is being rebuilt and widened to four lanes with a median strip and a new bridge at Salt Creek.

A spokesman at the highway department said work is proceeding on schedule although recent rains have slowed construction. Most of the curbs and gutters and the median strip have been completed, and landscaping will start after the roadway is finished.

THE ENTIRE PROJECT, including landscaping, should be completed the first part of October, the spokesman said.

Even though the road is not officially opened, local traffic has been allowed to use the street. Traffic, other than local, has been increasing as the highway nears completion. Police Chief Harry Jenkins said patrol cars have been stationed along the street to discourage "through" traffic.

So far one worker on the scene said the traffic has not been so heavy that it interfered with construction.

An alternate traffic plan was initiated in June to force vehicles to use Wildwood Road instead of the other interior residential streets to detour around the construction.

Village Mgr. Charles Willis has said the plan was working well, but there had been a number of complaints from residents along Wildwood Road that traffic was too heavy.

THE PLAN PROHIBITS traffic from going north on the four residential streets which intersect Landmeier Road between Wildwood and Arlington Heights roads. One-way restrictions also were put into effect on Little Higgins Road and Gaylor Street.

Elk Grove Village had hoped earlier this summer that two lanes of Arlington Heights Road would be opened to ease the problems caused by all the detours around the main Arlington Heights thoroughfare.

However reportedly county highway officials decided against opening part of the road early because they felt heavy traffic would delay completion of the project.

"CABIN CRAZY FEVER" and "trapped housewife syndrome" are terms used by some suburban housewives to describe the feeling of being isolated with cooking, cleaning, caring for a family and being all-around handyman.

Dedication Set Oct. 9

Wet Weather Delayed Football Field

If mother nature would cooperate, the Elk Grove Boys Football, Inc. volunteers could finish their new field.

"We're at a virtual standstill," said Norm Jones, president of Elk Grove Boys Football, Inc.

Jones said sod has been purchased, lights are now ready, and a scoreboard has been donated, but nothing can be done until the field has been filled and graded.

More than 500 trailer loads of fill, donated by Lindhal Bros. Excavating Co., have been dumped on the field said Jones. A half-acre area remains to be filled. Another 30 to 40 truckloads will be needed to fill the hole according to Jones.

Weather permitting, the last of the fill should be dumped in time to allow sodding next week.

Dedication of the field and a ceremony honoring all donors is scheduled for the last home game, Oct. 9.

Boys Football, Inc. will play two pre-season games Sept. 2 and 3 against Glen Side at Glen Side. The regular season opens Sept. 9 against Elmhurst at the Elk Grove High School Field.

Population Unit Surveys 3 Suburbs

The Northwest Suburban Chapter of Zero Population Growth (ZPG) is now surveying Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect to determine the knowledge and attitudes of local residents on population growth.

The survey is a 10-question study with both opinion and knowledge measuring questions. Volunteers will be contacting 200 homes in each of the three municipalities.

THE SURVEY COVERS several aspects of population growth. Local residents will be asked their opinions on such questions as:

—What do they feel the ideal population of the United States should be?

—How fast is the world's population growing?

—What effect does population growth have on the environment?

—How long would it take for the United States to achieve a stable population size?

The survey is expected to be completed by the end of the month. Results will be compiled in time for ZPG's meeting on Sept. 13.

Joan Brossett, ZPG member, said the results will be used as part of a display for the organization's public show in early November.

Sock Hop Saturday

A "Sock Hop" will be featured from 8:30 p.m. - 11 p.m. Saturday night at the Teen Center, Lions Park Community Center, 180 Kennedy Blvd.

Records, some going back to the "funky fifties" will be played. Roger Brown, former Los Angeles Rams football player, will act as disc jockey.

Admission is free, but everyone is required to wear socks. Activities will be chaperoned by adults from organizations supporting the Teen Center.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

General Motors Corp and Chrysler Corp. joined American Motors in refusing Nixon administration pressure to cut back price increase requests on 1973 models to recover the cost of adding anti-pollution and safety hardware.

A Federal grand jury indicted Daniel Moore, former U.S. deputy comptroller of the currency, on charges of mis-handling $6.1 million in bank funds, securities and obligations.

Sen. George S. McGovern, smarting under White House charges that he may have jeopardized Vietnam peace negotiations, charged that it was President Nixon who was interfering by sending Henry Kissinger on a "global junket." McGovern, in Wisconsin, said the Kissinger trip from Paris to Saigon was designed to manipulate public opinion.

Presidential Adviser Henry Kissinger and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu met for more than two hours in Saigon, but details of their Vietnam War talks were cloaked in secrecy.

The State

Tricia Nixon Cox trudged through the stifling heat, throngs of sweaty well-wishers and musty swine and cattle bums at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield in an effort to help elect her father and give the state GOP ticket a boost.

The Illinois Electoral Board postponed ruling on whether Communist party and Socialist Workers party slates will be allowed on the ballot in November.

Governor Richard B. Ogilvie said he would conduct a "person-to-person" campaign from the tip of Southern Illinois to Chicago — by camper. His Democratic opponent, Daniel Walker, walked the length of the state last year, more than 1,000 miles.

The World

Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer adjourned the 15th game of their world chess championship with Spassky's king in check after 40 moves.

Twelve African countries have indicated they will withdraw from the 20th Olympic Summer Games if Rhodesia participates, according to Willy Daume, president of the organizing committee.

Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, chief negotiator of the Viet Cong delegation at the Vietnam peace talks, said she agreed with President Nixon's political opponents that he missed a chance to make peace when he took office in 1969.

The War

U.S. airplanes seized advantage of the best flying weather in weeks and swarmed over North and South Vietnam with almost 700 strikes in two days, the U.S. command reported. South Vietnamese marines clashed several times with the North Vietnamese around the demilitarized provincial capital of Quang Tri.

'Contract Versus Policy' Issue Blocking Teacher Pact

For the past five months representatives of the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education and the Education Association representing the district's 448 teachers have been trying to agree on a 1972-73 contract.

Most of the time school districts involved in negotiations with teachers have problems agreeing on salary increases. This year, however, just one week before the beginning of school, the two sides in Dist. 211 have not even begun to discuss salaries.

The bargaining this year has stalled on the "contract versus policy" issue. The Education Association is asking the board to include guarantees on class size, evaluation procedures, teacher transfer on the filling of vacancies into the new contract.

Stories By Wandalyn Rice

The board has refused, saying it does not want to open items like class size and evaluation to grievance procedures. Instead, the board has offered to form joint committees with the association to study the problems and to include remedies in its policy manual.

Two key figures in the negotiations are Robert Seger, chairman of the board negotiating team, and Doug Verdonck, a teacher at Fremd High School and president of the Education Association.

Although Seger now lives in Schaumburg and Verdonck in Algonquin, Ill., the two have known each other for years. More than a decade ago, both lived in Palatine, attended the same church, and played on a softball team together.

Now they are on opposite sides of the bargaining table. Their views are presented here.

Ex-Union Bargainer On Other Side Of Table

Robert Seger walked a United Auto Workers picket line when he was 20 years old.

In 1947, he became a reporter for a newspaper in Rockford, Ill. and by the mid 1950's was president of Local 5 of the American Newspaper Guild. In that capacity, he headed the union negotiations.

Last year when he ran for the Dist. 211 board of education, Seger, who now works for a Chicago public relations firm, pointed to his union experience as one good reason why he could help the board. This year he is heading the board bargaining team.

His influence is one of the reasons the board agreed to listen to the teachers' proposals on contract language for class size, evaluation and other "working condition."

"I have always had the feeling that negotiations should include a discussion of issues. When I was negotiating for the Guild, I was always disturbed when management said 'that's none of your business,' he said.

Listening to the teachers' views on the "working conditions" has been valuable, he says, and board members have seen things that should be changed.

"WE NEED INPUT from the teachers," he says. "The teachers are professionals and the board isn't. If we had to depend just on administrators to make improvements, I don't think we'd make progress very fast."

Even so, Seger and the rest of the board do not agree that language suggested by the teachers on working conditions should be included in the contract. Instead, they believe board policy can take care of problems as it has in the past.

"I don't think there is a point of accommodation on this issue," Seger says. "I don't think the board will move on this because we haven't been shown that policy doesn't work."

Even though the issue seems irreconcilable, Seger says he is optimistic the two sides will reach a settlement and there will be no teachers' strike. "One of the reasons I'm optimistic," he says, "is because the association team has not shown me there is a big problem with working conditions. If we had problems that hadn't been solved by the present methods, I would feel different."

In addition, during the last few negotiations meetings, Seger has objected to the presence of Illinois Education Association (IEA) representative Dave Tomchek. He calls Tomchek a "professional unionist" and says he is not interested in the good of the district.

"I REALLY THINK Dist. 211 is a target district by the IEA," Seger says. "This is one of the reasons I disagree with the presence of Mr. Tomchek."

IEA, he says, has said local school boards are the enemy, and he believes the local boards must take a stand. "Board members are the only ones who are accountable to the citizens of the community."

The board has been making contingency plans in case bargaining reaches a crisis point, Seger says, but he still does not believe it will. "Neither side should just go along assuming everything is going to be hunky-dory," he says. "You

From Business Courses To 'Life' In Education

If his life had been just a little different, Doug Verdonck could be sitting in a plush corporate office today.

After graduation from Palatine High School in 1961, Verdonck went to college and was graduated in business administration. He was planning to get a master's degree in the subject when he entered the graduate school at Oklahoma University.

"Then I got involved with two people, the director of special education and the dean of the education school," he explains. "It was hocus-pocus and six months later I was in education."

He got his degree, taught for awhile at the college level and then returned to Dist. 211 because his Ph.D. committee wanted him to get more experience in secondary schools. Now he is department head of special education at Fremd High School.

HE MADE THE SWITCH to education, he says, because his friends at Oklahoma "convinced me that this is where change in society is going to be. Everything I've experienced so far has proven them right."

Verdonck explains his involvement with the education association simply. "I'm a lifer, teaching is my profession. Of course, I want to be involved."

When he was elected president, he says, he didn't expect to get involved in protracted negotiations because in the past the district's negotiations have proceeded smoothly.

In December, however, the association gave its members a questionnaire asking them to list their major concerns. Over and over, Verdonck says, the teachers listed problems with class size, evaluation and transfer which were incorporated into the association negotiation team's position.

The board, however, has not been willing to move on the "contract versus policy" issue according to Verdonck. The reason, he theorizes, is that "I have found it always more difficult to negotiate a share of authority. People in authority positions have a tendency not to want to give up that authority."

BOARD MEMBERS HAVE also argued that they must keep all authority because they are accountable to the voters and the teachers are not. "I think that's false," Verdonck says. "There's not a place a teacher ever goes where he's not asked to be accountable for what's happening in education."

In addition, Verdonck faults the district for being slower than some of its neighbors on moving toward innovation. "For the four years I've been here, I have always heard an attitude expressed of 'let's wait and see what Dist. 214 does before we change,'" he says.

On Tuesday, Verdonck will chair a meeting of the general membership of the association and will ask the other teachers whether they support the association on the "contract versus policy" issue. He says he does not plan to take a strike vote.

"I ran for election on a platform of participatory Democracy and that's the

'Life' On Canvas

Painting Must Be 'Right' For Buyer

by JERRY THOMAS

"If a painting is not right for a purchaser I will not sell it to that person for any price," said artist Robert L. Freeman of Schaumburg.

"On the other hand if a work communicates to a buyer, I'll see that it is priced so that he can afford it," he added.

Freeman said his attitude may sound arbitrary, but explained he feels his canvases take life when they are worked, and must transmit a feeling the owner can live with.

As an impressionist, Freeman suggests, rather than making positive statements with oil on some of his canvases. But on others he is bold and commanding using a palette knife application of oils combined with oil brushwork.

Freeman works with all medias of artistry on canvas.

HE DRAWS ON experiences remembered from his travels throughout South America and the United States for subject material.

"My imagination provides me with a continuous supply of material that ranges from clowns, underwater scenes, seas, vegetation, street and carnival scenes and landscapes," said the artist.

Freeman, 39, and his wife Dorothy live at 911 Walnut Ln. when they are not traveling for pleasure or on the way to an art show. The Freemans exhibit at a minimum of 25 shows a year, and Freeman's work has been shown in several one man shows in this area.

He will participate in the Woodfield Shopping Center Art Show Sept. 30 and

Oct. 1 in Schaumburg, and his work will hang in the new wing of the Schaumburg Township Public Library at 20 Library Ln., Schaumburg, throughout the month of November.

"DOROTHY ACTS AS my best critic," said the husband, admitting ruefully her comments are not always what he wants to hear.

"If it's good, and most of his work is, I tell him. But I'm not afraid to say it's lousy and will argue the point if I have to," said Mrs. Freeman.

"I may do the brushwork but my wife is a part of every canvas," said Freeman. "We work together," he added.

"My job is to see that our life is organized so that my husband can work and think," said Mrs. Freeman.

Freeman said not all his work is accepted by the public, but he feels compelled to produce what he calls a record of the times.

In some paintings he has shown the technology and moods of the country, regardless of the horror they sometimes evoke from his critics.

"Some of my work showing pollution, poverty and protestors turned people away from my display in Springfield. However, it's a picture I must capture, as well as the beauty around us," said Freeman.

Freeman, who has lived in the Midwest most of his life is a professional painter and layout designer for a suburban newspaper. He began painting at age 12, attending both the American Academy of Fine Arts, and the Art Institute of Chicago.

Teachers Work On Way For Faith In Classroom

by CINDY TEW

Fear and insecurity are reasons for faith. Faith is a cultural adjustment.

The statements could have been made by atheists listing reasons not to believe in God. They were made, however, by a group of St. Viator High School teachers — wrestling with how, or if, to incorporate faith in the classroom.

Besides restructuring St. Viator High School curriculum, the teachers are taking a new attitude to their classroom. Instead of the traditional impersonal student-teacher relationship, the teachers are trying to provide for more individualization and a more meaningful relationship with students.

The past week has been a series of seminars on religious dimensions of teaching for the teachers.

"Expressing our own faith perspective is difficult. Religion is a personal thing," said the Rev. John Linnan, from the Center of Religion and Life, University of Nevada. "But we must be aware of our own feelings, and realize our fears to be able to deal with our students who are just starting to question their existence."

Seminars including intense religious discussions have provided an interesting week for some teachers, a tormenting week for others and a boring week for some.

"I think we have come to a beginning," said Rev. Linnan on Wednesday. "We are beginning to explore faith together as believers and doubters."

At the same time, teachers have been developing curriculum for their particular group. The group emphasizing man and his relation to society in their curriculum has found polar viewpoints on some issues. Heated discussions are not uncommon.

First Haircut Is Terrifying

by JEAN CAFARELLA

A boy's first haircut must be one of the most fearful moments of his life. If the kid isn't crying, the mother is.

This traumatic event usually occurs when the boy reaches a year of age, sometimes sooner. If he's a year old or less, the child is quiet. "He doesn't yet have a fear of doctors or hospitals, or a stranger who might hurt him," said Craig Huotari of Craig's Barber Shop in Wheeling.

However, "Mother" is impossible. "She stands there and cries, because she's losing her little boy. He's become a man and he's leaving home," Huotari said. "And grandmothers are the worst. I had to ask one to leave because she was crying, afraid I was cutting too much off."

IF MOM ISN'T prone to heart-rending sobs, she may have invited all the relatives to witness the event. "A first haircut is a big parade, with the mother, father, grandma, grandpa . . . I had one family bring movie equipment. They had the big lights and some pretty sophisticated equipment, and shot the whole thing," said Huotari.

Some mothers will sit down in the barber chair and put the kids in their laps. It becomes almost impossible to cut the back of the boy's hair.

And if the mother stands too close, the kid will try to dive right out of the chair. Huotari keeps trying to get the mothers to wait elsewhere. The barbers said they would rather have fathers bring their sons, on the theory that the children will behave better.

Between the ages of one and two, "about 50 per cent of the time the kids start raising hell and crying," said Don Mitchell of Colonnade West Barber Salon in Buffalo Grove. By this time they've had some experience with doctors and other strangers who might hurt them.

Mother also makes a transformation. Mitchell said that even if the boy is crying, the mother will put him in the seat, "tell him to be nice, then walk away and stick her head in a magazine."

He also finds a child is more crabby if it's nap time. Most of the kids don't like having the cloth put around them, because it pins their arms underneath.

ALTHOUGH MITCHELL says some kids come in and "sit through it like a champ," some are totally terrified. Even if the barbers try convincing the boys that they won't be hurt, chances are they're too young to understand, and keep crying.

Mitchell has had some of his young customers kick him, and a few have ripped the cloth in half. "Those little bug-gers are strong," he said.

Another barber in Colonnade West said he's heard of a boy in West Chicago who needed four men and one woman to hold him down.

"I had one kid who kept calling for the police, but he had a history of a lot of hospitalization," said Huotari.

Two Charged With Gambling (What Else) At Track

Agents of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation (IBI) arrested two Chicago men Wednesday afternoon at Arlington Park Race Track and charged them with illegal gambling.

Arlington Heights police observed John Contreras, Chicago, watching the races from a service station on the northwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road, then making calls from a telephone booth. While more police were being summoned to the scene, Contreras entered the track, where police say IBI agents saw him receive large sheets with painted numbers from another man, later identified as Angelo J. Contreras.

When John Contreras returned to the phone booth, another IBI agent allegedly saw him make a call and heard him say, "Number two for today," before he hung up. Both men were then arrested. Police say they believe the numbers were used for betting.

The men were booked at Arlington

Heights Police Department where they were lodged in the jail to await bond. Court date for the two has been set for Sept. 8.

This was the second arrest this season for illegal betting at Arlington Park.

Driver Is Hurt

Salvatore Scianna, 26, Streamwood, suffered a whiplash and other neck injuries in a two-car accident Wednesday at Rte. 72 and Wildwood Road in which the car he was driving was struck from the rear by a car driven by Glenn Paulsen, 17, of Villa Park.

Elk Grove Village Police charged Paulsen with driving too fast.

Elgin Officials Protest Report

Officials at Elgin State Hospital said yesterday they would prepare a detailed response to a state legislative subcommittee report which called the Elgin institution a "Blemish" on the state mental health system.

Douglas Norcross, administrative assistant for hospital director Dr. Daniel A. Manelli, said the hospital intends to study the full report and prepare a response for the Illinois General Assembly within a month.

Norcross added he had seen the full report. He said the subcommittee, headed by State Sen. Frank M. Ozinga, R-Evergreen Park, held two hearings at the hospital.

Norcross declined to comment on why the hospital was so severely criticized.

THE 16-PAGE REPORT, submitted to Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie Wednesday, stated, "Elgin has become a blemish on the record of a state mental health system that has otherwise taken giant strides forward in recent years." The report stated the quality of care has risen recently because of decreased patient loads and the establishment of halfway houses and nursing homes.

"In light of these rising standards of care, the conditions at Elgin can be termed deplorable and intolerable," the report stated.

The report also sharply criticized Manelli for not accepting proper responsibility for administration. Manelli was not available for comment.

OZINGA'S SUB-COMMITTEE, is part of the Legislative Committee to Visit and Examine State Institutions, made visits to the hospital in March, April and May.

Among the specific criticisms of the hospital were that it has inadequate and deteriorating physical facilities, lapses in safety and sanitary standards, ineffective security and patient supervision and poor preparation and follow-up for patients transferred out of Elgin.

Ability To Make Students Desire And Enjoy Learning

Some Teachers Have Success Secret

by BETSY BROOKER

Second of Three Parts

There is a secret to success in teaching that is known by few but sought by many — the ability to make students desire and enjoy learning.

The secret is what Bruce Allergott, High School Dist. 211 assistant superintendent, calls the "extra dimension." Or, as it has been coined by some teachers, the "Four F's": fairness, flexibility, friendliness and fun.

Obviously a good teacher has to know his subject. That is what he is hired for.

A teacher has to like his subject and want to share his enthusiasm with his students.

A teacher who walks into the classroom unprepared has lost the battle before he has begun.

But academic talent alone does not make a good teacher. A teacher has to like his subject and want to share his enthusiasm with his students.

But he must be careful, warn administrators, not to let his love for his subject overshadow his concern for his students.

One of the biggest problems in teaching today, says Gerald McGovern, principal of MacArthur Junior High School in Prospect Heights, is "teachers who are oriented to the subject matter but not to the kids."

When interviewing prospective teachers, McGovern looks for the candidate who is "open and spontaneous. This is the person who has a natural capacity for easily relating to other people."

Not only must the teacher care about his students, he also must be able to communicate his feeling, said Larry Jensen, principal of Forest View High School in Arlington Heights. "Lots of people care about kids. But not all of us have the ability to project this sense of honest caring so the kids can feel it."

Honesty is the key, according to Jim Wicklund, department chairman at Arlington High School. "Liking people shouldn't mean I like the fact people like me. Does the teacher want to perform and upstage the kids or does he want to teach?"

Achieving a level of honest caring requires a certain amount of self-sacrifice and maturity. You can spot a student-centered teacher as the person who doesn't talk about his class as if it were an anonymous group, but talks about individuals in his class.

GIVING ATTENTION to each individual in a class is a major factor in successful teaching. It takes time and effort, but as Ruben Conrad, High School Dist. 214 administrator, pointed out, "a teacher who chops off the lower end of his class, rather than trying to help everyone, is failing."

A good teacher, added Wicklund, does not come into the classroom with preconceived ideas about his students. "He notices the differences between individuals and notices the differences in one individual from one day to the next. And he respects the fact something has caused these differences."

This sensitivity requires a certain flexibility and willingness to adapt to change. The teacher who has it is not bound by the rigidity of tradition. He is able to move with the mood of his class without sacrificing his own integrity. And he is able to give the students certain freedoms without sacrificing his own control.

Without freedom, Wicklund said, students "don't learn to choose and end up accepting fully or rejecting fully. They can't see the gray areas in between and can't make decisions based on their own needs."

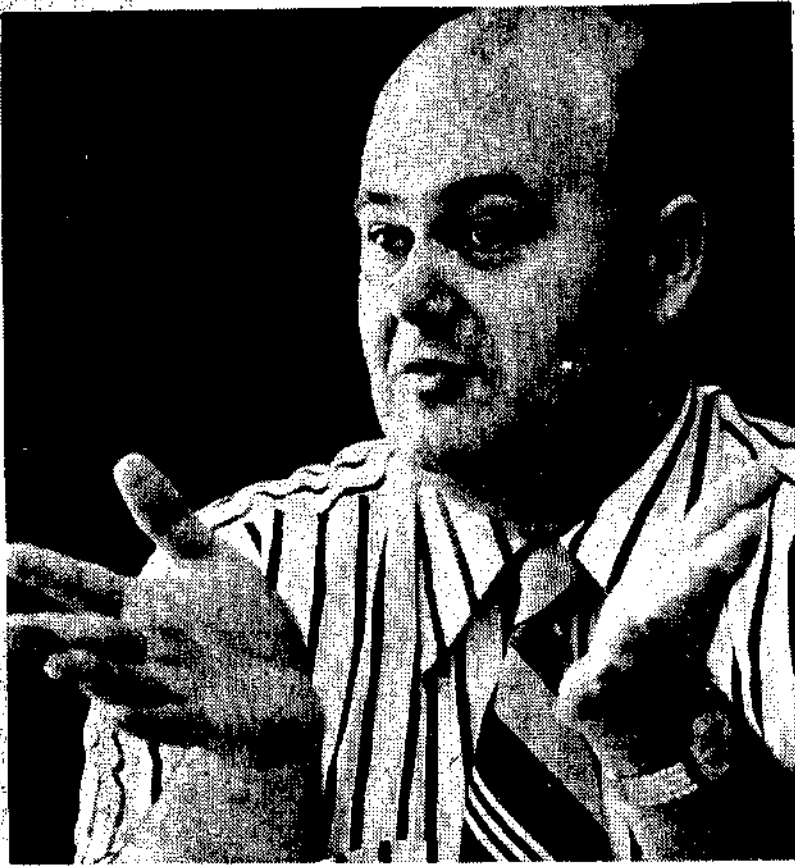

WITH FREEDOM, on the other hand, students learn to discover on their own. "Learning how to learn is imperative," said Mrs. Carol Todd, principal of Winston Churchill School in Palatine, "in an age when it is impossible to teach everything."

A classroom where students are respected and free to express individuality has a certain aura of comfort and friendliness. It's a noisy, bustling place where students are learning and having fun in the process.

Teachers who can achieve all this will join the ranks of the cherished teachers who are remembered long after a student has left the classroom. To the student, the teacher's attention means "he cares about me. He thinks I am important." And naturally, the teacher becomes important in the student's eyes.

But more than earning the students' devotion, a teacher who understands and likes both his students and his subject will do a better job of teaching.

"Teacher training courses have been terrible in the past," Gerald McGovern.

GOP Reforms Would Aid Party

The Republican Party will decide early next week how its convention is to be organized in 1976.

Sen. Charles H. Percy and Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, have expressed opposing points of view concerning broadening of delegate representation and equalizing representation of the larger states.

Both have legitimate points, but we believe it is in the interest of the GOP and the voters to arrive at a plan similar to the Percy proposals.

Crane has objected that Percy's plan would result in de facto quotas for women, youth and minority groups, much as occurred in the Democratic convention under the McGovern Commission guidelines.

He also fears that the western and southern border states would be "under-represented" and warned the party's Rules Committee against "shabby" treatment of those states where the Republican Party is showing new strength.

Finally, Crane maintains that it is not the purpose of the party to reflect the views of the entire electorate, but to represent the sentiment of Republicans as nearly as that sentiment can be ascertained.

There is merit in what Crane says.

However, Percy has pointed out obvious inequities in the number of delegates assigned to the various states. And while the number of women delegates at the 1972 convention is greatly increased over 1968, the lack of younger delegates and minority representation in Republican conventions has been plainly evident.

The Rules Committee has already recommended that women be given equal representation with men in the 1976 convention, but made no reference to other minorities.

Percy would prefer a delegate-selection formula based on state population and Republican voting strength.

In next week's convention, Illinois, with a population of 11.1 million, will have 54 delegates; Alaska, with a population of 303,000 will have 12 delegates (each has six "bonus" delegates for having carried their states for President Nixon).

So each Illinois delegate represents approximately 206,000 persons, while an Alaskan delegate represents only 25,000.

We agree with Crane that quotas should be avoided in the delegate selection process and that the party needs to encourage those states where Republicanism is growing.

However, a compromise to give the larger states their proper role in the convention and to encourage minority group participation would add vitality to the Republican party which needs to attract wider participation.

The Democratic Party, despite some shortcomings, made significant strides in broadening its base in 1972. The Republicans, as the minority party, will need all the help it can get in 1976.

Lover, Beware!

Data recently made available by the National Center for Health Statistics (NCHS) indicate that "Marriage On the Rocks" has a lot more meaning today than merely the title of an old Doris Day flick.

The NCHS, a branch of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, says that the national divorce-marriage ratio has reached an all-time high of 455 divorces per 1,000 marriages in 14 states the ratio is already above 500 divorces per 1,000 marriages.

Put another way, this discouraging statistic means that in nearly a third of the United States more than half of those entering holy matrimony will eventually be making their way out again.

What young married would pause to consider that chances of staying married are only about as good as winning at the Las Vegas craps tables — less than even money. Yet this is exactly the case.

A numerical breakdown of breakups for the first four months of 1972 goes like this: 528,117 were married and 240,409 were divorced. From the same period of the previous year marriage increased by 16,064 while divorces rose by 21,344.

In a state to state picture, California's liberal "no fault" divorce law has been cited as a main reason for the large number of divorces. The law recognizes "irreconcilable differences" as grounds for divorce. If this is true, then as more states liberalize divorce laws the proportion of divorces will continue to rise.

With all of the talk the last few years about "open marriages," "trial marriages" and just plain "shacking up" among young romantics, one would think that more couples would be sure of themselves before taking the giant step. But apparently they are not.

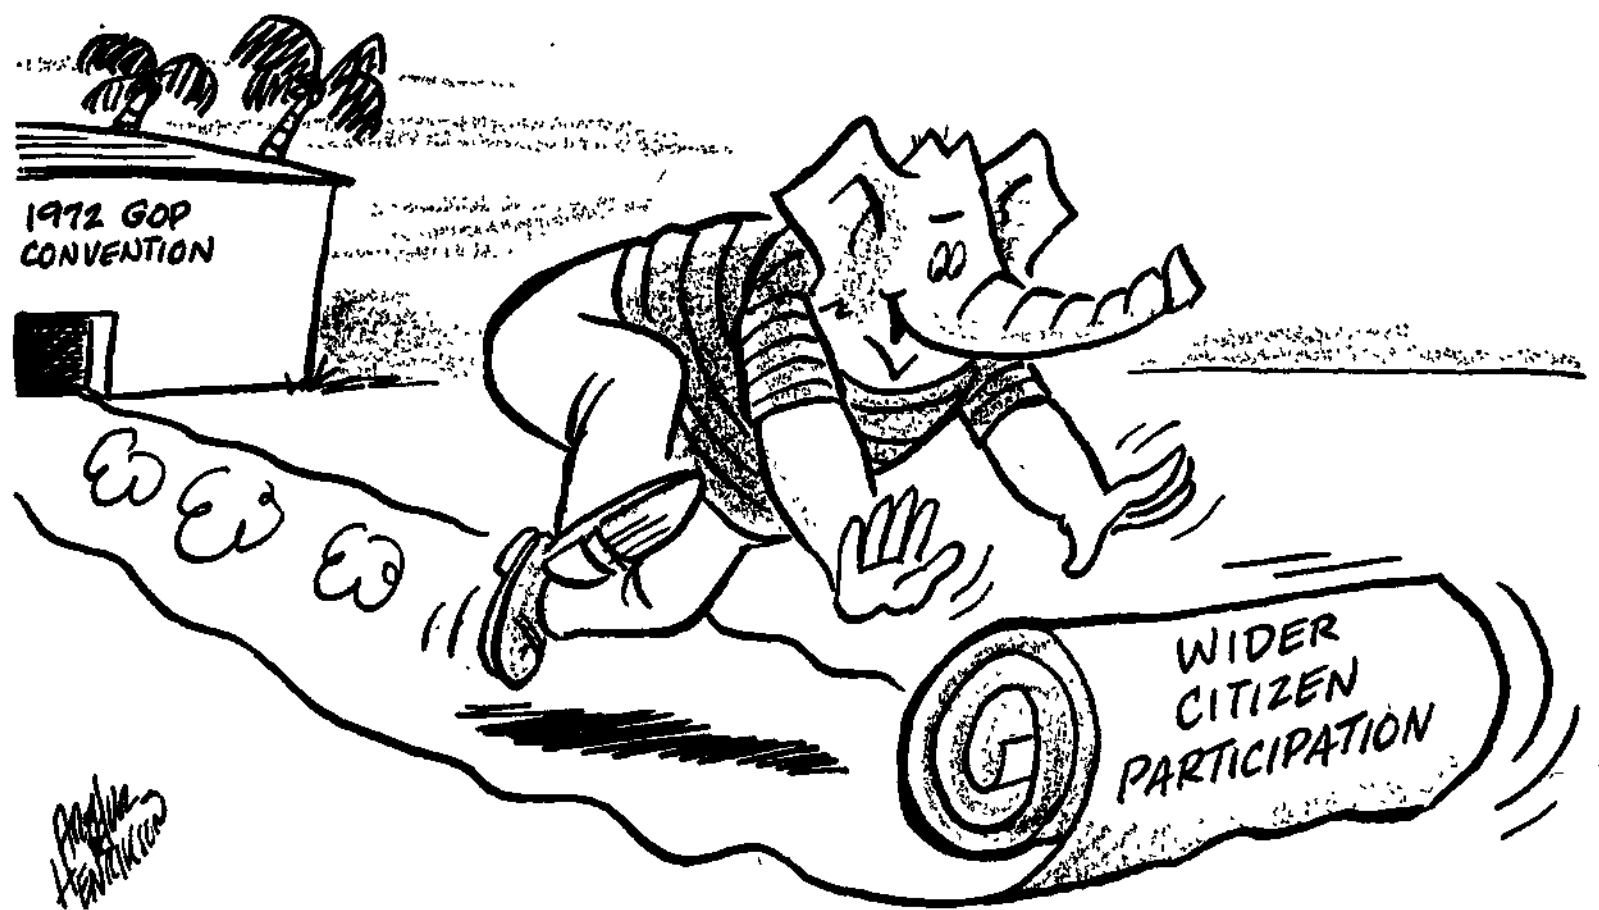

Conservative members of the older generation keep arguing to retain the familiar status quo. They wonder why youngsters seem dissatisfied with the institution of marriage as it now stands.

The recent statistics, however, unquestionably indicate that something is amiss. Many psychologists, psychiatrists and sociologists — not to mention a few downright nosy people — have voiced their own ideas about how to solve these problems. Their solutions have ranged from eliminating marriage to legalizing polygamy, or even making it mandatory.

Thus far, however, all of the proposed solutions have seemed to be less workable than our current system.

Until the real solution can be found the best advice any person can offer is Caveat amator — let the lover beware.

County Taxes Could Jump In 1973

by ROGER CAPELLINI
Metropolitan Editor

The 100 or so members of the Civic Action Program (CAP) crammed into the small gallery at the county board meeting room broke into applause and cheers.

It was an unusual sight at the county building — a group of irate and highly vocal taxpayers actually were saluting the county board and County Pres. George W. Dunne for a roll call vote taken moments earlier.

The group, led by the Rev. Leonard Dubi, had been to many county board meetings in recent months. Only two weeks earlier they disrupted the county board meeting, whistling "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and waving good and poor imitations of American Revolutionary flags.

Likening George Dunne to England's King George III, a member of CAP shouted, "Don't tread on us, George," while waving the yellow and black banner picturing a coiled snake and the legend, "Don't Tread On Me."

They were angry. They had been for some time. And they were making a habit of letting the county board know about it.

The subject of their rage was property taxes. They had testified for some time the taxpayers of Cook County were at the "saturation point." They said they were being taxed out of their homes — that the average homeowner, especially those on a fixed income, were being forced to cut back on food to pay their taxes.

They could take no more. "There will be a tax revolution," one man warned Dunne, "if there is no tax relief soon."

But that was two weeks earlier, in mid-May. Now it was the first week of June and the same people were applauding and cheering.

The revolutionary flags and homemade signs were on the floor. Gone were the shouts of derision and threats of a taxpayer's revolution.

They had won their war. The county board had just approved a resolution freezing the county taxes through 1974 — the end of George Dunne's term in office.

"This first step affirms the kind of government we want," Father Dubi said, thanking the board and Dunne for the freeze.

Dunne said he appreciated the thanks, then added, the county government "doesn't need thanks." He said, "What we're doing, we should be doing."

And the CAP members renewed their applause.

On the floor, the county board members swiveled about in their red, high-backed, cushioned chairs and nodded magnanimously.

Even Comr. Mathew W. Bieszczyk was there for the joyous occasion. Previously Bieszczyk had ducked out of the room whenever the CAP people appeared.

Dunne and several of his advisors sat behind the large, curved desk at the front of the room, smiling generously. But that was all more than two months ago.

Today there is cause to question what everyone was smiling about.

Dunne said at the time the county had not raised its tax rates in two years, so the freeze wasn't really any big thing.

But just maybe he and his colleagues were smiling for a different reason.

Monday...

EDITORIAL: The courts should not be used as a tool by politically ambitious public officials.

Maybe they knew something the rest of us didn't know.

Maybe they knew about the change County Assessor P. J. Cullerton was going to make in his assessing methods.

It turns out now that Cullerton has, in fact, changed that system. More importantly the change will result in substantial, across-the-board increases in assessed valuation.

Oversimplifying, instead of determining the assessment on a piece of property by calculating what it would cost to reproduce what exists, the assessor's office is now leaning heavily on "fair market value." Especially on vacant, undivided land.

It is expected, when all the notices of reassessment are received in Wheeling and Palatine townships within the next few weeks, that virtually every piece of property will receive an increase in assessed valuation.

Of course, if the respective taxing bodies lower their tax rates proportionately, the final tax bill to the individual need not be higher than last year.

But George Dunne and the county board merely voted to freeze the tax rate. They voted to set an upper limit on the rate at 20.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation for 1973 and 24.5 cents for 1974. The extra four cents is for election costs.

So the "tax freeze" may not be a freeze at all. If the total assessed valuation increases, as it will, the tax revenue to the county and the tax bill to the property owner will increase at the same rate.

In other words, there will be no tax freeze in Cook County unless the county board lowers its tax rate so that it ends up with the same amount of dollars it received last year.

You can bet Father Dubi and his followers will be back to the county board meeting room soon — flags and all.

And not too many people will be smiling.

Teacher Deplores 'Unruly Children'

The eyes of teachers and school personnel are on the proceedings of the Fender case. I would like to add some comments which might provoke a thought or two with the parents of the youngsters in this community. (This morning's Herald had a letter from a reader which touched on the behavior of some of the children in Arlington Heights. The writer asked that the name be withheld.)

I have taught for the past twenty years. At the present I substitute in the public and Catholic schools around here. Most of my teaching has been on the junior high level.

Our students are the products of permissive parents. There is nothing withheld from them. Look at the kids in this village who have two and three bikes as one example. No teacher would disagree with Mr. Fender's lawyer that there is a lack of discipline in the Catholic and Public schools due to the lack of cooperation from home and the concepts that some teachers imbibe — let anything go. This does not start in the upper grades, it starts early in the child's academic life and reaches full bloom in the upper grades.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Our error.

Mikva Ecology Vote Lauded

The news that the League of Conservation Voters' Congressional ecology ratings showed Congressman Abner Mikva to have an exceptionally big score nationally and to be first by a wide margin in Illinois should have special significance for those of us who are deciding whether or not he will return to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Although environmental groups have been educating the public to the danger of this planet eventually becoming uninhabitable if the present rate of air, water and land pollution continues, actual progress in this area has barely begun. The long range solution lies in the drafting and passage of specific legislation both at the national and state level, which spells out strict guidelines for uniform enforcement from which no one is exempt.

And the only way we can assure that such legislation is introduced and passed is by electing those candidates who have proved to be sensitive and committed to this most crucial issue!

She Blasts Palatine 'Improvements'

On the front page of the Palatine Herald, Aug. 10, it said, "The repaving, widening and installation of street lights included in the current plans for improving Colfax Street may bring back some of that Northwest Highway traffic" has got to be the understatement of the year. The widening of W. Colfax and future plans of widening E. Colfax will not only double the traffic but will triple it. This improvement will not bring in local traffic or business but will only serve as a short cut for the people that live in Inverness, Barrington and anyone west of us. I don't blame the property owners for not wanting to pay the assessment, they are not going to benefit, nor is anyone else that lives on or near Colfax. Personally, I would like to see the town take the money they have stashed away for this project and improve the existing two lanes. Put a sidewalk and a bike path on one side of the street, the town will save money and we will all be happy. I realize the trustees think the widening of Colfax is a feather in their bonnets but for the people that live on or near Colfax Street it is an arrow in our backs.

Word-A-Day

Demos Pull 'Power Play' on Coroner Issue

by ROGER CAPETTINI

A News Analysis

While the Cook County Board acceded to mounting public pressure in the past few years by voting to provide the voters their opportunity to do away with the coroner's office, it neatly gutted the issue of one of its major goals.

The county commissioners, in a special meeting Wednesday night, gave the voters the chance to eliminate the office when they voted to place a referendum question on the November ballot. Basically, the voters will be asked to decide if they want to retain the current coroner system or replace it with a medical examiner system.

The coroner's system in general and Coroner Andrew Toman's office in particular, have been under constant fire in recent months, and have been the subject of great controversy.

On the eve of the board action, the issue had become lopsided. Speaking in support of the referendum and, in fact, of the abolition of the coroner's office was Dr. Toman and Dr. James H. Ryan, coroner of Kane County.

Finally, almost everyone seemed to agree the coroner's office was obsolete and should be abolished. Several members of the county board expressed that opinion and the vote to place the question before the voters was unanimous.

BUT EVEN AS they voted, the county commissioners may have taken the heart out of the matter by simply changing a few words in the question which will appear on the ballot.

In addition to the criticism of the coroner's office to the effect it is archaic, inefficient and inconsequential in the administration of justice, the system has been rapped on the basis of political control.

Many of the critics are more concerned with the fact the coroner is an elective position and therefore becomes political. The feeling has been that the coroner should be a professional — not a politician — and not accountable to either political party.

The widely supported medical examiner system is headed by a chief medical examiner, which is an appointive office. That, the critics of the coroner's system claim, would take this step in the process of justice out of political control.

AS ORIGINALLY proposed by Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines at a meeting Aug. 7, the referendum, if approved by the voters would have established a medical examiner system headed by a licensed forensic pathologist. That chief would have been chosen by a commission composed of the chiefs of the pathology departments of the major medical schools in the county.

That method of selecting the chief examiner would have taken control of the office out of the hands of the Democrats, currently, or whatever party controls county offices in the future.

But County Pres. George Dunne and the rest of the Daley Democrats on the county board would have none of that.

While trying to maintain the appearance they were going along with the public in seeking to abolish the coroner's office, they succeeded in retaining political control.

Dr. Toman initiated the change when he addressed the board to support placing the question on the ballot.

Dr. Toman suggested that instead of having the chief examiner appointed by a commission of pathologists, the appointment should be made by the county board. He said, "The public should have some interest in the conduct and selection of the medical examiner."

HE SAID WITH the method of selection proposed by Fulle, there would be "a danger, in that there would be no clearly defined line of authority." That way, the coroner added, "The public will still have some voice."

Later, County Comr. John Stroger picked up the ball. He said he has long opposed the coroner system, but also opposed giving the responsibility of selection to a group of pathologists. "It only creates chaos to delegate out our responsibility to professional people," Stroger said.

Fulle argued the point with Stroger and Dunne for several minutes, but, faced with almost total control of the board by the Democrats, finally revised his proposal.

As approved by the board, the voters still will have the choice of the two systems, but if they choose the medical examiner, he will be appointed by the county board president. Additionally, he will not have to be a licensed forensic pathologist, but merely a licensed physician.

COINCIDENTALLY, Dr. Toman fits that description.

So while the board, and specifically the Democrats, gave the appearance of representing the consensus of the public, they not only did not do away with political control of the office, but actually increased that control by giving the county president direct power of appointment.

But that was not the only political power play at the special meeting of the board.

Before they finally voted, the Democrats on the board, led again by Dunne, denied a Republican the opportunity to speak on the issue.

The Republican was Donald Mulack, candidate for coroner, who has been running on the platform of abolishing the office.

MULACK, ALONG with Mrs. Mary Powers, asked the board Aug. 7 to place the question on the ballot. It was as a result of those suggestions that Fulle offered his resolution.

Mulack had reached only the seventh word of his short, prepared statement when he was interrupted by Dunne.

The board president objected to Mulack's claim that he had "brought this to the board Aug. 7." Dunne said it was Fulle and Mrs. Powers who brought it to the board, not Mulack.

As the candidate began his second sentence, Dunne again interrupted, on the same objection. Mulack said he, too, made the suggestion in addition to Mrs. Powers.

THEN IT WAS Comr. John Touhy's turn to carry the Democratic banner. With obvious hostility Touhy asked "to who" did Mulack make the suggestion. As Mulack tried to answer, Touhy said, "If you're going to come in here you better be factual."

Dunne then moved that Mulack be denied the opportunity to continue speaking, calling Mulack, "a candidate for public office using a public forum for his own selfish purposes."

Touhy said no one was trying to deny Mulack his rights, accusing the candidate of, "trying to get a platform to speak to the press."

Mulack continued, criticizing the coroner's handling of the Black Panther inquest, and was interrupted still again. When Mulack said something about waste in county government, again the Democrats renewed their verbal hostilities.

THE END CAME when Mulack said, "If you fail to act in time to meet the deadline date of Aug. 21, I will seek the help of every civic group of our community . . ."

Comr. Jerome Huppert broke in, "We are not going to accept any threats from you." Then Dunne renewed his motion to rule Mulack "out of order," a motion seconded by Democratic Comr. Charles Bonk.

Eight Democrats voted that Mulack should not be allowed to speak. Four Republicans opposed them.

Mulack sat down. He was denied his right to address the governmental body presumably because he was leaving the "meat of the issue" to interject comments favorable to his candidacy.

YET A SHORT time earlier his opponent, Dr. Toman, was permitted to go uninterrupted while defending the operation of the office under his direction for the past 12 years.

Dr. Toman outlined the office as he inherited it, told the commissioners what changes he made in procedure, and about the new equipment he purchased for the office. He spelled out the advantages and disadvantages of the coroner system and then denied that his remarks were "politically motivated."

The coroner took the time to deny his office is steeped in patronage positions, adding, "I don't even know their political views." And, he said, "To say the coroner's office is a political plum, rampant with patronage is ridiculous."

While gagging Mulack from making what he called a "political speech," Touhy said the coroner was allowed to give similar remarks because, "He IS the coroner, sir."

Defense Charges Panther Is 'Evasive'

Defense Atty. Thomas Sullivan says a Black Panther party member who has been under cross examination in the trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan for the past three days was giving evasive answers and he planned to cross examine the witness again Thursday.

Sullivan, one of several defense attorneys defending Hanrahan and 13 others against charges of conspiring to obstruct justice, told Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti Wednesday that Panther member Harold Bell's "attitude is to evade giving honest answers."

Bell, a survivor of the Dec. 4, 1969, police raid on an apartment in which Black Panther party leaders Mark Clark and Fred Hampton were killed, is a key witness because the defense alleges his courtroom accounts of the raid differ from accounts he gave a Black Panther attorney.

The conspiracy charges against Hanrahan and the 13 others stem from the raid.

Bell testified Wednesday that he purchased six guns within six months before the raid, but denied he or fellow Panthers handled weapons during the raid.

Sullivan quoted portions of a statement Bell purportedly gave to Francis Andrews, a Panther attorney, on Dec. 21, 1969, but Bell disavowed all remarks attributed to him in the statement.

Bell denied he had ever said he took a shotgun from an apartment bedroom used by Hampton and also denied handling any weapon during the raid.

He told Sullivan he bought two shotguns, a rifle, a revolver and an automatic pistol within six months before the raid and that he bought another shotgun less than one month after the raid.

Questions asked by Sullivan were so detailed that Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears interrupted to object that "the type of soft drink and whether they the Panther apartment occupants had beans or spaghetti and who prepared the foods is irrelevant."

A 'Lifer' In Education way I'm going to run the meeting," he says. "I want to represent the majority opinion of the teachers."

In preparation for the meeting the association has formed a "crisis committee" and a committee to contact community leaders served by Dist. 211. The committees, he says, are a form of preparedness.

"WE HAVE HEARD RUMORS, and they are only rumors, that the board and administration have been preparing for months for a teachers' strike. We are not going to be caught unprepared," he says. If the board has been preparing, he adds, "I question the good faith of the board in the bargaining."

The other thing that bothers Verdonek about the board's present attitude is their objection to the presence of Dave Tomchek, a representative of the Illinois Education Association (IEA), the statewide organization of which his association is a member.

"Mr. Tomchek is our employee," he says. "I, as president of the association, make out an evaluation sheet on his performance. If Dist. 211 teachers did not feel he was doing his job, he would no longer be our employee."

IN ADDITION, he strongly repudiates the view that the presence of the IEA representative means the IEA is planning trouble in 211. "No outside group is going to make Dist. 211 a battleground," he says. "This is still a local issue."

The outcome now largely depends on the meeting Tuesday. "If the teachers say they feel board policy is adequate, I will call the board up immediately and tell them their position is fine with me," Verdonek says. "If the teachers say they want specific items in the contract, I will fight forever to get those items in the contract."

Continue Questioning The Egan Brothers

Police today planned to further question two brothers who indicated they could name three men who committed the Aug. 4 multiple murders in suburban Barrington Hills.

The two, John Egan, 25, and his brother, James, 29, were arrested while allegedly burglarizing a garage on Chicago's South Side. Police said the two had been driving a stolen car.

Both were to appear in South Felony Court on charges of burglary and auto theft.

The two reportedly offered to identify the murderers of retired insurance executive Paul M. Corbett, 67, and three members of his family if the burglary charges against them were dropped.

The two Wednesday refused to take lie detector tests about the statements they made to police concerning the slayings.

Lt. Jerry Harmon of the Cook County sheriff's police, who was directing the investigation of the murders, said authorities would continue to check out information given them by the Egan, though they discounted its accuracy.

hope for the best and prepare for the worst."

He recalls his experience with unions and says simply, "The rules are the same everywhere. The employer's ultimate weapon is to withhold services. The employer can withhold pay."

Seger also realizes a moment of truth will come when the association membership meets Tuesday to discuss the negotiations. "As a union member," he says, "the thing that always bothered me was that we would have meetings and nobody came. I hope they get 100 per cent turnout of the teachers, especially on an issue this important."

Media General Contact Confirmed By Paddock

Stuart R. Paddock Jr., president of The Paddock Corporation, yesterday confirmed that Media General Inc. of Richmond, Va., has expressed interest in a possible acquisition of the suburban publishing firm.

Reports of preliminary discussion between the two corporations were published this week in Chicago newspapers, prompting Paddock to emphasize that "various statements regarding an impending sale are inaccurate."

The Paddock Corporation is holding company for Paddock Publications Inc., publishers of The Herald and eight other daily newspapers in Northwest suburbs, and Paddock Circle Newspapers Inc., publishers of seven weekly newspapers in Lake County.

"We have in the past received many offers for acquisition of The Paddock Corporation. Each of these proposals has been evaluated," said Paddock. "In similar vein, the corporation is having discussions with Media General. These discussions have not reached the stage of pricing or specific terms. No decision has been made by either party."

Media General Inc. is a diversified communications company whose holdings include a financial weekly and daily newspapers in Richmond, Va., Winston-Salem, N. C., Newark, N. J., and Tampa, Fla.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Alexander Hamilton Institute believes the stock market rally still has further to go. It notes the downturn was mild and the ratio of advancing issues to declining issues has been favorable. Most of the fundamentals are present to help boost the market the Institute says. However, the problem of inflation still exists but does not seem to be bothering investors.

The Dines Letter says the crash a lot of "superbeats" have been expecting may have already occurred with the mild dip. The market has shown a lot of improvement and appears spurred on by the Russian-United States trade agreement. Dines concludes buying pressures are "tentative and querulous," but nonetheless insistent. The summer rally should continue until Labor Day, Dines forecasts.

Although the blue-chip and quality-growth stocks have shown a lot of strength, Blyth Eastman Dillon notes there has not been a long-awaited "broad participation by better quality secondary stocks." However, it believes some underlying market strength may be developing. The firm says it is growing "increasingly confident of the improving technical outlook for the market."

by HUGH SCHMITT
PERTH, Australia (UPI) — A young Australian engineer has invented and built an orbital internal combustion engine he claims is far superior to either Wankel rotary or piston engines.

Ralph Sarich's engine has only 10 moving parts and only the crankshaft revolves, yet it is a four-stroke motor with poppet valves. Sarich says it can operate on gasoline, kerosene or diesel fuel.

In contrast to the Wankel, he says it is clean burning and its exhaust gases can be purified with a converter using cheap catalysts provided by International Chemical Industries, Ltd., that cost only $3 per 30,000 miles.

Sarich, 32, is not ready to disclose all operating details of his engine, but he said it could be mass produced for $75 and is adaptable as a replacement power plant for existing cars.

THE ENGINE looks like a turbine 16 inches in diameter and five inches thick. It weighs only 90 pounds yet produces 200 brake horsepower, five to six times the power output per pound of a conventional piston engine.

Sarich said he has had inquiries from American and Japanese auto companies but hopes to form a company and manufacture the engine in Australia with government support.

Prime Minister John T. Tonkin of the state of Western Australia said he already has promised Sarich "to provide him whatever he is short of to make the engine in Australia — millions if needed."

Sarich envisages his orbital engine also powering boats, trucks and tractors and industrial stationary uses.

The nearest he came to revealing the basic principle was to say, "It is not a rotary engine, but the power flow is rotary in that it follows a circular path." He added that the "turning moment" is maintained at or near its maximum for almost 90 per cent of each stroke, which insures near maximum torque at low speed like a steam engine.

OTHER ADVANTAGES, Sarich said, are a low noise level, a low temperature level and no critical sealing problem such as that which took engineers so long to solve in perfecting the Wankel engine. Sarich described sealing his engine as "a piece of cake."

Further details of the engine will be announced in Perth by Australia's Royal Automobile Club which will test Sarich's second prototype engine now being completed.

Sarich also is the inventor of an improved automatic transmission system. It was while negotiating with a Detroit automaker for the sale of this that he decided there was room to develop a rival to the Wankel engine. The power output of his first prototype exceeded his expectations by so much that on the first test it sheared away the flywheel location pins even at a modest speed.

Personal Finance

It's so easy to become a criminal these days that you can qualify for a stretch up the river by, for example, selling your refrigerator when you move.

Here's a plot that could get you maybe five years: You bought your refrigerator on credit and have made all but three of the 24 monthly payments. But now you're moving — selling your house.

You'd rather sell the refrigerator than ship it across the country. Fortunately, the people who are buying your house say, "Sure, we'll buy your nice, almost-new refrigerator."

They had you a check — and you've committed a crime.

LOOK AT THE fine print in your installment contract. You'll undoubtedly find a paragraph reading something like this: "Buyer shall not sell or transfer the merchandise nor remove it from the state without the express consent of the seller."

Some such clause is in every installment contract to protect what is known in legal circles as the seller's "security interest." When it says in the contract that "the seller reserves a security interest in the merchandise," what it means in plain English is that the seller has the right to repossess the refrigerator if you fail to make the specified payments.

Then, to protect this right — to make sure the refrigerator will be there if the merchant decides to come and get it — your installment contract stipulates that you may not sell it or remove it from the state. And in a number of states it is a crime punishable by imprisonment to sell anything in which another person has a security interest.

Thus, when you sell a refrigerator on which payments are still due — even though you promptly pay off the balance — technically you may have committed a criminal act that could send you to prison.

IT'S ONE illustration of many pitfalls for the unwary that are to be found in the contracts you sign when you buy on credit — and the reason why consumers are urged to observe what have been called the three Rs of buying on credit:

—Read before you sign. An appalling number of buyers sign contracts without reading them and many come to grief as a result.

—Require an explanation of every word you don't understand.

—Retain a copy of every document you sign — which means making sure, before you sign, that you're going to get a copy. An unscrupulous merchant — or just an enterprising one — can later write in anything he pleases, if you have no copy to prove exactly what it was that you signed.

Above all, never let a salesman hurry you into signing anything, with assurances that the fine print is "just the usual stuff."

Maybe he's only in a hurry to get on with it. But, on the other hand, maybe there are a special reasons why he doesn't want you to read the fine print.

The Making Of A Candidate For Governor (Maybe)

(Second of Two Related Articles.)
by MURRAY OLDERMAN

LOS ANGELES — Martin Stone is a man you catch on the run. It could be while he's out playing his daily hour of tennis in the morning. Or while he's jogging a couple of miles. Or maybe bicycling through the wine country of northern California.

He is 43, looks 33 and in between all the physical activity he juggles a full-time career as the operational head of an aggregate southern California conglomerate called Monogram Industries and total commitment as a social activist.

Just to keep busy, Marty Stone is mulling the idea of running for governor of California in 1974 on the Democratic ticket.

"I have to make up my mind by June of 1973," he says. "If I plan to run, I've done all I have to do. I know enough of the key people in the state that I have to know to put an organization together. I know a lot of them through the peace movement."

The politicization of Martin Stone began a short half dozen years ago.

"All I ever wanted to be," he says, "was a sports writer or a pro baseball player. When I went to UCLA, Frank Mankiewicz (now Sen. George McGovern's campaign coordinator) was the sports editor. Then my father told me I had to go to law school. He didn't think it was appropriate for me to play baseball. So I went to law school. In those days, when your father said you went to law school, you went."

"MY PARENTS HAD always been poor and I had this great sense of a need for economic security. From 1961 until 1965, I never thought of anything else."

He went to work, out of college, as a lawyer for a corporation which had bought a lot of small companies. "Why don't you let me run one?" asked Stone. That was Monogram. Eventually he built it into a conglomerate with sales of $150 million annually, even taking time out during one period to teach law and study economics.

"I never lifted my head up," he says. "I didn't know what was going on in the political world or any other world. My dad was a Democrat and therefore I was a Democrat. I never went to a political meeting or donated to a political campaign."

Then in 1966, Norbert Schlei, a lawyer friend who had been an assistant to Attorney General Robert Kennedy, told Marty he was going to run for secretary of state in California.

"Norbert, that's great," said Marty.

"Yeah, but I'd like you to be my campaign chairman," said Schlei.

"Me? Why me? I don't know anything about politics."

"Well, you've run a successful business. Maybe you can run a successful political campaign. Besides, I've asked everyone else and no one will do it."

"WITH THAT FLATTERING request," said Stone, "I'll do it."

Schlei lost by half a million votes, dragged down by the gubernatorial loss of Pat Brown to Ronald Reagan by a million votes.

"That got me a little interested," recalls Stone. "I began feeling the Vietnam war was ruining the country. Then Norbert had me appointed to the Democratic state central committee."

At a meeting in San Diego, the main speaker didn't show. Stone was asked to fill in. He got up and made a speech condemning the committee as hypocritical for endorsing President Lyndon Johnson's Vietnam policies, "for putting party ahead of country."

"The reaction was wild," recalls Stone. "Half got up and cheered. Half booed. Then people began calling from around the country to help round up a candidate to knock off Johnson. I agreed to be chairman of the Eugene McCarthy drive and that's how I really got involved in politics."

He worked in Ohio, New York, Tennessee, Pennsylvania and Alaska for various candidates and learned how to organize a campaign. In Los Angeles the past three years he has been head of the Urban Coalition. He was an early Muskie backer for the presidential nomination but finds George McGovern his kind of man, too, and has raised money and given parties for him. Politics has grabbed him.

"I never held elective office," says Stone. "I never ran for office in school and didn't care much for the kids who did."

"If I do it at this stage of my life, the reason is I've been deeply involved with a lot of problems — urban problems particularly. It's a challenge, and up to now I've desperately sought new challenges."

There are also negative considerations. "On the other hand," he reflects, "I've always lived a very private kind of life. I never back away from saying anything I feel like saying. I don't like kissing anybody's rear end to get his support or vote. I don't like cocktail parties or large gatherings. I like to pick my friends. It's not easy to give up."

But on the other hand, as Teyre said in "Fiddler on the Roof" — "I've got a group of people who indicate they'd support me. I've been a fund raiser, so that would be no problem."

There is, in other words, more to come in the busy life of Martin Stone.

For Tom Ventriss Directing Is A Second Profession

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Every weekday morning Tom Ventriss leaves his home in Arlington Heights and mingles with the suited commuters who daily trek into the loop.

That's one side of Ventriss. Yet it's not the most noteworthy image to local theater buffs who care little about his business endeavors but do know he will be right on time evenings to begin play rehearsals.

Directing, for Ventriss, has now far surpassed the time allotted for hobbies and has almost become a second full-time profession.

There are few theater guilds in the area that have not already utilized his talents. It's not a question of soliciting work, but of scheduling all the assignments for which he is requested.

AS RESIDENT DIRECTOR of Village Theatre for the third straight year, Ventriss will direct all three of VT's productions this season.

He is directing "Fiddler on the Roof" to be staged next month by Music On Stage and will also be working with Des Plaines Theatre Guild, Best Off Broadway and Cameo Players.

Ventriss is a relative newcomer to suburbia. Having always lived in Chicago, most recently Old Town, he moved to Arlington Heights a year ago last May after finding that the rides home following late night rehearsals were too much of a grind.

Most of his directing during the last eight years has been in this area. Deciding to accommodate his theater assignments rather than his job, he terminated his apartment lease and bought a home.

"I DIDN'T THINK I'd like commuting to work every day but really, I don't mind it at all," he said one evening, relaxing in his home.

Just back from a vacation to Mexico, a trip he makes annually for he loves the country, Ventriss was savoring one of the last free evenings he would have because local guilds are ready to jump into their new season of productions.

"Like everyone else, I started out as an actor," he said, explaining his interest in the theater. "I did a lot of summer stock, and of course, had great aspirations."

"But I got tired of New York and the rat race," he continued, "so I accepted a position teaching acting. That led into directing a workshop through the school and then I decided to give up teaching altogether just to direct."

VENTRISS' REAL livelihood, however, is through his association with Contour Chairs Co. located on Michigan Avenue. With food already accounting for, he is free to develop his avocational interest as he pleases.

Ventriss feels there is much talent in the northwest suburban area (Gone are the days when only frustrated housewives participated), and thinks a theater is needed to stage guild productions. The facilities of many school auditoriums are inadequate.

"But before you can build something you will have to have the entire village and community's support behind it," said Ventriss. "It would be necessary to have only a small intimate theater with good stage facilities."

Ventriss is probably the only person keenly concerned with the caliber of acting in the area who still has no strong ties with any group. He remains unbiased and interested only in making the particular show he is directing a complete success.

AND SO HE CAN easily say that audience attendance is hurt because of the number of different groups performing locally.

"Productions are scheduled much too close. There is no choice, but naturally, because people can't possibly go every weekend to see a play, you lose some of your audience."

What are the chances of merging?

"Sometimes you do have trouble getting enough people to turn out to work," he said, "but no one wants to give up their hard earned money. That's why I don't think there will ever be any mergers."

Ventriss has no preference directing either comedy or drama. His only request is, "I like something that fires my imagination... something in which the audience can get involved. I don't however, enjoy fluffy comedies," he grimaced, "but I do like directing musicals and good comedy... those with clever lines."

"ONE OF THE MOST successful plays I have ever directed was 'Virginal Woolf,'" he said, "but I wouldn't want to do it again. I'm afraid I couldn't capture it again."

Ventriss also enjoyed doing Village Theatre's productions "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" and "The Willow and I."

"I also loved doing the 'Fantasticks,'" he said, "and I could do 'Little Mary Sunshine' (Staged by Des Plaines Theatre Guild and Music On Stage two years ago) over and over again."

"Many of the guilds would like to branch out and do more contemporary theater, but when they do attempt something different, they receive criticism from their subscribers. That's what I don't understand," he said. "Why is it they object to paying $3 here for a show but think nothing of driving downtown and spending money to see the same thing?"

SINCE THE THEATER takes up so much of his time, Ventriss has little time for any other outside interest.

"I'm just beginning to get interested in gardening," he said, "but I haven't had the time to develop anything else. If I do have free time, I like to take part myself. Periodically taking roles helps in directing. It's easier to understand the actor's problems."

"But I'm picky," he said. "First and foremost I have to have respect for the director and when I do... then I will take any part they give me, even if it's not the lead or the one I originally wanted."

TOM VENTRISS checks the cast list for "Fiddler on the Roof," the first production of the new season which he will be directing for Music On Stage. Right on its heels will be Village Theatre's mystery thriller, "Wait Until Dark."

His Fleet Of Ships Doesn't Float

by JAMES O. CLIFFORD

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Don V. Clair stood in his warehouse among the Japanese ships that attacked Pearl Harbor and said:

"I could have had the American fleet but there wasn't much left of it."

He wasn't talking about the result of the Dec. 7, 1941, attack, but about the destruction of the American fleet in the movie "Tora! Tora! Tora!"

The Imperial Japanese Navy ships from the movie are part of his vast maritime collection, one of the largest private collections of its type in the country.

The Japanese vessels include a model battleship, a 40-foot carrier, another carrier, two cruisers and two destroyers.

"The battleship cost the movie company $75,000 to build," he said.

The working models are complete to the finest details, down to hatch covers and screens over funnels.

CLAIR, WHO BOUGHT the Japanese ships at a movie company auction, has several other famous vessels used in the movies.

The "Exodus," a little tramp steamer that smuggled Jewish refugees into Palestine in the film of the same name, sits between two of the Japanese ships.

There's also the galleon from "Ben Hur," complete with 100 oars on each side that are pulled back and forth by a motor in the hull.

"We're restoring the galleon now," Clair said. "The boats are in pretty bad shape when we get them."

In another warehouse, Clair has what he considers his favorite. It's the 39-foot pirate ship used in "The Black Swan" that starred Tyrone Power.

Clair also has the "Flounder" from "Dr. Doolittle."

"SHE'S REALLY A fun boat 'cause she's built all out of proportion," Clair said.

Submarines are lined up in a neat row, resembling a U-boat pen. These boats all flew the Stars and Stripes in their war effort. One was used in the submarine classic "Run Silent, Run Deep" starring Clark Gable and Burt Lancaster.

Clair's warehouses are crammed with other items of maritime interest, including scores of more traditional models of sailing vessels and warships. Divers' gear, pirate pistols and navigational equipment fill the rooms upstairs.

Clair said he has invested $250,000 in his collection and "now it's getting much more than a hobby, too expensive."

He has a ferryboat, the "Santa Rosa," docked in Oakland and would like to put his collection aboard her and open it to the public if he obtains city backing.

CLAIR STARTED gathering nautical artifacts shortly after World War II, in which he served in the Marine Corps.

"I went into the salvage business after the war and saved the name plaques from ships my firm broke up," he said, pointing to rows of ships' names plates hanging on a wall. "I broke up so many LST's I couldn't count them all."

"I hope some city gets interested in preserving the collection," Clair said. He insists, however, that the collection remain intact.

"Maritime museums have already wanted to buy some of the pieces but I want to keep it all together," he said.

'Status Quo Vadis'

Bruce Boxleitner's A Star

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Fairy tales usually are confined within the covers of storybooks. Yet sometimes life can unravel a good one too.

And if guardian angels do exist, the one hovering over Bruce Boxleitner should be reimbursed for working overtime.

After all, it's not a normal sequence of events for a young, unknown out-of-work actor to jump instantly into the starring role of a play that is Broadway-bound after having already broken all box office records in Chicago.

And it represents more than just a fancy meal ticket and an opportunity to appear on a few late TV talk shows for the former Mount Prospect resident.

"IT'S A CHANCE in a lifetime. It's what every actor dreams about... having such a break," said Boxleitner of his role as the poor but virile Horace Elgin in Donald Driver's hit, "Status Quo Vadis," at the Ivanhoe Theatre.

And if Bruce Boxleitner's bubble should suddenly burst, jet streaming him back to reality, "I'll be really disappointed, but I'll get over it," he said. "After all I never really expected it."

It's still all so new and unbelievable to Bruce that he humbly bounces into the interview... even after doing a show... even with a terrible head cold (which would render most actors irritable and temperamental).

He's flattered that someone would want to do a story about him and when rudely interrupted to sign a couple of autographs, he only smiles.

"It's all fun," he said. "I'm really digging it."

THE 22-YEAR-OLD actor is a graduate of Prospect High School where he won a state dramatic award for his performance in the drama, "A Man for All Seasons."

"I've always been a nutty kid with a big imagination," Bruce said, referring to his acting career. "I really stopped into acting in high school. It's about all I did. I'm afraid my grades didn't show much else."

Boxleitner received the rest of his dramatic training at Goodman School of Drama of which he is also a graduate.

"Status Quo Vadis" re-opened at the Ivanhoe June 13 after a successful extended run in Chicago the year before. Boxleitner joined the cast this spring when the satirical comedy had a six-week run at Washington, D.C.'s, Arena Stage.

This is where that guardian angel got into the act... or it pays to be in the right place at the right time.

BOXLEITNER, who had been performing with the Goodman Professional Children's Touring Company because "it was a job," auditioned last winter at the Ivanhoe for a small part in "The House of Blue Leaves."

"I was really starving," he said. His work with the touring company had come to an abrupt halt for lack of funds.

In the middle of his audition, Ivanhoe producer George Keathley interrupted Bruce to ask him to read as understudy for Horace Elgin.

"That was exciting enough," said Bruce, who had no idea at the time that the then Horace Elgin would be fired for disciplinary reasons.

It hasn't been easy. One of the most difficult aspects for Bruce has been working out several times a week to put on weight.

"Horace Elgin is supposed to be a big dude," said Bruce, who already has gone from 150 to 180 — "or I was before this cold came." He hopes to gain 30 more pounds.

SITTING IN THE Ivanhoe dining room with his girl friend, Jean, who returned with him from Washington, Bruce nursed a hot toddy and ran down the list of pills, throat lozenges and nasal drops he was using to arrest his cold.

"You couldn't tell I have a cold on stage? I can't believe it... I really can't," he exclaimed.

FORMER MOUNT PROSPECT resident Bruce Boxleitner stars as Horace Elgin in "Status Quo Vadis" at the Ivanhoe Theatre.

"It's been taking all the energy out of me. The play is great. It's fun to do when I'm in shape... but not on nights like this."

And days when Boxleitner is now worried about the state of his health, he's more than likely out enjoying the beach scene or attending a matinee performance of a movie.

"I'm a big movie buff," he said, admitting that someday he would like to be in films himself.

"IT'S HARD TO get into, particularly while residing in the Midwest," he added. "But even if I could get into films, I would also continue to do stage acting."

"Even George C. Scott and Dustin Hoffman occasionally return to the stage. It keeps you fresh and in touch with the art. With movies, it's cut, cut, cut until you've got it. There's no one out there being entertained," he continued.

When the theater is dark on Mondays, Boxleitner will often visit his parents and three younger sisters in Mount Prospect.

What do they think about his success?

"They really love it," he said. "They've brought a lot of people here to see the show."

Boxleitner will have time for a short vacation when "Status Quo Vadis" completes its run at the Ivanhoe Sept. 17. Then it's off to New York City for rehearsals in preparation for the Broadway opening of the play Dec. 3 at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre.

"I'M REALLY looking forward to New York," he said. "I hear it's not the place to live, but I've always wanted to go there."

With the raving success before Chicago audiences still warm, one might think that "Status Quo Vadis" will be a complete shoo-in.

But Boxleitner refuses to take anything for granted.

"New York audiences are overly critical if you know what I mean," he said. "We could be playing on Broadway for years and then, it might be only one night."

"A pig in a poke," my grandmother used to call something you bought without examining it first. Well, last winter, my husband bought a summer cottage "way up north of nowhere," near Duluth, Minn., sight unseen. The former owner painted glowing word pictures of a lake teeming with four-foot muskies and a cottage "filled with antiques." The latter bait was used on me, and I fell for the antiques story just as the muskie swallows a minnow.

Last January, my husband and a hardy friend took a trip to see the place, after beating a path to the door via snowmobile and snowshoes, then shoveling away five feet of the fluffy white stuff to get inside. The mercury was dropping out of the bottom of the thermometer, and he didn't linger long on his inspection tour. He "guessed maybe some of the stuff could be considered antique, sort of." I couldn't wait for the next visit — at Easter time when the weather was a comparatively balmy 30 degrees. My first impression was of cobwebs, mouse tracks and a moulting reproachful-eyed mounted deer's head over the mantel.

MY DAUGHTER AND I went through the place the way Grant took Richmond, making a heap of disposables for the local Goodwill, which practically filled the living area. We found 40 years' accumulation of typical summer cottage cast-offs: jelly jars by the hundreds, cracked plates, souvenirs from everywhere, dusty tasseled cushions from the '20s, lots of sentimental pictures with poems to "Mother," reams of old magazines and a few "sort of" antiques.

The beds were of cast iron, covered with a dozen coats of chipped paint, but redeemable. The furniture was mostly wicker, and we revamped it on later trips with shiny white lacquer spray paint. It took 24 cans. Luckily, we found a jewel of a local handyman who did some remodeling, and the place was pretty comfortable for our summer vacation.

SUMMER THIS YEAR consisted of one day in early August. The rest of the time it was brilliantly blue skies and smog-free air but chilly enough for a coat most of the time. The lake water is clear but the color of "cranapple juice," according to the kids' description, from the iron in the water. They did manage a little water skiing and boating and even swam a couple of days.

The fishing promise held true and the fishermen in the family considered the whole thing a rousing success. Surprising a doe and her twin fawns outside my window one morning made my day. We stared at each other for a few seconds, but when I turned to call my daughter, they bounded away with high, graceful ballet leaps into the pines.

ANTIQUE IN THE Duluth area was interesting; prices go up, it seems, as the temperature drops. I did find a couple of goodies, which I'll tell about next week. I came home to the big news that I am a first-time grandma, so I think I'll sit and rock a little to act the part.

The Book Stall

"THE STRANGE CASE OF BIG HARRY"

Exposition Press, Inc. $6

The author of this "true-to-life" adventure starring Central Wisconsin's mysterious ape-man lives in Melrose Park and is sales-development manager for a large chemical company. According to the dust jacket, he's really "an adventurer at heart."

One such adventure into the northern Minnesota wilderness inspired this tongue-in-cheek novel about "Big Harry," an ape-man who somehow has found his way down from the Canadian wilds into central Wisconsin where he tries unsuccessfully to make contact with his descendant, man, but learns a lot in the process.

"Big Harry" teams up with another lost soul, a Russian cosmonaut who lands in the same central Wisconsin countryside when his spaceship malfunctions. Their efforts to return the cosmonaut to Russia and the Army's efforts to find the spaceship result in a far-fetched but funny tale. And in the telling, Johnson takes a few good-natured pokes at civilized man, U. S. variety.

Pat Adam

BLACK TIDE,"

by ROBERT EASTON

Delacorte, $10

The oil-soaked bird has become the 1970s symbol of ocean pollution. Few environmental tragedies have alerted the nation to the pollution danger as have the Santa Barbara oil spills that began in early 1969.

Probably the fame and wealth of the California community contributed to the widespread coverage of the event and, in some ways, emphasized that no one, not even the rich, is immune to the fouling of our environment.

The three-year struggle by Santa Barbara people to halt the drilling is detailed here in meticulous style by resident Robert Easton, a skilled professional writer. And the elements are there for fine story telling — freewheeling, oil hungry corporations, vacillating government officials and an aroused citizenry pitted against entrenched power.

But the importance of the tragedy lies beyond the lovely Santa Barbara channel. As mystery writer Ross Macdonald, another resident, wrote in the introduction:

"The issue, as it appears to local residents, is whether their environment can be bought and sold over their objections, or whether there is an inalienable right to the use and enjoyment of air and water. It is a test case . . . which will help determine the future conditions of life throughout the United States."

Jean Hansner (UPI)

"GENTLE GREAVES,"

by ERNEST RAYMOND

Saturday Review Press, $6.95

Raymond tells a bittersweet romantic story set in London, mainly between the turn of the century and World War I, and spiced with just enough disillusionment to save it from tedium.

"GOEBBELS,"

by HELMUT HEIBER

Hawthorn, $9.95

Paul Joseph Goebbels served as chief cheerleader to Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler, and was a fine organizer, master propagandist and persuasive orator. He is worthy of a better study than this, one that explains his mind and talents.

"PLAYERS AND THE GAME,"

by JULIAN SYMONS

Harper & Row, $5.95

For a bizarre approach to plotting, few books can match this dandy exercise in mystery and mayhem. A couple of sex maniacs are on the loose and the reader will find the "game" intriguing and, believe it or not, amusing.

"ALL THE YEARS OF HER LIFE,"

Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, $5.95

The book deals with the very real problem of daughters forced to make homes for their aging parents while their brothers remain indifferent. The writing also is indifferent.

"APPOINTMENT WITH YESTERDAY,"

by CELIA FREMLIN

Lippincott, $5.50

Milly Barnes isn't her real name and she certainly didn't start out as daily help (cleaning lady) Briks Style, but her tale of terror, suspense and humor is compelling, almost to the very end.

"BEFORE THE DELUGE,"

by OTTO FRIEDRICH

Harper & Row, $10

Friedrich has written an excellent diary of a city — Berlin in the '20s, a city of Einstein and Dietrich, of anti-Semites and Russian royalists and radicals, with conditions so bad that starving girls could be had for potatoes.

"THE HERETIC PHAROAH,"

by JOY COLLIER

John Day, $9.95

This study of Akhenaten and the brief flourishing of monotheism during his reign draws on all evidence known to modern archaeology to link the pharaoh's God to that of Moses.

"THE STORY OF HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON,"

by GERARD WILLEM VAN LOON

Lippincott, $10

Hendrik Willem Van Loon, whose "The Story of Mankind" made him rich and famous, was his own most fascinating creation and his son has written a vivid, witty account of his father's life.

"A FALCON FOR A QUEEN,"

by CATHERINE GASKIN

Doubleday, $6.95

Kristy Howard treks from China to Scotland to learn the details of her brother's death in this Gothic mystery romance. Descriptions of how Scotch whisky is made are better than the plot.

Local Exhibit Of Carnival Glass

A collection of Depression Glass, the kind that used to be given away at movie theaters, packed as premiums in boxes of cereal and given as prizes at carnivals and fairs, will be on exhibit this weekend, tomorrow and Sunday, at the Holiday Inn located at 3405 Algonquin Road in Rolling Meadows. Hours of the show are noon to 8 p.m. both days.

Depression glass coincides exactly with the Great Depression. The first patterns appeared in 1929, the year of the stock-market crash, and manufacturing continued until the early 1940s. It was relatively inexpensive, mass produced glassware made in many colors and patterns.

Hazel Marie Weatherman, author of "Colored Glassware of the Depression Era" and "Foster's: It's First Fifty Years," will be one of the more than 20 exhibitors from eight states participating in this weekend's show. Some 50,000 pieces of Depression Glass will be on display. The collection is valued at more than $100,000.

Anthony "Reebop" Kwaku Baah

Rock to be good must bring forth a response from the listener — even if it is only a nod of the head. Foot tapping is even better.

One of the most primitive and most effective instruments for getting a response from the listener is the drum. Anthony "Reebop" Kwaku Baah is an accomplished drummer, for he began while playing in his native Ghana while a teen who felt there was something better than just going to school all day.

After a number of years playing with local bands and even for the government's Art and Culture, "Reebop" left for England to enroll in a physics course. It wasn't long again before he left school to play with some friends.

Eventually, "Reebop" was to go to Sweden for three years and then start playing with Traffic last year. This album, "Reebop" (Island SW-3004), was recorded both prior and after that tour.

THE MUSIC IS exciting. "Reebop", who wrote all the songs, has combined his drums with good horn section — none of this at the expense of the traditional African sounds which are interwoven.

"If You Want To Go" is particularly bright with the horns and flute. Whereas "Kye Kye Kule" would be considered the more traditional-oriented. But both manage to excite the listener, to involve him with "Reebop's" music.

Another drummer, Buddy Miles, teamed up with a guitarist last January in Hawaii. He was Carlos Santana and their album is simply called "Live" (Columbia KC 31308).

This performance, recorded in Diamond Head crater, sums up what excitement in rock is. There is no sleeper cut; all are alive and throbbing.

Standouts cuts are "Evil Ways" and

"Them Changes." But the other four, including the jam that takes up all of part 2, could easily be included too. Indeed, "energy for the universe."

A REMARKABLE fact is that neither Santana nor Miles performs here with his regular group. But the bands sound together.

But if "Live" is full excitement, "Elvis As Recorded At Madison Square Garden" (RCA Victor LSP-4776) is not.

The screams of the young girls in the audience are still there, but somehow they seem apart from Elvis' all too professional performance. He keeps telling the audience how tremendous they are; yet it is as if they needn't be there. The script calls for him to say certain things at certain times and he does.

The introduction, the much over-used "Also Sprach Zarathustra," is — in a word — sappy. Luckily the music is better. Elvis is still good, even if detached. And his attempt to mix his old hits with new material is pretty well successful.

IT DOESN'T ALWAYS work — he sounds lost with "Proud Mary" — but like "Never Been to Spain" and "Suspicious Minds" do work.

Times change and Elvis has done a good job of adapting. Can he be faulted if the past can't be recaptured every time out?

Many who buy the Hollies' "Distant Light" (Epic KE 30858) because of the hit single "Long Cool Woman in a Black Dress" may be disappointed in the rest of the album. Justifiably so. Much of the rest is a disappointment, but there are enough nice sounds scattered throughout — especially on side 2 — to make the whole thing at least worth a couple of listenings.

My favorite is "Little Thing Like Love," but maybe you'll find your own. The Hollies have kept alive a certain tradition in British rock. Be glad someone has done it.

Some of the record companies are beginning to make it easy for a buyer to determine how much of a bargain his local disc shop actually gives out on records. Both Warner Bros.-Reprise and Atlantic records have started to code the suggested list price of albums on their spines, for example 0588 means $5.98 list.

PAM NICOLAI, HEAD of Adult Services at Elk Grove Public Library, shows two young readers a few of the books on theatrical subjects purchased with money annually pre-

Masque And Staff's Check Buys Books For Library

For the fourth consecutive year, Masque and Staff of Elk Grove Village presented a check for $100 to the Elk Grove Public Library for the purchase of books relating to theater.

Selections, made by the library staff, included books ranging from costumes and stagecraft tips for young people to anthologies of dramatic works by contemporary playwrights.

Formal acknowledgment of the library's appreciation was made to the community theater group by library director Mary Clark.

Dedicated to community involvement as well as the staging of plays for entertainment, Masque and Staff over the years has made many other contributions in addition to the book gifts.

INCLUDED AMONG these were stage lighting equipment to Dempster Junior High School and an annual $500 scholarship award to graduating students of Elk Grove High School who have demonstrated excellence in theatrical activities during their four years of study.

Open auditions for parts in Masque and Staff's season-opening comedy, "Goodbye Charlie," will be held tonight in the lower level meeting room of the Elk Grove Public Library, Kennedy Boulevard and Brantwood. Readings will begin at 8:30 p.m.

The play is about an uninhibited playboy who, after being "done in" by the husband of one of his conquests, is reincarnated not in his original form but as a young and attractive woman.

The original Broadway production of the play starred Lauren Bacall as "Charlie," while the motion picture adaptation featured Debbie Reynolds in the role.

The Masque and Staff production, which will be staged Oct. 6, 7, 20 and 21, is being directed by Virginia Lobaugh.

Seek Artists To Exhibit

Area artists are invited to exhibit in Des Plaines Art Guild's 17th annual outdoor art fair Sept. 10. It is being presented in cooperation with the Des Plaines Historical Society at the museum site, 777 Lee St. in downtown Des Plaines.

Those interested in exhibiting should contact Thelma Spain, president, 236-2106, or Gerd Renner, fair chairman, 824-4694, before Sept. 1. Entry fee for non-members is $6.

There will be no admission charge to the fair that will commence at 11 a.m. and continue until 6 p.m.

Schaumburg Festival Theatre's

Weekend Of Art And Drama

Schaumburg Festival Theatre begins its new season with the drama, "David and Lisa," opening tomorrow night. Curtain is 8:30 p.m.

In the cast and crew of "David and Lisa" the youngest member is 7 and the oldest 43. Twenty adults are working with 20 teenagers and four children in producing the show.

Appearing as David and Lisa, two young people who meet in a mental hospital and learn to overcome their illnesses through each other, are Cecily Atcher and Bill Eggbeer, both of Schaumburg.

The play, also being staged Sunday, 2:30 and 7:30 p.m.; Aug. 28, 8:30 p.m.; and Aug. 27, 7:30 p.m., is directed by Raoul Johnson of Schaumburg. He is assistant professor, technical director and set designer for Loyola University.

PERFORMANCES all take place at Schaumburg Great Hall, 231 S. Civic Drive.

In conjunction with the play, Schaumburg Festival Theatre is sponsoring a Youth Art Festival tomorrow, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. More than 60 young artists are participating in the show that is being held on the grounds of the Jennings House, 220 S. Civic Drive.

A street dance for teenagers will take place in the parking lot across from the Jennings House from 3 to 5 p.m. tomorrow. Admission is 25 cents with proceeds going to the Scott Novak Fund.

Looking ahead, Schaumburg Festival Theatre has scheduled auditions for their second production, "A Thurbur Carnival," for next Tuesday and Thursday, 7:30 to 9 p.m. in Schaumburg Township Library, 32 W. Library Lane.

"A THURBUR CARNIVAL," written by James Thurber, has been described as a "revue for those with no musical talent created by America's leading humorist."

Those selected for the play will have an opportunity to play a wide variety of roles and to show their ability as "vaudevillians" who do a few soft shoe routines while delivering classic one-liners. There are major parts for six men and four women, several minor parts for either men or women and three walk-on roles which can be cast with older teenagers. Directing the production will be Sonja Lerasas of Schaumburg.

Auditions are open to anyone interested in community theater. Further information is available through 894-2380.

Which Harry's?

PARIS (UPI) — The first Harry's Bar made famous by Ernest Hemingway and his set, was established in Paris, but there are well-known copies in Venice, Milan, Rome and Florence.

Actually, Venice's Harry's Bar is the best known and was named for Harry Pickering, an alcoholic from Boston who put up the money with which Giuseppe Cipriani opened the bar-restaurant in 1931.

Entr'acte

Gilbert and Sullivan fans will have the opportunity to see and hear two operettas being presented by the Savoy-Aires, the North Shore Gilbert and Sullivan Company, when they stage "Trial by Jury" and "The Sorcerer" at Niles North High School, just west of Old Orchard Shopping Center, Sept. 6, 7, and 9.

Frank Miller, music director and co-founder of the group, is the principal cellist of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and director of the Evanston Symphony. He will conduct both operettas with the Evanston Symphony Orchestra in the pit.

THE CAST FOR "The Sorcerer" includes two local residents, Margaret Donesotes and Carolyn Papai, both of Palatine.

The Savoy-Aires Company founded eight years ago expressly to produce Gilbert and Sullivan Operettas. This is the first time that they have attempted a double billing.

This year marks the beginning of the 23rd consecutive season of live theater entertainment presented by Village Theatre of Arlington Heights. Announcements of the coming season and subscription forms were mailed to local residents this week. Season ticket holders are offered first choice of reserved seats at below box office prices. This year, Village Theatre will present four productions including one children's show.

Interested theatergoers who have not received the subscription brochure are asked to contact the Village Theatre box office, 250-3300.

Edgar Meyer, a Des Plaines resident, appears as Father Mithala in "Status Quo Vadi," the comedy that has been extended through Sept. 17 at the Ivanhoe Theatre, 3080 N. Clark St., Chicago.

The laugh-bit has become the longest running show in Ivanhoe Theatre history and will hold a record of 43 weeks in Chicago.

MEYER JOINED the "Status" company in Washington, D.C., during its six-week engagement at the Arena Stage. The Des Plaines actor has appeared in both leading and character roles in theater, TV and film. He was nominated for a Joseph Jefferson Award for Best Supporting Actor in Chicago in 1970 for his appearance with John McGiver in "The Biggest Thief in Town," also staged at The Ivanhoe.

In summer tours he has appeared with Robert Cummings in "Gertrude" and with Betty Grable in "Born Yesterday." He was with the national touring company of "Harvey" with Shirley Booth and Gig Young, and recently completed an engagement with Douglas Fairbanks Jr. in "The Pleasure of His Company" which played in Florida and New Jersey.

Meyer's interest in directing led to the stage revival of "On Borrowed Time" with Andy Devine in Milwaukee's Swan Theatre.

Over 100 artists participated in the recent Arlington Heights art fair held at the Arlington Market.

Receiving cash awards totaling $500 were in the oil and acrylic category: Betty Harrigan, Arlington Heights first; Evelyn Mitchell, Mount Prospect second; and Berdele Wendt, Mount Prospect third.

PLACING IN watercolors were Donald Ellwanger, Des Plaines, first; John Rudin, Oak Park, second; and Elaine Olsen, Arlington Heights third.

Eleanor Markusen of Racine, Wis., took a first place in mixed media.

JOHNNY PULEO and his Harmonica Gang are opening Monday in the Blue Max show lounge of the Hyatt Regency O'Hare. Appearing with the comedy team will be songstress Alma Balier. Their engagement will continue through Sept. 2.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Metropolitan Museum will open its galleries for the first time to movie crews for the filming of "From the Mixed Up Files of Mrs. Basil E. Frankweiler," starring Ingrid Bergman.

The Westfall Productions film is based on Emily L. Konigsberg's 1968 novel about two runaway children who hide out in the Met.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dick Shoberg, a new young face in the cast of NBC's "Somerset" daytime serial in the role of Mitch Farmer, is a successful male model, and one look at him on the television screen is enough to make you understand why. Hails from Grand Rapids and Cedarville, Mich.

"The Bold Ones" series on NBC shifts from Sunday nights to 9-10 p.m. Tuesdays when it begins its fourth season in September.

ABC has added the Bing Crosby Pro-Am Golf tournament to its impressive 1973 golf tournament list. Twelve major meets will be screened. The Crosby coverage is on Jan. 27-28.

CBS has scheduled coverage of the finals of the annual Brunswick World Open bowling tourney to Nov. 25 at 4:30 p.m., coming from lanes in Glendale Heights, Ill. Champions from a number of foreign countries will compete with American pros for the top prize of $12,000.

ABC points with pride to the fact that two of the films in its "Sunday Night Movie" series in the 1972-73 season will be such comparatively recent theater giants as "Goldfinger," starring Sean Connery as James Bond, and "Patton" with George C. Scott portraying the colorful and controversial World War II general.

Night Out

Oldies From The '30s Sung In The Towers

by GENIE CAMPBELL

The new faces at the TOP OF THE TOWERS penthouse restaurant are all youthful, but in spite of the group's age, time backs up several decades as VI PARK EAST provides sentimental tunes of the '30s and '40s.

For the six vocalists, age does not appear to be a deciding factor as they have no trouble in recreating songs that were written long before they were even born.

In spotlighted solos or altogether, strains of nostalgia easily dazzle the middle-aged members of the audience who have no trouble in identifying with Rudy Vallee, the Mills Brothers or the Ink Spots, all big names of the '30s and '40s.

But anyone born after that period will not acutely appreciate such numbers as "Paper Doll," "Mairzy Doats" and "In Old Shanty Town." Even so, MARC EMBREE does a good job alone with "Begin the Beguine" and leader of the group, MARK PALMQUIST, does the same with "I'll Be Seeing You."

Those who prefer to remain in the present would do better to catch the second evening show by the VI Park East that concentrates on contemporary numbers including many current Broadway show numbers.

Other members of VI Park East are LINDA CLAYPATCH, ROD ESSIG, HELENE WESTIN and LIZ BOWE. Backing up the vocalists are WALT CLARK on drums and RALPH KRATZER on piano.

JUDY ANDREWS AND THE NEW EXPERIENCE will be shortly winding up their engagement in the TACK ROOM show lounge located on the ground floor of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel. Closing date is set for Sept. 2.

And if you haven't been out yet to catch her show, you're missing something.

Judy's medley of songs includes both popular tunes and ones not in the Top Ten but they sparkle anyhow, like "If You Could See Me Now," backed by EARL CONRAD (who lives in Hoffman Estates) on the banjo. In between songs, Judy's outgoing personality keeps the show on an upswing and ties everything together.

Besides Earl on the guitar and banjo, Judy has a lot of help from LARRY BRENT on piano and LARRY STOLE on drums.

WVFL, Radio 104, in conjunction with the Crocker Theater in Elgin, will be presenting a special midnight showing of the movie, "The BOSTON STRANGLER." The showing is tomorrow with $1 admission per person.

Actor-comedian DAVID STEINBERG is returning to Chicago for a two-night engagement at the MILL RUN THEATER on Friday, Aug. 25, and Saturday, Aug. 26. He's appearing in tandem with singer JACKIE DE SHANNON.

"COMPANY," the Broadway musical about love and marriage, opens its Chicago premiere at the FORUM THEATER next Thursday.

The New York Drama Critics' Circle voted "Company" the best musical of the season.

"JACK AND THE BEANSTALK" opens at the MILL RUN CHILDREN'S THEATER in Niles tomorrow. It will continue on stage Saturdays at 1 p.m. through Oct. 1.

It was recently announced that "SOMETHING DIFFERENT" has now been extended at the COUNTRY CLUB THEATRE in Mount Prospect through Sunday, Oct. 1.

Dear Dorothy: A close Ohio friend wrote to her congressman with regard to the elimination of yellow jackets which had become a real danger to her family. A scientist with the Agricultural Research Service of the USDA suggested a new trapping method so unusual your readers might like to hear about it.

This trap consists of a 10-inch pie tin of water to which a small amount of detergent has been added. Suspended over this, about a half-inch above the water-level on a small wire stand, is a swatch of cotton or paper towel which has been doused with either of two innocuous chemicals — heptyl butyrate or octyl butyrate. These are used as flavorings for ice creams, beverages and so on, and attract yellow jackets. Folded one-quarter inch hardware cloth makes an excellent stand.

Since a yellow jacket dives in flight, when arriving at the bait, it usually becomes trapped in the detergent water and drowns. The traps should be placed three to four feet above the ground, preferable in a sunny location open to any breeze. To reduce chances of being stung, baits should be placed out after dark or before dawn — Mary R.

Have never heard of this one but there's no doubt that insects are attracted or repelled by certain odors.

Dear Dorothy: With regard to the non-absorbency of bath towels, if a small amount of white vinegar is added to the last rinse water, suds residue is removed, the article becomes cleaner and absorbency is renewed — F. W. Clark.

Dear Dorothy: Our piano is completely covered with a kind of "checked" or "cracked" finish. Is there something we can do with this condition? — Louise M.

Sorry, but professional refinishing of the entire surface is the only remedy for this.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have an 85-year-old spinster sister living with me. She has always been a very religious, truthful person until last year. She tells of visiting people and that the children stop and tell her they love her and there isn't a word of truth in it. Not only that, if anyone tells a story, she can always top it. A friend told of being in a tornado that did a lot of damage to his house, and she told him that she was in one that blew her out in the front yard. She never tells the truth any more. She accuses people of stealing things and hides things. What happens to a person's brain that makes them get like that? A doctor gave her a checkup a year ago and found nothing physically except a little anemia. Will it help if I tell her she is wrong? I don't believe she would believe it as she's very strong-minded.

Dear Reader — This is one of the sad aspects of later years. A number of older people will develop distinct personality changes. The courteous, gentle spoken minister, for example, may suddenly develop a violent temper and curse his wife and loved ones using language his family didn't even know he knew.

In women this occurs gradually and isn't always directly associated with disease of the arteries. In men it's more apt to occur suddenly. A number of these episodes are caused by disease of the very small arteries in the brain. They will impede the circulation parts of the brain which causes the changes in memory. This is a very serious problem because most individuals with this difficulty are unaware that anything is wrong.

Some of them will have hallucinations which is part of what you're describing in reference to your sister.

There is not very much that can be done about this problem except to understand it. When we learn more about the aging process, perhaps these problems can be prevented. Since a large number of these are associated with fatty deposits in the arteries to the brain (atherosclerosis), this is one of the strongest arguments I know for a preventive program against atherosclerosis. In some ways, it's more important than preventing heart attacks which are caused by the same process, only it's the arteries to the heart that are affected. Sometimes with small strokes the change in personality is abrupt rather than gradual.

Older individuals even with these problems seem to do better in familiar surroundings and you're quite right it doesn't do any good to correct people with this type of problem. About the best thing to do is to reassure them and give them as much loving support as you can during such an unfortunate period of their lives.

33-Team Field Challenges Golden Acres CC Sunday

by PAUL LOGAN

A decade ago a team from St. Raymond's took all the glory.

A half dozen summers ago it was a Tioga VFW team that turned the trick.

Late Sunday afternoon — barring pesky weather — the third championship team will be crowned at Golden Acres Country Club, site of the 23rd annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament.

A field of 33 teams, two more than the all-time high of last year at Buffalo Grove Golf Club, will be on hand to challenge two of the nines on this 27-hole layout — the Red and the White courses. Mixed foursomes will begin teeing off simultaneously on both courses beginning at 10 a.m. (See teecoff schedule elsewhere in the sports section.)

The Red Nine appears to be the toughest of the two tests. Slightly longer (165 yards), the Red has more out of bounds possibilities. Water also comes into play a little more, especially since the summer's heavy rains have bloated the ponds and creeks.

"With wet conditions, the course is going to play a lot longer," warns Lew Janis, the course professional. If all the tee markers are moved back, the 18-hole layout measures 6365 yards and a par 72. A few days of dry weather, however, and quite a few of the holes will shrink in size.

Janis says the best birdie hole on the White is the eighth, a 265-yard par 4.

"It's a nice short breather type par 4," says Janis. "There are not many problems. In other words, if your tee shot is slightly to the right, you'll get past the mound. You'll catch it if you hook the ball too much."

If you do post a three on the eighth, you might need the extra stroke saved on the ninth.

Janis tabs the sixth hole on the Red course as being the most demanding. Running adjacent to Roselle Road, this 440-yard test will make slicers sweat every step of the way because of the out of bounds. Then there's a creek guarding the approach with ponds and weeping willows behind and on the left of the green. Also, a large green with subtle breaks can make a 10-foot putt tougher than you might think.

The par 4, 320-yard fourth hole is the easiest, according to Janis. If your drive stays to the right, it's a short pitch and a put.

Although the scorecard lists quite a few short par fours and fives, Janis doesn't think the golfers will romp over the course.

"You've got some easy type holes and yet you can still get mixed up," says this veteran club pro. "Most of the greens have a lot of undulation."

When golfers need to take a break, a halfway house full of hard and soft refreshment along with plenty of food is located in the center of the course. There is also a grill next to the pro shop in the basement of the clubhouse.

Golden Acres is located about a half mile south of Highway 72 and about a mile south of Highway 58 on Roselle Road.

WHEN THEY LET the kids play baseball, it was quite a show.

They finally settled the state legion tournament Wednesday afternoon, and you can't pack much more drama into a single baseball game.

It was a deserving, stirring victory for a fine Arlington Heights team that just didn't quit after painfully watching a seemingly comfortable lead slip away.

That championship game had to prove one thing to the fans who sat through 12 tension-packed innings. American Legion baseball is for the kids, not the adults. When they let the boys play, it's a fine show.

What transpired prior to that Wednesday showdown in Arlington Heights often bordered on the absurd. The adults took the game from the boys and played their own little games. It was pathetically comical at times. You didn't know whether to laugh or cry.

The word "protest" was banded about so many times over that week I was never quite sure who was protesting what — or why. You became fearful that no game would wind to a conclusion without a protest.

The high-caliber performance on the field was often overshadowed by the performance off the field, the backstage huddles, the whispered threats and counter-threats, the telegrams, long distance calls, consultations about the rule book.

I expected columnist Jack Anderson to walk in at any time, pencil and pad in hand.

The staging of the tournament was excellent. The weather admittedly hurt with a couple bouts with the rain, but Gene Sackett and his committee did a great job under demanding circumstances. It's extremely unfortunate that all this arguing had to take some of the glitter away from this sparkling attraction.

You try to do a good job and bring some fine baseball to the area, and the whole show gets bogged down in annoying red tape that should have been taken care of before the first pitch was thrown.

You can't fault the people who brought the tournament to Arlington Heights. They weren't calling the shots on the protests. They were there to stage a tournament, and they did their part.

The major protest of the week was legitimate. You certainly don't want ineligible players in any tournament, but it does make you wonder how closely some of these rosters are examined before a tourney even begins.

If they weren't examined closely by people who know what they're doing, then somebody is very remiss in the proper delegation of authority.

It just boggles the mind that a team such as Chicago Giles could advance through a Cook County tournament and two games of the state before anyone spotted an ineligibility.

The athlete in question was a pitcher with a pretty solid high school reputation, not some kid who threw a couple innings in April on an obscure Chicago field with only his girl friend in the stands.

There obviously has to be a better way of verifying the eligibility of tournament players, a better way of examining the rosters, checking the schools a team draws from.

The coaches at the state didn't see the rosters of the competing teams before the tournament began. Wouldn't it seem logical that the coaches should have copies of the rosters and be allowed some examination on their own before a tournament opens?

Coaches remember names, schools. Maybe nobody will spot an irregularity, but they at least should have a chance to check rosters, ask some questions. They should meet with a roster committee before the first pitch is thrown, not two or three games later.

There were some minor but annoying gripes at the state. People were getting excited about the strangest things. Even the umpires got into the act, arguing among themselves about the color of the shirts they were wearing.

Did you also realize you have to have your uniform numbers a certain size? I haven't really figured out why yet.

With all the other problems, it's staggering that someone actually questioned the size of the number on some uniforms. My eyes aren't that great, but I certainly could read them on all teams. It's not like I was sitting in the top row of the Houston Astrodome.

Frankly, if a team looks presentable in whatever uniform they choose to wear, the size of their numbers hardly seems worthy of debate.

On Saturday an obscure substitute, finally getting his big chance to play in a tourney game, walked to the plate and the opposing coach immediately marched from his dugout and said he was protesting the game. The boy apparently didn't have a proper emblem on his sleeve.

Don't get me wrong. Rules should not be ignored, but there are limits to everything.

Common sense must also dictate at times. If you get so mixed down in petty details, you completely lose sight of what you're trying to achieve with the American Legion program.

Let the kids play baseball.

With all the problems and headaches, the tournament ended Wednesday on a high note with a superb display of baseball and a very worthy champion in Arlington Heights.

Hopefully, there were some lessons learned over this long week.

Richmond Next Stop For Arlington Team

Pairings for the Great Lakes American Legion Regional tournament at Richmond, Ind. have been announced. Arlington Heights, by virtue of its state championship which it wrapped up Wednesday with a 5-4 victory over Belleville in 12 innings, will be one of seven regional entries.

The Ohio and Wisconsin state champs will get the tourney underway at noon this Wednesday. Arlington Heights will take on Indiana at 4:00 and Kentucky will meet the host Richmond post at 8:00 under the lights.

If Arlington wins its first game, it must return Friday at noon to take on Michigan, which has a first-round bye. If Heights loses its initial contest it will play Saturday at noon.

Barring rain, the tourney is slated to run six days, through Monday, Aug. 28. The winner will advance to the national playoffs at Memphis, Tenn., starting Thursday, Aug. 31.

Richmond is located on Route 40, just south of Interstate 70, on the eastern edge of Indiana. It is approximately 275 miles from Arlington Heights and 60 miles east of Indianapolis.

"STARS" DO NOT A PENNANT MAKE

Dear Sirs:

I'm tired of hearing about how lucky the White Sox are and how they don't have a lineup of pennant caliber. It takes something more than just so-called All-Stars at every position. The floundering Cubs have proved that since their collapse in 1969. It takes the blend of youth and experience, a manager who knows how to utilize everyone and keep everyone happy, a strong coaching staff, and a strong front office organization. It's very tiring to have a team picked apart position by position when they're batting first place. If this late in the season a team is good enough to be in a pennant fight, more power to them. So the White Sox have obvious weaknesses. So what? Their strengths obviously overshadow these weaknesses.

POOR JUDGMENT

Dear Fans Forum:

Sometimes these guys who give sports on the radio disgust me. Last Saturday I tried to find out the White Sox score on WBBM radio about 9 in the morning and when they gave the sports, they led off with the Cubs' meaningless win over New York and then gave the National League scores before even getting into the White Sox game with Oakland, certainly the most newsworthy game in Chicago. They did the same thing Monday morning after casually leading off with the Sox on Sunday. But on Monday they started with the Cubs again just because they won another who-cares game from New York. Obviously the guy who writes those Saturday and Monday reports needs a course on news judgment.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

Dear Sirs:

First of all I'm going to admit to being a Sox fan, but that doesn't matter in what I'm going to complain about.

Although the Cub-Sox game last Monday was played to help poor kids and cancer research, the money from the game (approximately $100,000) could have been raised with several pre-season games prior to the start of the season.

The reasoning is obvious — both teams needed the day of rest, especially the Sox. Being in the thick of the divisional race as the South Siders are, such a game can only wear down a little more. This is especially true because they had just flown in from Oakland where they were involved in two extra inning games, one of them going 19 innings (more than two full games)!

Cubs fans might say that this is just an excuse for the 3-1 loss, but the Sox used the game to test some potential players who weren't on the roster. Their two hitting stars — Dick Allen and Carlos May — didn't play more than an inning.

Back in 1969, Leo Durocher was blasted for talking about resting his starters during this game. Instead, he buckled under the pressure and used them. Being involved in the race as they were, that extra game had to hurt a little.

FAN: GOD'S LIGHTS NO GOOD

Dear Sirs:

It seems to me that an American Legion State Tournament should be played on a lighted baseball diamond. Last Sunday Arlington Heights had to play a game at 9 a.m. This is inexcusable to me. Here's the area team — the best money draw in the tourney — playing at such a terrible hour. Most good Christians are about to or are worshipping God at that time.

From reading the article on the game, I missed a good one. But being away from my family all week necessitates being home on a Sunday morning. From what I understand, only a couple hundred saw the game, but can you imagine the number had it been played at 8 p.m. instead? I'd venture to guess that a thousand would have turned out.

In such a wealthy area as the Northwest Suburbs is, you'd think that there would be at least one hardball diamond with lights. We need it more than another hockey rink, village officials!!!

SOX BLACKED OUT

Dear Sirs:

Many Sox fans, including myself, were outraged when the team's regular television station WFLD (Channel 32) failed to televise the recent crucial series at Oakland. This was the most important series for the Sox in five years and the biggest for either Chicago team in two years — and no TV whatsoever for four games. It was a double crime because three of the games were thrillers.

Before WFLD's following broadcast, they used the excuse that Oakland did not have adequate equipment to borrow and Channel 32 could not transport its equipment in time. I'm not sure if this is a valid reason or not, but the Sox play in Oakland again in September and I'm sure that series will be even more important. The station has plenty of time before then to make special arrangements, so they had better have the games on. If they don't, they aren't worth two cents.

P.S.: Could the blackout have anything to do with the fact that WFLD's contract with the Sox ends after this season?

Woodfield Babe Ruthers Earn State Tourney Spot

In its first year of existence, the Woodfield Babe Ruth Baseball All-Star team for boys 13 years old advanced all the way to the state tournament before finally bowing out. Woodfield defeated Barrington 6-2 and Antioch 2-1 in district play before losing to Hometown 10-5 in the opening round of the state tourney.

Woodfield began its journey to the state finals by trouncing Barrington at Barrington High School. Jeff Infusino struck out three batters in recording the victory and was aided by Steve Stompanato triple Woodfield registered a four-run third to take a permanent lead. The winners collected 10 hits to only four for Barrington.

Against Antioch, the accent was on pitching and defense as each team managed only one hit. But Woodfield tallied in the first and the second by taking advantage of defensive lapses by the Antioch catcher. Stompanato and Tim Harkness crossed the plate with Woodfield's only runs on a pair of passed balls.

Kevin O'Shea was credited with the mound victory as he fanned five and issued five passes. This win gave Woodfield the district title and allowed them to advance to the state tournament at Milan, Ill.

SCORE BY INNINGS

Woodfield 110 000 x-2-1-1
Six errors and 13 bases on balls led to Woodfield's downfall in its first game at Milan. Both Woodfield and Hometown had drawn hives in the first round so were actually only two games away from the state championship in the single-elimination tournament.

Infusino started on the hill, working 3 2/3 innings and striking out five while walking seven before yielding to O'Shea. O'Shea went two innings with two "K's" and five walks. Jim Fogerty finished up, working 1 1/3 innings and fanning two while issuing one free pass.

Down 10-1 heading into the bottom of the seventh, the locals tried to put on a comeback. Mike Clausen and Don Rippeley both reached on Hometown errors and Infusino drove one in with a base hit. Then O'Shea drove in two runs with a single, stole second and stole third.

Harkness fanned but Fogerty walked, pilfered second, and both runners tallied when Mark Tomljanovich singled. But the rally ended when Art Kowalski and Bill Fairbanks both went down on strikes.

SCORE BY INNINGS

Hometown 011 413 0-10-4-2
Woodfield 000 100 4- 5-4-5
The members of this highly successful Woodfield Babe Ruth All-Star team were:

From the Schaumburg Cardinals, Jim Fogerty, Mike Clausen, Mark Tomljanovich and Bill Fairbanks. From the Hoffman Estates Yankees, Tim Harkness, Brad Danner, Steve Stompanato and Greg Wales. From the Schaumburg Athletics, Bob Connell, Kevin O'Shea and Jeff Infusino. From the Hoffman Estates White Sox, Art Kowalski and Don Rippeley.

(UPI Sports Writer)

THE BOWERY (UPI) — They're strictly neutral down here. They couldn't care less who wins, Bobby Fischer or Boris Spassky.

Most Bowery residents don't even know the two are playing up there in Teykjavik.

Some do, though.

"Chess reminds me of baseball," said one of them. "Too dull. See, they make 27 moves in 3½ hours. That would drive me outta my cotton-pickin' mind. I like continuous action. I like to go, go, go all the time."

The derelict who made those remarks isn't really going anywhere. He can't. He has no left leg and no right foot. Frostbite took both. That's what comes of sleeping on sidewalks too long in sub-freezing weather.

This particular derelict's name is Frank — "I'd rather you don't use my last name because I have a brother and sister back in South Dakota and I've still got enough common decency left not to impose on them."

The temperature was in the mid-80's when we talked, hot enough for most men to be walking around in their shirt-sleeves, but Frank was bundled up in a grease-stained trench coat chiefly because that constitutes the nucleus of his wardrobe and if he gets rid of it now, he'll be all done in this winter.

Frank sat with his back up against an ancient tenement building and talked a little about sports on the Bowery.

"The reason I like football more than baseball is because there's more action," he said. "I like anything with action to it."

Does he like life on the Bowery?

"No," he came right back.

"It's like baseball. Too monotonous."

How long has he been on the Bowery?

"Twenty-one years," he said.

If it's so monotonous, why does he stay?

"The thing I like about this place is that you can go where you like, do what you want and nobody asks you any questions," he said.

"Look at these," he went on, thrusting out his hands. "They're all cut up and filthy. Dirty hands, no shave. I'd be embarrassed going uptown looking like this. I still have feelings. Down here though, you're one of the boys. They're in the same predicament you're in. Nobody feels superior."

Farther down the Bowery, six other derelicts were grouped in a semi-circle, five of them slumped against a brick wall and the sixth stretched out on the pavement looking stone cold dead on the sidewalk.

"He's okay, he's only resting," said one of those in the group. "He hadda little too much of that California White 'Port wine. Care for some? Oh, sports. Damn right we're interested in the ball games down here. Sex, no, but sports, yes. Ain't that right fellas? I'm from Chicago myself and shot pool once with Willie Mosconi. Honest. But you oughta talk to Elmer over there. He played some football."

Elmer had one of those short haircuts and the general appearance of a man who might have once been an athlete. He has missed a few meals lately though because some of his bones protrude. Elmer said he was 57, had spent 20 years on the Bowery was originally from Wyoming and had been looked at by the Pittsburgh Steelers after having played college ball in Missouri.

"I've always loved football, particularly pro football," he said. "I follow it, whenever I get a chance. They've got some sports-minded guys down here on the Bowery but most of them are too opinionated, they never listen to what you've got to say."

"Me? Elmer shrugged, looking a little forlorn in his begrimed peach-colored shirt which didn't quite match his baggy, paint-smeared khaki trousers. "Like I say, I try to follow the pro football teams, but I've really got nothing. I'm doing nothing, and going nowhere. I used to run pretty good, but can't anymore. Emphysema. I can't even walk up the steps. All I'm really doing is waiting to die."

Rifles Start Regular Slate Saturday

The Lake County Rifles ended their exhibition season with a perfect record by winning their third game, 20-0 against the Racine Raiders Saturday night in a game played in dense fog for the last three quarters.

The Central States Football League season will start this coming Saturday with the Rifles traveling to Rockford to play against the Rockford Rams, league champions.

The first two scores against Racine were made by Dennis Duncan, the Rifles star running back. In the second quarter he went two yards through right guard to score and a three-yard plunge in the third period gave the Rifles their next touchdown.

Unfortunately very few fans saw Duncan's second score because of the fog and it was five minutes after the score that the field announcer was able to identify the player who made the touchdown and the circumstances that led to it — a bad pass from center on a punt attempt that sent the ball sailing over the head of Ray Danoski who recovered it on the three-yard line where he was tackled.

In the fourth quarter John Dobbs passed to Ron Jurewicz on a 22-yard pass play. Another bad pass from center set up the score when the Racine punter again had to chase after the snapped ball.

On the scoring play the Rifles receivers went into the end zone, Jurewicz delayed coming out of the backfield and went five yards past the line of scrimmage where he took a low pass from Dobbs and then ran 17 yards into the end zone untouched, apparently because the Racine defenders were unable to see the play.

The 1,920 fans who saw the game, almost a Rifles record for an exhibition game, were treated to another excellent defensive effort by the Rifles including a goal line stand. The Rifles gained 294 yards against 100 for their opponents and made 14 first downs against five for Racine.

The game was marked by excellent punting. The Rifles averaged 43 yards on three kicks while Racine averaged 48 yards on six punts. Some of the yardage was due to the receivers letting the ball drop and roll backward because they were unable to see the ball while it was in the air.

However, a 65-yard kick early in the game by Danoski when vision still was good put the Rifles in a hole. The first quarter was a defensive battle with the Rifles failing in several attempts to sweep both ends. Racine was unable to gain a yard until three minutes were left in the quarter when Lee Rice threw a 16-yard pass to Cleveland Bowman near the midfield stripe.

Racine moved for two more first downs down to the 22-yard line and then Rice passed to Larry Wakefield, who was knocked out of bounds on the four-yard line by Jim Brooks. Two running plays and two passes failed for Racine with the Rifles Brooks, Tony Bertuca and Don Rowden starring in this goal line stand.

Play resumed on the 30-yard line and the Rifles marched 80 yards for their score with Duncan carrying seven times and Ted Williams gaining 25 yards on two carries. Jurewicz moving the ball twice for 10 yards and Dobbs passing once for 10 yards to end Ray Carskie.

Starting with this drive the Rifles began running through their right guard and right tackle and discovered they could move the ball through these two positions which they hammered away at for the remainder of the game.

Dobbs threw only six passes into the fog and completed five for 73 yards. The Racine quarterbacks discovered they were unable to move the ball on the ground and threw 21 passes but completed only three of them as the fog made it difficult for their receivers to see the ball.

The Rifles will meet Racine again August 26 in a home game to be played at Carmel Field in Mundelein. Coach Jesse Vail of the Rifles said Racine is a tough team and without the fog to hamper the play this should be a close and exciting game.

The Shadow To Challenge In Road America Can-Am

The only American-built car in Canada's American Challenge Cup competition, the spectacular UOP Shadow, is now ready to make its bid for top money — and it will be doing so at the Road America Can-Am with $75,000 at stake in qualifying and race awards. The event is on the weekend of Aug. 25-26-27 at Elkhart Lake, Wis.

The Shadow proved itself to be extremely competitive last Sunday at Mid-Ohio when England's world-class driver Jackie Oliver piloted the unique machine to a solid second place. Its performance was testimony not only to the excellence of Oliver's driving and the Chevy-engineered car itself, but to the fine job done by team owner Don Nichols' crew in pre-race preparation — since a guard-rail smashup at Watkins Glen two weeks earlier.

After its great showing in the Buckeye race, the sleek Shadow should be tuned to peak output for Road America. In placing second to George Follmer and his turbo-charged Porsche and out-running Denis Hulme and Peter Revson in the potent McLaren team, the Shadow can now be considered one of the prime threats in the million-dollar series.

The Shadow team has a couple of points to prove in the continent-spanning series — and in Road America's 200-miler. First of all, Oliver and the men from Nichols' Advanced Vehicle System are intent on showing that an American-built car can compete successfully with the best that European designers and builders produce — most notably, of course, the almost-legendary McLarens. Backing the effort is Universal Oil Products of Des Plaines.

Secondly, the UPO organizing is compiling what it hopes will be incontestable evidence that unleaded fuels are in every way competitive with their leaded counterparts no matter what type of engine a motorist uses — and since last August the Shadow has been the only racing car in the world powered exclusively by lead-free gasoline. And the team has not had an ENGINE failure in all that time.

The Shadow is, as noted, an "All American" entry in the richest road-racing series in the world ($75,000 is at stake at Road America Aug. 25-26-27). Designer Peter Bryant drew up the sports-racer originally in October of 1969 but it has since been completely re-designed with current aerodynamic trends the key.

Nichols' Advanced Vehicle System combined with UOP in 1971, and while "teething" problems were frequent last year, Oliver showed that the machine had tremendous potential. The Shadow's aluminum Chevrolet engine has been tuned to produce 735 horsepower at 6000 rpm and provides torque and HP performance curves equivalent to those of an identical engine run on leaded gasoline — and without engine damage in any respect.

Downforce is the design key to the Shadow. Bryant, over the winter, engineered as much downward thrust as is humanly possible — ("there's no point in out-hustling the opposition down a drag-strip only to have them tap you in the turns," says Bryant) into the car. His revised body shape features a pair of wings in front and in the rear with the most radical change being in the nose with a scoop-shaped projection channeling onrushing air on either side of the cockpit. The overall profile is ultra-low, only 27½ inches high. Sheathing an aluminum and steel frame is a super-slippery fiberglass bodyskin.

But no car can move without a competent driver, and in 30-year-old Oliver the Shadow team has one of international racing's great ones. He has won at Sebring, LeMans, Daytona, Monza, and Spa in the last three seasons.

Recently he has been concentrating on endurance racing and the Can-Am, and he has proven himself able to run hub-to-hub with the likes of Denis Hulme, Peter Revson, George Follmer, Mark Donohue, and other Group-7 aces. Last Sunday he demonstrated that he will emphatically be a force to reckon with at Road America Aug. 27 — and for the rest of the series.

STOLEN OMEN. Arlington Heights speedster Bob Harth pilfered second in the seventh and stole the show in the ninth when his one-strike, two-out single drove in the tying run and supplied the breath of life that Arlington needed to capture a thrilling 12-inning, 5-4 triumph over Belleville. While Harth avoided the tag by second baseman Steve Anderson, Heights avoided elimination and now advances to the Regional against the Indiana State Legion Champ.

George's Fix All 66 Wins AL Title

Only the senior championship game remained to be played to conclude Maine Northfield Little League's 1972 schedule.

Earlier George's Fix All 66 defeated Domestic Utilities 6-1 to capture the American Major League title. Winning pitcher Dave Pink, who gave up five hits while striking out 11 and walking one, also hit a home run.

Steve Levy also homered and singled and Randy Weingarten contributed a double to the victory. Jeff Weschler, who batted out two singles, played excellent defensive ball as did Mark Malter, who also singled. Singles by Jeff Bersh, Skip Lombardo and Marc Smith were all important in winning the championship.

Mike Logan doubled for Domestic Utilities and Steve Kaplan had two hits for three trips.

The championship team is managed by Mike Malter of Des Plaines and the roster showed Dave Pink, Dave Cohen, Marc Smith, Ron Schakowsky, Joe Lombardo, Bob Lombardo, Mark Malter, Jeff Bersh, Jeff Weschler, Steve Levy, Randy Weingarten, Gary Schakowsky and Eric Schor.

The American minor league championship was claimed by the House of Schiller when a nine run rally gave them a 12-5 victory over Glenview Foremost.

Both teams had survived playoff elimination to break a five way tie for first place. The winning pitcher was Steve Wells who was helped out by the batting of Mark Eisenberg who belted two doubles, one with the bases loaded.

Bill Dewyer doubled and had two singles for Glenview Foremost and Tom Nitschke doubled.

The House of Schiller champions are managed by Bob Singer of Morton Grove and members of the team include Chris Miller, Marc Alberts, Hugh Hines, Joel Lent, Bob Manaster, Andrew Moag, Alan Shapiro, Chuck Silber, Mike Singer, Larry Stegall, Steve Wells, Brad Wiltjer and Mark Wiltjer.

In the last All Star activity at Maine

Northfield the MNLL American All Stars lost their third round game to an excellent Palatine North team 14-1. Palatine's pitcher Don Shubeck held the MNLL Stars to three hits while striking out nine. Kerry Schawel doubled for Maine Northfield while Guy Steinbrink and Steve Kaplan singled.

In other division championship play, the National major league title went to VIP Studios, managed by John Olaszewski of Northbrook. Members of that team are Richard Glass, Mark Mall, Jeff Jacobson, Greg Wilson, Bill DiGilio, Ken Bishop, Kerry Field, Paul Bartalotta, Jon Olaszewski, Marty Sanders, Brian McAvoy, Jeff Hines and Bill Fawcett. VIP Studios won both halves in their division.

The National minor league championship was captured by Walt Boyle, managed by Dick Schauwecker of Glenview. The Walt Boyle team includes Tom Schauwecker, Jeff Beck, Brian Byrne, Sean Byrne, John Collins, Russ Harris, Robert Heini, Tim Nordeen, Mike Reusche, Brad Schawel, Pete Taaf, Mike Wahl and Jay Orlovski.

The senior prep championship went to Uncle Mitty's, managed by Jack Glees of Glenview. The team roster includes Jerry Glees, John Glees, Jamie Humenaki, Jeff Berenson, Dave Malter, Alan Teicher, Gerry Mendrala, Tom Mendrala, Dave Martins, Bob Stark, Craig Butler and Chip Marbach.

Kruse's Pads Lead

Kruse's Tavern, new leader of the Mount Prospect Twilight Golf League, Tuesday division, put together another solid victory this week, defeating Kirchhoff Insurance 8½-1½, and solidifying their first place to a 3½ point margin over Kerating Garden Center.

Keratings happily recovered from their disastrous defeat of last week by edging Ed and Gil's Barber Shop 6-4. It was enough to keep them in second place but the Paddock Tournament entry found a new threat nipping at their heels as Morton Pontiac wiped out one time serious contender Mount Prospect State Bank in a 10-0 clean sweep to move into third.

Coincidentally Lou's Barber Shop also came home with a 10-0 shutout, over Licht's Paint Store, and moved into fourth place.

Meanwhile, back among the also-rans, Annen and Busse, Realtors busted Geo. L. Busse & Co. 7½-2½ and Busse-Biermann Hdwe. edged Illinois Range 5½-4½, but the matches were played mostly for fun at this stage in the season.

Low shooters for the evening were Ed Lauring with a 37 and Chuck Dresser with a 39. Lauring's second successive 37 gave him low gross honors for the second night in a row.

Low net honors went to Big Bill Swanson with a 42 gross 31 net over the first nine.

Birdies were reported by C. Pollino No. 13 and No. 18, E. Lauring No. 13 and No. 15, D. Karcher No. 10, and F. Meeske No. 13.

A teen dance with music by the Straw Dogs will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday and Friday's main event will be the garden tractor pulling contest at 7 p.m. with Joe Farrell of Pontiac as chairman. Miscellaneous programs will be held at 2 p.m. Friday and Saturday and a large crowd is expected for the annual Society Horse show at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, with Glenn Antrim of Graymont as chairman.

Sunday's program begins at 9 a.m. with a non-denominational church service, followed at 10 a.m. by a display of antique autos. Each year the Threshermen's Reunion parade is held through downtown Pontiac and the starting time this year is 1:15 p.m. Spectators will see bands, floats, horses, steam engines and politicians. The judging of antique autos and awarding of trophies will be held following the parade.

John Barton and his Sunbeam Cornbelt Country Style Music program at 7:30 p.m. will end Sunday's program. Barton will appear with the Arkansas Travelers, Duane Campbell and Billie Ann.

The power mower races at 2 p.m. Monday, Labor Day, will end the five-day event.

TROPHY RUN. Belleville's Robin Blaha, the American Legion State Baseball Tournament's top average hitter with nine hits in 25 trips, also stole six bases, including this one in the championship game with Arlington's Bert Newman waiting for the belated throw. Despite Blaha's heroics, Heights captured a thrilling 5-4 victory and will advance to regional play in Richmond, Ind., Wednesday. (Photo by Bob Finch)

Rebels Triumph

The Northwest Rebels — who like everyone else have been having to put up with inclement weather — managed to get in just one partial game in the last week because of rain.

The Rebels, a team of collegiate-aged players from all over this area, edged Skokie 6-5 in a game shortened to five innings by darkness in their latest outing at Skokie.

That game was sandwiched between several rainouts (there have already been seven for the season, mostly this month). Prior to that the Rebels split a pair of close games against the Arlington Heights American Legion team, which has been hosting and competing in the state tournament.

Rick Peekel was Northwest's pitcher against Skokie and gave up seven hits. Player-coach Frank May and Steve Smith each had two hits.

The Rebels waited no longer than the initial frame to pounce on the hosts for three runs. Scott Day and Steve Smith singled, May beat out a bum to load the bases, Dean Sheridan singled in two runs and another scored on a wild pitch. Skokie immediately sliced that lead to 3-2 but Northwest held on as each team followed with three singletons.

In the second, the Rebels scored on a walk and three straight sacrifices — the last a fly ball by Bill Maffey. Another run scored in the fourth when Smith and May singled and Sheridan stroked a sacrifice fly. In the fifth, Steve Koch singled, moved up on a passed ball and flyout and scored on a wild pitch.

The Rebels have a light schedule remaining, playing Friday in Evanston and Saturday night in Kankakee. They have been invited to a tournament in Kankakee this Tuesday through Friday but may not be able to accept because of a double shortage of money and players. Five starters are now out — Mike Pette-nuzzo, Mark Frase, Bruce Frase, Day and Sheridan — for various reasons such as vacations, college and injuries.

Wheeling High School head football coach Jack Liljeberg has announced that equipment for all levels of this year's program will be issued this Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 21 and 22.

Varsity and junior varsity gear should be picked up between 9 a.m. and noon at the school Monday and sophomores and freshmen may get their equipment during the same time period Tuesday. The first day of practice is Wednesday for all levels.

Each boy must have a physical exam card and signed parent permission slip in order to get equipment.

Still Openings For Golf Meet

There are still some openings remaining for the Seventh Annual Al McLean Junior Golf Tournament starting Monday at the Wilmette Golf Course.

Young male amateurs with handicaps of 10 or less and between the ages of 15 and 21 are eligible to compete for trophies and prizes in the three day, 72-hole tournament.

Entry closing deadline is Saturday. Interested golfers may contact Tournament Director David Najdowski at 251-0353.

Rounds of 18 holes will be played each day on Monday and Tuesday. The field of 120 will be cut to 40 for the final 36 holes on Wednesday.

Trophies will be awarded to the five low finishers in the 15 to 17 age group, as well as to the six low finishers in the 18 to 21 age group.

Hersey High Football Registration

Hersey High School football registration will be held Aug. 21 for all levels of competition during the fall season. Equipment will be issued Aug. 22 with seniors scheduled at 9:30, juniors at 10:30, sophomores at 11:30 and incoming freshmen at 1:30 p.m.

Anyone who didn't receive a letter of invitation to try out for the team, but is interested in playing is asked to register and see athletic director Dick Kimmamon at Hersey High School. Practice will commence Aug. 23.

2 Major Championships Slated At Raceway

With competition narrowed to two nights a week at the popular Raceway Park track oval, 190th St. and Ashland Avenue in Blue Island, two major championship events are in store for stock car racing fans this week.

The first big event, one of the top attractions of the year, is the Fall Monza Classic to be run next Saturday night. Originating in the little Italian village of that name, the Monza consists of three separate 30-lap races for drivers of Late Model cars. The driver emerging with the best overall showing in all three segments of the Monza is the winner.

Ray Young of Dolton won the first Monza Classic of the year, winning one segment and finishing second in each of the other two 30-laps. Jerry Kemperman of Blue Island won two segments, but a ninth place finish in the third race prevented him from winning the huge MONZA trophy.

Bill McEnery of Evergreen Park, current point leader at Raceway Park, Ray Young who is a close second, Koehler in third place, and Kemperman fourth will renew their rivalry in all three 30-lap segments of the Monza. McEnery and Young have already passed the $9,000 mark in earnings for this season.

In addition to the Monza on Saturday night, there will be the usual 20-lap feature for Super Six cars. The Super Sixes will headline next Sunday night's (Aug. 20) program with their annual 40-lap season championship classic for the Toyota trophy, with a field of at least 25 drivers, including George Abbott of Harvey, the point leader, Dick Wright of Alsip, Gary Emmett of Gary and Gene Swart of Chicago. The Late Models will also run their 30-lap feature on Sunday night, along with at least three 10-lap heat races and a trophy dash.

Time trials start each night at 6:30, the first race at 8 p.m. Parking is always FREE to the patrons.

12 Area Youths Join Sports Jamboree Field

Among the 550 young people participating in the state finals of the Illinois Junior Sports Jamboree at Crystal Lake this week will be 12 youths from the northwest suburbs.

They are: Debbie Weaver, Curt Blick, Tom Fisher, Aimee Allen, Anne Meyer, Susan Dawson and Dan Kilrain, all of Palatine; Carla Rub of Arlington Heights; Diane Havir and Sue Rupp, Park Ridge; and Trudi Rebsamen and Kim Feige, both of Mount Prospect.

Fifteen chartered buses will leave from various parts of the state Friday morning, carrying the contestants to the northern Illinois community. The young athletes, who range in age from 10 to 15, will be competing for state titles in 43 different events.

Competition will be on the Crystal Lake high school athletic field, and the contestants will be housed in dormitories in the high school and junior high gymnasiums.

Upon arrival Friday, the young people will have a barbecue in a city park, and then will take part in a torch-light parade through the town. Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie will ride in a motorcade at the head of the procession, and will address the athletes at the opening ceremony, scheduled for 8:15 p.m. at Veteran's Acres.

Highlight of the ceremony will be the lighting of the symbolic flame, from a torch carried earlier in the day from Joliet, site of the 1971 Jamboree. Cross-country runners from various towns along the route will take part in the 67-mile relay along country roads and city streets.

Track preliminaries and finals in field events will be conducted Saturday morning, and track finals will be run Saturday afternoon. An awards banquet Saturday night, followed by a swim party and dance at the Crystal Lake beach, will climax the day.

The contestants will leave for home Sunday morning following an all-faith religious service at the high school.

The contestants, all finalists in local and regional competition held earlier this summer, will make the expense-paid trip as the guests of the state of Illinois, which sponsors the Jamboree along with the Illinois Jaycees. State agencies responsible for coordinating the program are the Governor's Office of Human Resources and the Community Services Unit of the Illinois Department of Corrections' Juvenile Division.

The Crystal Lake Jaycees are serving as hosts to the contestants during their stay in their community.

Newcomer Golf Day Attracts 33

A record-breaking total of 33 couples turned out for the annual Arlington Heights Newcomers Scotch Golf Outing last Sunday at Thunderbird Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dunn were the afternoon's low gross winners and second place went to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harrison. Mr. and Mrs. Leo Pfaff were the low net champions and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jewell registered the high net scores. Mr. and Mrs. Burt Burquest won the special event, the low putts competition.

Following the golf match, the group participated in a social hour. The intent of the social gathering was to meet new friends since all the couples were new arrivals to Arlington Heights.

Arrangements or the outing were made by Mrs. Robert Dion, Mrs. Richard Fleming, Mrs. John Dunn and Mrs. Paul Godwin.

SURPRISE STEAL. Arlington's Dave Zare — not known for his stealing ability — catches Belleville off guard with one of his two thefts in the legion State Tournament championship game Wednesday. Late with the tag is second baseman Keith Anderson. Taking it to Belleville all day, Arlington finally emerged victorious with a 5-4 decision in the 12th inning.

Punt, Pass And Kick Registration Open

Several area Ford dealers have begun registering boys and girls for Punt, Pass and Kick competition.

Nationally, more than 1,000,000 youngsters are expected to enroll in the huge youth program this year, the fifth consecutive year the number of participants has topped that level.

Aged eight to 13, they will make their opening bids for the Football Hall of Fame in less than two months. Six will make it — having their names inscribed at Canton, Ohio, as national PP&K winners.

The program is sponsored by participating U.S. Ford dealers and the National Football League (NFL).

Registration closes Sept. 29. Registrants must be accompanied by a parent or guardian when signing up.

PP&K participants punt, pass and kick against others their own age. Any youngster aged eight through 13 is eligible.

There is no entry fee and no special equipment is needed. There is no body contact during PP&K competition and participants do not lose amateur status.

Scoring is based on distance and accuracy. One point is given for every foot of punting, passing and kicking distance and a point is deducted for every foot off a line.

Six levels of competition produce six winners. Trophies are awarded to winners at all levels. Competition will begin Sept. 30 with dealer-level contests.

Starting at the fourth (area) level, competition is held before the kickoff and during the halftime of NFL games.

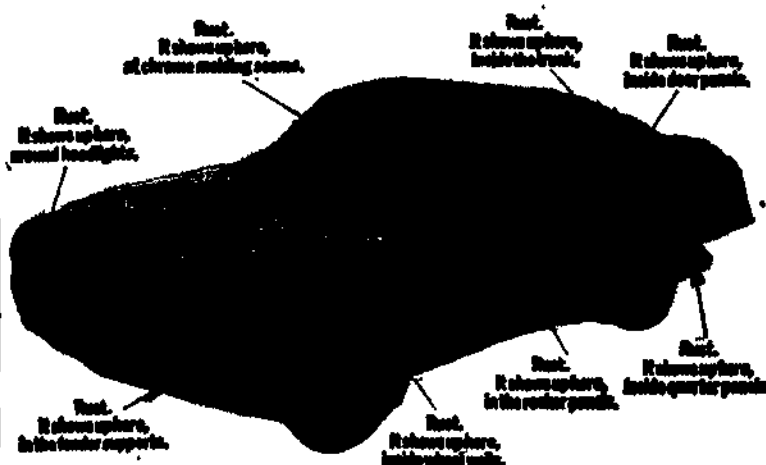

Six national finalists will represent the NFL's American Conference and six the National Football Conference on Jan. 21 at the Pro Bowl game in Dallas. Finalists, their parents and sponsoring dealers will be guests of Ford Division.

The auto-makers haven't done it. So we did.

They still haven't unveiled the rustproof car

And they probably never will. Because real rustproofing just can't be handled on an assembly line. And undercoating and ordinary rustproofing don't help either.

But at Ziebart, we use nine patented spray coats to get inside your car's body. Inside, where rust starts.

We cover every square inch of rust-prone metal with our unique solution. To make your car absolutely rustproof. Up to 80% more rustproof. And worth more money when you trade it in.

The Ziebart process isn't foolproof. In fact, that's why we guarantee your new car against rust for 5 years or 50,000 miles.

There's only one Ziebart process. And only one place to get it. Through an authorized Ziebart dealer.

The one nearest you is listed on the back.

Arkansas Host State For Babe Ruth World Series

Nine baseball teams, including defending champion Puerto Rico and four-time winner New Orleans, are ready to start play in Pine Bluff, Ark., Saturday in the 21st Babe Ruth World Series.

New Orleans will meet Sedalia, Missouri, of the Midwest Plains in the first game Saturday night. Host Pine Bluff is the second game Saturday night.

On Sunday, Kirkland, Washington, meets Hawaii; Prince Georges County, Maryland, faces Puerto Rico and Terre Haute, Indiana, goes against the Pine Bluff-Montgomery winner.

Terre Haute won the world title in 1955. Kirkland, Prince Georges and Montgomery all are appearing in the World Series for the first time.

This is the 13-15 age division of Babe Ruth Baseball. The teams will be playing double elimination with the championship game on Aug. 26.

Mrs. Babe Ruth, widow of the famed home run king; Lefty Gomez, former Yankee pitching star recently admitted to the baseball Hall of Fame, and Dizzy Dean, famed pitching star of the St. Louis Cardinal Gas House Gang, will attend the series.

Schiefelbein Gains Tie For Top

Schiefelbein Construction Co. pulled into a first-place tie with L'Nor Cleaners in the Arlington Friday Night Golf League last week as Duane Schiefelbein carded both the low gross and the low net scores for the evening.

Schiefelbein shot a 38 which was reduced to 34 with his handicap. He notched a birdie on the fourth hole. Other birds were registered by Al Damiani, Tom Durand and Joe Carney on the eighth hole and Haas Gallmeier on the seventh.

Pair Win Three Swim Awards

Joni Jacobsen and Jay Takata walked away from the last Arlington Heights Park District swim meet with three blue ribbons each.

The park district teams, however, came out on the short end of a 230 to 224 decision to Elk Grove Village teams.

Another winner in the 8 and under age division, along with Jacobsen and Takata was Mike Polacek who won the breast stroke competition.

In the 9 and 10 division, Nancy O'Kane picked up two firsts and Christine Takata, Amy Abbott, Brett Ryden and Garin Kroll each won a race.

Barb Loner and Joyce Cassidy were winners in the 11 and 12 age division and Cheryl Takata was the one blue ribbon winner in the 13 and 14 year old division.

Though Jeff Young was the only winner in the boys 15 and over division, Jan Takata and Barb Volden each won two blue ribbons in the girls division. The free relay was won by Takata, Volden, Sue Dragon and Maureen Sall.

Snowmobile Banquet Slated

Who made the greatest contribution to the sport of snowmobiling in Illinois? That's what the Illinois Association of Snowmobile Clubs (IASC) hopes to discover so the person so chosen can be presented with the group's second Annual Achievement Award.

Last year's plaque was presented to Rep. R. Bruce Waddell (R-Dundee, Ill.) for "his outstanding contribution to the growth and development of snowmobiling as a safe, family sport in Illinois."

Representative Waddell was the chief sponsor of the present Illinois Snowmobile Registration and Safety Act.

This year's award will be presented at the second annual Snowmobile and Recreation Vehicle Show being held Sept. 29 through Oct. 1 at the O'Hareport Hotel in Northlake, Ill.

Bunnies In Charity Game

The International Air Cargo Association of Chicago's All-Star League will have some new incentives for playing ball on Monday, Aug. 28.

Thillens Stadium will be home base for the first Playboy Bunny — IACAC Softball game.

The purpose of the game is to raise funds to start a treasury for families of deceased members of the IACAC.

Five team members from each of the winning teams in the playoffs will be chosen to team up "against" the Bunnies at 8 p.m.

A sports celebrity from one of the Chicago baseball teams will start the game by throwing out the first ball.

Admission is $1.00 and tickets may be purchased the night of the game at Thillens Stadium, Devon and Kedzie, Chicago.

Other worthwhile organizations that would also like to use the Thillens facilities free of charge may do so by calling 743-5140.

Nebraska Tabbed In Big 8

Defending champion Nebraska is favored to repeat its Big Eight Conference football Championship — at least in the eyes of the conference sportscasters and sportswriters.

Coach Bob Devaney's Cornhuskers received 40 first-place votes and 644 points in the 27th annual grid poll. Colorado garnered 29 first-place votes and 610 points for the runner-up position, while Oklahoma received the remaining 19 first-place votes and 582 points.

Rounding out the predicted finish were Iowa State, fourth, 397 points; Kansas State, fifth, 383½; Oklahoma State, sixth, 183½; Kansas, seventh, 19½; and Missouri, eighth, 186½.

The Cornhuskers, who have won or shared the last three league titles, were the choice of the media last year and responded with a 12-0 mark, an Orange Bowl crown and a second consecutive national championship.

Nebraska has a good track record as the favorite. The journalists have pegged the Huskers four times as the favorite and the Big Red won the title on three of those occasions.

Boating Exhibits On Display

Boating businessmen attending the 1972 Marine Trades Exhibit and Conference — Oct. 5-8 in Chicago's McCormick Place — will be seeing more than the world's largest boat show. They'll also be learning what they must do to fulfill their obligation under new federal law, and finding out what they should be doing to garner a greater share of America's leisure dollar.

The show itself, which is not open to the public, will cover more than 600,000 square feet of the giant lakefront exposition center. Last year's record exhibitor total — 617 — has already been exceeded, and show officials are betting that the record boat count — 1,183, also set in 1971 — will also be eclipsed.

The dealer education conferences, to be held in the Arie Crown Theatre of McCormick Place, will be held prior to the opening of exhibits on Oct 5 and 6. More than 2,500 marine retailers are expected to attend each session.

Show hours are, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Oct 5 and 6, and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Oct. 7 and 8. The conference sessions begin at 9 a.m. Oct 5 and 6.

Sportsmen's Club To Meet

The next regular monthly meeting of the Elk Grove Sportsmen's Club will be held Thursday evening, Aug. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Village Hall at 901 Wellington Ave., in the multi-purpose room. Beginning with the September meeting the club will meet on the second Wednesday evening of each month, same time, same place.

The club is planning a picnic beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 20 in Grove 7 of the Ned Brown Forest Preserve. The club will also participate in a trapshoot on Sunday, Aug. 27, at 10 a.m., at the Maywood Sportsmen's Club. And on the following Sunday, Sept. 3, the club will hunt the Green River Conservation Area at Ohio, Ill., provided the necessary permits are obtained.

IHSA Cross Country Clinic Slated In Normal Aug. 26

The Illinois High School Coaches Association's first Cross Country Clinic will be held at Stroud Auditorium at University High School in Normal on Saturday, Aug. 26.

The program has some of the outstanding high school and college coaches in the state.

Joe Newton from York of Elmhurst won state cross country championships in 1961, 1965, 1968 and 1970, has had five undefeated seasons, and was voted cross country Coach of the Year in 1971.

Rod White of Centralia has a 70-10 record over the past three seasons, sectional championships in 1969, 1970, and 1971, and second in the state in 1971.

Hank Feldt of Lebanon was coach of the Junior Olympic distance runner Craig Virgin, who as a junior won the individual state cross country championship in a record time and then won the mile and two-mile events at the state track meet last spring.

Gary Weineke, University of Illinois cross country coach, is a former outstanding Rockford high school coach.

The program is streamlined to one day so coaches from all over the state may attend. Registration starts at 9:30 a.m. and the final session is over at 4 p.m.

Rod White of Centralia is the clinic director and Bob Metcalf, President of the Coaches' Association, is the host director.

GT Tee Provides More Distance

New GT Golf Tees are scientifically designed to offer golfers minimum resistance for maximum distance off the tee. Each GT Tee is precision engineered and molded to delicately balance and suspend the ball on four bearing points. When the ball is hit, the tee head swings out of the way on its own hinge.

Ball weight holds tee in position, and hinge tension and balance can be adjusted by bending tee head back and forth against the hinge. Made of tough polypropylene, GT Tees can be used over and over again.

GT Golf Tees conforms with USGA Rules.

Local Girl To Run In AAU Junior Olympics

Trudi Rebsamen of 716 N. Wille, Mount Prospect, will celebrate her fifteenth birthday this week at the AAU Junior Track and Field Olympics in Spokane, Wash. She will compete in the 440-yard run and be one of only three representatives in the meet from the state of Illinois.

Boys and girls from 13 regions in the United States will participate in track and field events for which they have qualified by being successful winners in state and regional meets.

Trudi is a member of the Northwest Suburban YMCA Girls Track Team, one of the finest girls teams in the state of Illinois. The "Y" girls team, which is expanding its 12-month track program under the supervision of Mrs. Dottie Keeling, assistant program director at the "Y," is seeking additional girls in ages eight to 15 to round out the team.

Trudi's coach, Mr. Dean Slavins, a resident of Mount Prospect, is track and cross country coach at Niles East High School. He believes that with continued training, Trudi will develop into a contender for the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

Equal Time Question Applies To Books Too?

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a book called "My Diary, By Pat," author Milt Rosen purports to reveal how a certain First Lady copes with Tootsie Roll shortages and other crises that arise at the White House.

Three years out of four, a literary work of this sort could be left to its own devices. But this being a presidential election year, the equal time question impinges.

Media fairness would seem to require that some publisher now bring forth a companion volume called "My Diary, By Eleanor."

It, as the title suggests, would chronicle the daily peaks and valleys in the life of the wife of a certain Democratic presidential candidate.

If it will help get the project started, here are a few random entries:

Jan. 17 — George is holding an "important" news conference tomorrow, but he won't tell anyone what it's about. Will he reveal secret plan for recycling barber poles? The suspense is unbearable.

JAN. 18 — SURPRISE! George has just revealed that he is running for President. So that's what he's been doing all these months! And I thought all the time that he was out on his paper route.

Feb. 15 — Spent whole day campaigning in New Hampshire. Just because George doesn't cry in snowstorms, people think he doesn't love me as much as Ed loves Jane. That's not true, George is very sentimental, but every time he goes outdoors his tear ducts freeze up.

March 10 — Arrival in Florida for primary campaign. Spent all day explaining to voters how George's plan to give everyone $1,000 would work. Then spent all night explaining it to George.

June 6 — George beats Hubert in California primary! Hubert's big mistake was trying to explain George's plan to give everyone $1,000.

JULY 12 — GEORGE has finally decided on a running mate. Somebody named Tom. All Tom had to do to get the nomination was promise never to mention George's plan to give everyone $1,000.

July 25 — We are having a wonderful vacation in the Black Hills. Wish Tom were here to share it with us.

July 26 — Tom was here. JULY 27 — GEORGE says he is backing Tom 1,000 per cent. There is something about that figure that sounds hauntingly familiar. Where could I have heard it before.

Aug. 5 — George has finally decided on a running mate. There is something about that sentence that looks hauntingly familiar. Where could I have seen it before?

Aug. 10 — George and I went to the movies tonight. We saw "Anne of 1,000 Days." George hated it.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

We watched a pretty good player go down at four spades. He complained bitterly about losing the trump and club finesse and running into a 4-2 diamond break.

He also congratulated West on his defense. West had led ace-king and another heart to start with and got out with a trump to wait for his club trick.

We hated to point out to our friend that he really should have made the hand and undoubtedly would have done so if he didn't have the jack of clubs.

The whole point in the play is that

West shows up with six hearts, three spades and at least one club since he followed when South led a club to dummy's king at trick four.

If he holds two more clubs including the queen the hand can't be made. Otherwise there is an automatic squeeze against East.

Just look at the actual situation. South must play his next to last trump to get rid of the last one held by West. Then, South simply continues with his last trump.

A club is discarded from dummy to leave dummy with four diamonds and a club. East has to hold onto four diamonds and must come down to one club also. Now South plays three rounds of diamonds and winds up taking the last two tricks with his ace-jack of clubs.

Before I

Payroll Savings Plan all I could save was string.

When it comes to saving money, most of us can use all the help we can get.

Joining the Payroll Savings Plan is one easy way to force yourself to save. When you sign up, an amount you specify is set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's automatic. Everything is done for you.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 3½% when held to maturity of 3 years, 10 months (4½% the first year). That extra ½% payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Stick with the plan and before you know it you'll have a handsome wad. That's when you'll find you can do a lot more with money than you can with string.

Read on page 11 how, when, for how long, to get the most out of your Bonds. The way to succeed is to start now. Don't wait until it's too late.

Take stock in America.

Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

What can you tell me about Frazier Thomas and Garfield Goose?

Peggie Muldoon
Buffalo Grove

Frazier Thomas

Frazier is the creator, writer, producer and host of TV's longest running children's show, GARFIELD GOOSE AND FRIENDS. It has been on the air continuously for 19 years and is as popular as ever. For nine years, Thomas has been the producer-host of FAMILY CLASSICS. The award, one of many, that means the most to Frazier is the one presented by Boy Scouts of America because two children's lives were saved as a direct result of life saving techniques described on his show.

Thomas is married and has two children. Their home in Wilmette bulges with his hobbies: stamp collecting, copper enameling, photography, model ships, planes, and antique guns.

Frazier's puppet creation, Garfield Goose, was introduced via a shopping show in Cincinnati. In 1954, after a run on WBKB and WBBM, 'Gar' was purchased by WGN lock, stock, and castle and went on to even greater popularity.

I think it is really rotten that the networks took off THE SONNY AND CHER COMEDY HOUR and EMERGENCY until next fall. Isn't there something you can do to get them back for the rest of the summer? I think them to be the best on TV!

Maribeth Chwierit
Chicago

It may seem 'rotten' to a lot of viewers, but remember—Absence makes the heart (viewers) fonder! We can do nothing about it, but you might air your opinions to the networks themselves by writing. Sonny and Cher, 51 W. 52nd St. New York, N.Y. 10019, and EMERGENCY, NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Could you tell me where I can write to Karen Valentine? Where can I write to Valerie Harper?

N.C.
Arlington Heights

Karen Valentine

It isn't everyday that students are fortunate enough to have such good looking teachers as Karen Valentine. Karen's plans to teach drama were changed when she won the local competition for Miss Teenage America. Ed Sullivan saw her lip-synced "Blame It on the Bossa Nova". He signed her for two bookings on his variety show. Married to actor Carl McLaughlin Jr., Karen enjoys sewing, cooking, gardening, and riding motorcycles. Address your envelop to Karen c/o

ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Valerie Harper was hooked on show business while she was still in high school. While waiting and studying for the 'big break', Valerie met writer-actor, Dick Schal, who is now her husband. Before her role as Rhoda on THE MARY TYLER MOORE SHOW, the couple has appeared in a long list of TV, legitimate theatre, and recording productions. The Schals are writing two TV pilots and a screenplay as well as appearing in TV and little theatre productions. Send your letters to Valerie c/o CBS-TV, 51 W. 52nd St., New York, N.Y. 10019.

Who is the recording artist of "Jungle Fever."

A.N.

The Chakachas are the recorders of "Jungle Fever." The record, on the Pol label, has sold thousands and is approaching the halfway point of a million record sales.

Where can I write to Channel 7's newsman, John Coleman? Being a nut myself, I like him and think he, too, is a nut.

Deb Stupey
McHenry

John Coleman

The accuracy, poise and unflappable good humor with which John presents his forecasts may be because he made up his mind very early in life to be the very best weather reporter in the country. "That was in the second grade to be exact," he says.

To prepare a typical forecast, Coleman each day looks at 24 maps, absorbs Chicago and National Weather Service information from 500 teletype messages and yards of other reports, and makes some 100 calculations. All is subject to change, if fresher reports come in.

Coleman, his wife Alice and daughter reside in Evanston. His hobby is electronics and keeping abreast of new weather forecasting techniques.

Barbara Minkus

Although Barbara is pint-sized, she comes on big. As long as she can remember, Barb has wanted to be in show business. A native of Chicago, she has studied voice, including opera. Her auditioning for Hugh Hefner got her a singing engagement at one of the famed Playboy Clubs.

Barbara now lives in a tiny house in Hollywood with a small cockapoo. She is currently enrolled in Santa Monica City College where she is studying psychology.

Life of da Vinci being aired on CBS

Leonardo da Vinci (Philippe Leroy, left) greets Louis XII, King of France, in "The Life of Leonardo da Vinci," a five part series now airing Sundays on the CBS Network. The award-winning series of specials encompasses the man and the awesome range of his genius which placed him at the apex of the Italian Renaissance. Though his legacy included some of the world's greatest masterpieces, such as the "Mona Lisa" and the "Last Supper," his last words pointed out remorse that there was "so much undone."

Gripping cold-war drama

Candice Bergen stars in 'The Day the Fish Came Out'

Candice Bergen

"The Day the Fish Came Out," a gripping drama about a cargo of atomic bombs and a mysterious metal box ditched from a disabled plane over a small Greek island, will be telecast on the ABC Television Network's "The ABC Saturday Summer Movie" Aug. 19.

The film stars Colin Blakely and Tom Courtenay as the pilot and navigator, respectively, of the doomed aircraft. Also starring are Sam Wanamaker and Candice Bergen.

To avert panic among the people living on the Greek island of Karos, a world power secretly dispatches 20 operatives to recover atomic explosives and the metal box dropped by the pilot and navigator of one of its planes.

The search, led by Elias (Sam Wanamaker), results in quick recovery of the atomic bombs. The metal box, however, is found by a goatherd. When the goatherd opens the box, using a powerful acid he has stolen from an American archaeologist (Candice Bergen), it contains what he considers to be worthless stones. But their effect on the island is disastrous.

Newsman reflect on festivities of past conventions

How important is hoopla to a national political convention? Not very, if recently revised convention rules that restrict nominating and seconding speeches to a total of 15 minutes are any indication. And those same rules also prohibit "spontaneous" demonstrations.

BUT CBS NEWS Correspondent Walter Cronkite and National Correspondent Eric Sevareid, anchorman and analyst, respectively, of CBS News' coverage of the Republican Convention, take a different view. Cronkite and Sevareid, who have teamed for CBS News' convention coverage since 1952, remember when the extravaganza was as important as the acceptance speech.

Sevareid enjoys recalling the impact of Sen. Alben Barkley's keynote speech opening the 1948 Democratic Convention.

"Barkley's keynote address brought what was a dead convention to life," says Sevareid. "From the time he made that speech, Barkley had to be on the ticket as Vice President.

"TRUMAN WAS trying to get hold of Justice William O. Douglas and other leading Democrats for his running mate, and didn't particularly want Barkley. But after that speech, he had nowhere else to turn."

Cronkite recalls the significance that demonstrations had at past conventions.

"Demonstrations had a particular function," says Cronkite. "In fact, the music used to be a key factor in drumming up enthusiasm, and the man who controlled the band in the old days, or the pipe organ when they began to cut down on expenses, was very important."

"He was told by the convention management when he should play rousing music to get the convention up for the moment," says Cronkite, "or when not to play to kill a demonstration. It was quite an effective political tool."

Cronkite will anchor CBS News' convention coverage, joined by Sevareid and Theodore H. White, a long-time political consultant to CBS News, for analysis. On the "floor" will be a five-man team of CBS News Correspondents, consisting of Dan Rather, Roger Mudd, Mike Wallace, John Hart and Morton Dean.

CBS News will broadcast live gavel-to-gavel coverage of the Republican National Convention, beginning Monday, Aug. 21, on the CBS Television Network.

Republican Convention meets to nominate their candidate

NBC's anchormen, John Chancellor and Dave Brinkley seem surprised to find a variety of candidates vying for the presidential nomination they thought was sewn up for Richard Nixon. Actually, the portraits on the placards are Richard Millhouse Nixon as styled by nine of the nation's leading caricaturists. Perhaps the artists prefer 'doing' Nixon since McGovern is murder to caricature while Nixon is a snap...as long as you don't have him and Bob Hope in the same drawing. Chancellor and Brinkley will be matching caricatures to candidates while covering the Republican Convention August 21, 22 and 23.

Reporting a convention is more than brain work

Howard K. Smith

Reporting on a national political convention requires more than knowledge and insight—it also calls for stamina and endurance.

To that end, ABC News' co-anchormen at the Republican National Convention, Howard K. Smith and Harry Reasoner, have been honing their physical as well as their mental skills. Both will be on top for the platform acceptance and nominations on August 22.

HOWARD K. Smith, a long firm believer in daily exercise—began his special preparations three weeks ago by adding a program of weightlifting and jogging to his usual regimen of walking and calisthenics. In addition, Smith's daily fitness routine includes a yoga-like head stand for a few minutes every two hours.

The co-anchorman and his wife are quartered in an apartment at the Carriage House in Miami Beach where they prepare especially healthful meals, eschewing the normal restaurant fare.

Like Smith, Harry Reasoner exercises daily. In Miami Beach he has reserved a tennis court each morning at his hotel where he plays singles or doubles for an hour. He follows the match with a swim at the hotel pool.

But unlike his more spartan partner, Reasoner is frequently seen sampling the food of the greater Miami area's noted eating places.

Lola's gonna make it

(Editor's Note: This week's column was written by Managing Editor Karen Johnson, following an interview with singer-actress Lola Falana.)

Somewhere in our deep freeze of lessons learned we have one entitled, "Thou Shalt Not Predict." However, since life seems more fun when one perches on pinnacles, we now prepare to thaw out and throw out that lesson.

On September 11 an agile, 25-year-old, singer-dancer by the name of Lola Falana will be among those present when The New Bill Cosby Show takes its initial plunge into America's living rooms. After being exposed to the entertainer in question for a few short minutes, one thought entered the mind: "This one's gonna make it!" And, that folks, is the prediction.

Lola Falana

"RIGHT NOW," Lola readily admits, "I'm not a box office name." But this gal is virtually bursting at the seams to get the most out of life and limb, and has been since she became a ballet student at age three, when most little ladies are beginning to master the art of rope jumping.

For those who haven't caught Miss Falana on any of the guest spots she's done on television, she can't really be classified an unknown. Such astute folks as Sammy Davis, Jr. know the name well and have played supporting roles in Lola's travels to the tube.

At 14, the new member of the Cosby Clan was a 'stage struck kid' who sat in Philadelphia nightclubs and sipped a Coke while she waited to sing or dance. Out of high school, but still a teenager, Lola met Davis while he was appearing at an Atlantic City club. Not only did she end up doing "Golden Boy" in New York, Chicago and London with the star; but continued to tour with his troupe for two additional years.

"SAMMY TAUGHT me things that most young people don't learn today," she said. "There are no training grounds now like there were in the days of vaudeville." Davis, she said, not only gave her the opportunity to share in his exposure, but allowed her to be comfortable enough to make mistakes, and then helped her correct them. "Most kids today don't have teachers," she said of young aspiring actors. "They just get thrown out on a stage to do their thing. Then somebody with a pencil comes along and says they're rotten before they have a chance to learn."

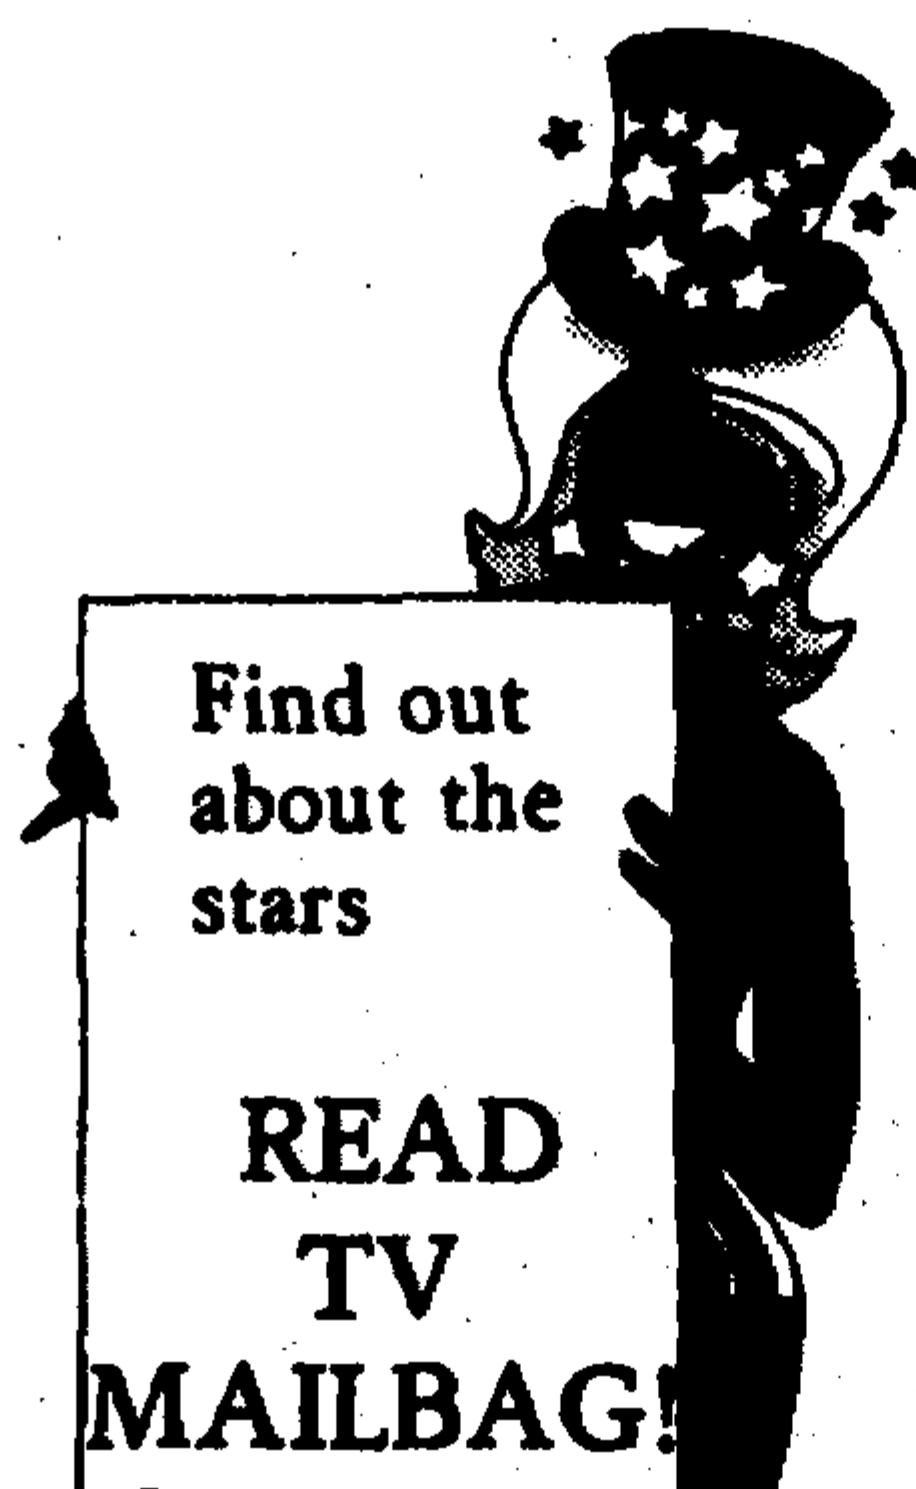

On the subject of 'mistakes and lessons' Lola told of an incident that occurred while she was doing "Golden Boy."

"One night, I was really sick," she recalled. "After the show Sammy called me over to talk to him. I thought he felt sorry for me and would tell me how great it was that I did the show in my condition." Davis, however, wasn't pleased. He berated the young performer for, "daring to cheat the audience by performing under par." According to Lola, "That's the first lesson I learned. I'll never go out and 'walk' a show again. The show must go on," Lola said, repeating the old adage... "But, only if it is a show."

Now the Cosby show, aired on CBS opens wide an opportunity for Sammy's protege to put to music the lessons she's been learning since she was a three-year-old ballet student. When we wondered out loud how she felt about the new series, the gal replied in a serious fashion. "It's a great responsibility. It's Bill Cosby's show. Bill only accepts people he hopes will enhance—strengthen. The performer has to produce. And, for me, these are my productive years," she said, "my energy years. Everyday that I wake up...I make it count."

Village Seeks To Get At Roots Of Weed Problem

by STEVE BROWN

Weeds are purely a summertime problem, like mosquitoes and sunburn. A problem that is not unique to the rich or poor, but which comes to every piece of land not covered by concrete, blacktop or bricks.

Across the area this summer, the weeks, fed by the heavier than average rainfall, have sprouted skyward, causing homeowners hundreds of headaches.

From Winston Knolls in Hoffman Estates to Weathersfield and Sheffield Park in Schaumburg, homeowners have struck up a cacophonous chorus about weeds.

"All we know is that the weeds don't belong to us and someone better mow them," intoned irate homeowner Mrs. D. R. Cantrell, 113 Winston Dr., Hoffman Estates. She took her complaint to the Hoffman Estates Village Board this week in hopes of getting some help.

SINCE HER comments Monday evening, Village Manager George Longmeyer has been trying to find a solution.

Relief may be on the way, because the Hoffman Estates Park District recently received the deed for the land and plans to use about $20,000 earmarked from a recent referendum to landscape and improve it and similar property in Winston Knolls.

The homeowners' association in Winston Knolls has been meeting with the park district for several months and work there could start by this fall. Park Director Al Binder said the district will begin to maintain all the property there.

In Schaumburg, a battle may be brewing between ecological enthusiasts and homeowners over what will be done with Terrado Park. There the Clean Environ-

Weed Problem Move Coordinated

Hoffman Estates Village Mgr. George Longmeyer and Rudi Harner, sanitarian, are coordinating the efforts of the park district and Centex Corp. to solve a weed problem in a creek area in Winston Knolls.

Longmeyer said Mrs. Donald R. Cantrell, 113 Winston Dr., in the subdivision appeared before the board recently and asked the village's help in solving a weed problem in her back yard.

Longmeyer said initial investigations show the Hoffman Estates Park District plans to landscape the area this fall. However, it is possible the land has not as yet been accepted by the park district. In that case, the builder will be asked to mow the area and maintain the creek banks until the fall work begins, said Longmeyer.

the park question whether the seedlings or weeds and mosquitos are more important to the ecology of the area. They are up in arms about the possibility of no further mowing in the area if the environmental group gets its way.

In the meantime, the Schaumburg Park District is in the middle, trying to satisfy both sides. A meeting involving all parties is in the works.

The Schaumburg Park District also has met with residents from Sheffield Park who have complained about a weed infested drainage ditch in their neighborhood. Here Levitt and Sons, the developer, donated the land, a ditch, to the park district for recreational use. The ditch runs behind a swimming pool built as a private club.

Park officials have tried to cut this area, but damp weather has made it all but impossible to get to it.

In any case, it appears as though some of the major weed problems may be growing toward solutions soon.

'Life' On Canvas

Painting Must Be 'Right' For Buyer

by JERRY THOMAS

"If a painting is not right for a purchaser I will not sell it to that person for any price," said artist Robert L. Freeman of Schaumburg.

"On the other hand if a work communicates to a buyer, I'll see that it is priced so that he can afford it," he added.

Freeman said his attitude may sound arbitrary, but explained he feels his canvases take life when they are worked, and must transmit a feeling the owner can live with.

As an impressionist, Freeman suggests, rather than making positive statements with oil on some of his canvases. But on others he is bold and commanding using a palette knife application of oils combined with oil brushwork.

Freeman works with all medias of artistry on canvas.

HE DRAWS ON experiences remembered from his travels throughout South America and the United States for subject material.

"My imagination provides me with a continuous supply of material that ranges from clowns, underwater scenes, seas, vegetation, street and carnival scenes and landscapes," said the artist.

Freeman, 39, and his wife Dorothy live at 911 Walnut Ln. when they are not traveling for pleasure or on the way to an art show. The Freemans exhibit at a minimum of 25 shows a year, and Freeman's work has been shown in several one man shows in this area.

He will participate in the Woodfield Shopping Center Art Show Sept. 30 and

Oct. 1 in Schaumburg, and his work will hang in the new wing of the Schaumburg Township Public Library at 20 Library Ln., Schaumburg, throughout the month of November.

"DOROTHY ACTS AS my best critic," said the husband, admitting ruefully her comments are not always what he wants to hear.

"If it's good, and most of his work is, I tell him. But I'm not afraid to say it's lousy and will argue the point if I have to," said Mrs. Freeman.

"I may do the brushwork but my wife is a part of every canvas," said Freeman. "We work together," he added.

"My job is to see that our life is organized so that my husband can work and think," said Mrs. Freeman.

Freeman said not all his work is accepted by the public, but he feels compelled to produce what he calls a record of the times.

In some paintings he has shown the technology and moods of the country, regardless of the horror they sometimes evoke from his critics.

"Some of my work showing pollution, poverty and protestors turned people away from my display in Springfield. However, it's a picture I must capture, as well as the beauty around us," said Freeman.

Freeman, who has lived in the Midwest most of his life is a professional painter and layout designer, for a suburban newspaper. He began painting at age 12, attending both the American Academy of Fine Arts, and the Art Institute of Chicago.

WIELDING A PALETTE knife, Schaumburg artist Robert L. Freeman introduces dimension to a canvas he is working on in the studio of his home at

FISH Seeking An Area Chapter

FISH, a volunteer community service group, is trying to establish a chapter in the Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg area.

Mrs. Karen Murphy, an organizer of the group, said FISH is primarily designed to provide emergency services to families in the area. The name comes from a Biblical symbol for Christians.

FISH volunteers would be available for babysitting, cooking meals or cleaning houses on a temporary basis in an emergency, she said. The group also will operate a referral service for persons with drug problems or in need of medical advice.

Persons who are interested in learning more about serving as volunteers with the group are asked to call Mrs. Murphy at 882-2373 or Meriahawn Shrigley at 894-7427 for more information.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp. joined American Motors in refusing Nixon administration pressure to cut back price increase requests on 1973 models to recover the cost of adding anti-pollution and safety hardware.

A Federal grand jury indicted Daniel Moore, former U.S. deputy comptroller of the currency, on charges of mis-handling $6.1 million in bank funds, securities and obligations.

Sen. George S. McGovern, smarting under White House charges that he may have jeopardized Vietnam peace negotiations, charged that it was President Nixon who was interfering by sending Henry Kissinger on a "global junket." McGovern, in Wisconsin, said the Kissinger trip from Paris to Saigon was designed to manipulate public opinion.

Presidential Adviser Henry Kissinger and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu met for more than two hours in Saigon, but details of their Vietnam War talks were cloaked in secrecy.

The State

Tricia Nixon Cox trudged through the stifling heat, throngs of sweaty well-wishers and musty swine and cattle barns at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield in an effort to help reelect her father and give the state GOP ticket a boost.

The Illinois Electoral Board postponed ruling on whether Communist party and Socialist Workers party slates will be allowed on the ballot in November.

Governor Richard B. Ogilvie said he would conduct a "person-to-person" campaign from the tip of Southern Illinois to Chicago — by camper. His Democratic opponent, Daniel Walker, walked the length of the state last year, more than 1,000 miles.

The World

Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer adjourned the 15th game of their world chess championship with Spassky's king in check after 40 moves.

Twelve African countries have indicated they will withdraw from the 20th Olympic Summer Games if Rhodesia participates, according to Willy Daume, president of the organizing committee.

Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, chief negotiator of the Viet Cong delegation at the Vietnam peace talks, said she agreed with President Nixon's political opponents that he missed a chance to make peace when he took office in 1969.

The War

U.S. earplanes seized advantage of the best flying weather in weeks and swarmed over North and South Vietnam with almost 700 strikes in two days, the U.S. command reported. South Vietnamese marines clashed several times with the North Vietnamese around the demolished provincial capital of Quang Tri.

Teachers Work On Way For Faith In Classroom

by CINDY TEW

Fear and insecurity are reasons for faith. Faith is a cultural adjustment.

The statements could have been made by atheists listing reasons not to believe in God. They were made, however, by a group of St. Viator High School teachers — wrestling with how, or if, to incorporate faith in the classroom.

Besides restructuring St. Viator High School curriculum, the teachers are taking a new attitude to their classroom. Instead of the traditional impersonal student-teacher relationship, the teachers are trying to provide for more individualization and a more meaningful relationship with students.

The past week has been a series of seminars on religious dimensions of teaching for the teachers.

"Expressing our own faith perspective is difficult. Religion is a personal thing," said the Rev. John Linnan, from the Center of Religion and Life, University of Nevada. "But we must be aware of our own feelings, and realize our fears to be able to deal with our students who are just starting to question their existence."

Seminars including intense religious discussions have provided an interesting week for some teachers, a tormenting week for others and a boring week for some.

"I think we have come to a beginning," said Rev. Linnan on Wednesday. "We are beginning to explore faith together as believers and doubters."

At the same time, teachers have been developing curriculum for their particular group. The group emphasizing man and his relation to society in their curriculum has found polar viewpoints on some issues. Heated discussions are not uncommon.

"I should have said this yesterday, but it really bothered me that you were drawing football plays for the past few days — you don't seem to be with us," one teacher challenged another.

The challenged teacher explained that he felt his ideas, which are more liberal than his fellow group members were being discarded or altered so badly that it was hopeless to participate in the conversations.

Marla Richardson, who is Jewish, admitted that she was jealous of her challenged colleague who could find something else to do when the discussion got boring.

"All this discussion on religion is not really relevant to me," Mrs. Richardson said. She is a Spanish teacher, and feels that since Spanish is a skill course she can keep theology out of it.

Other teachers, who run the religious gamut from Catholic clergymen to atheists, enjoy the discussions out of curiosity. Some like the soul-searching questions presented.

"We managed to evade discussing religion for the first 40 minutes," one discussion leader said.

"We decided that faith should be a positive thing, full of joy and hopefulness," another discussion leader reported.

Though the religion aspect of the seminar hasn't been the most enjoyable for Mrs. Richardson, she believes the process of sharing professional experience and grinding out a curriculum together has been rewarding.

"It hasn't been easy working with our own peers in intense sessions, but we've done it," she said. "It can work with students, too."

Water Recycling Helps Shell Oil Obtain Board OK

Use of a water recycling system aided Shell Oil Co. in obtaining Schaumburg Village Board approval for a car wash facility to be located on Higgins Road at Mall Drive.

A second petitioner, Woodfield and Associates, proposing to build and then lease a car wash to the McClellan Corp., was denied the special use needed and asked to resubmit a request for approval if the lessee would consider a recycling system.

SHELL OIL plans to use a system that would recycle 80 per cent of the water used in the car wash and includes no phosphate cleaning agents.

Representatives of Woodfield Associates said McClellan did not propose recycling. During a zoning meeting requesting special use, they said effective recycling equipment did not exist in today's market.

The board disputed this statement. It also was concerned that the 4-stall

McClellan car wash proposed between Woodfield Road and the mall's overhead water tank would seriously endanger the shopping center's water supply.

TRUSTEE DENIS Ledgerwood, using the petitioner's figures, estimated the car wash could use 32,000 gallons of water a day. Since the water would not be recycled, it would have to be dumped into sanitary sewers, he said.

Mayor Robert O. Atcher told the Woodfield representative to further research his information and to ascertain if sewers in the area can handle the runoff from the car wash.

The trustees said they were impressed with the McClellan Corporation landscaping and building design. Atcher and the trustees deferred action on the Woodfield petition with the mayor saying "bring back answers to assure us you aren't going to do yourself out of water, and we will reconsider your request."

Athletic Meeting Slated

A meeting between directors of all athletic organizations and Hoffman Estates Park District Dir. Al Binder is being planned for early September.

The meeting would be a first step toward establishing a committee to coordinate all athletic programs in the Hoffman Estates area.

In a letter to all sports officials, Binder said he is thinking of an organization that would "provide a service that will assure Hoffman Estates residents that their athletic needs will be satisfied at maximum efficiency, but at minimum cost."

Outlining some of the services the organization might be able to provide, Binder said it could ensure all persons the opportunity to participate in the athletic activity of their choice, avoid unnecessary duplication of services, review and approve budgets, evaluate programs, approve any new services or programs and prepare a master schedule for all athletic groups.

Binder was quick to point out the new organization would not remove any responsibility from any existing organization, but rather better define what the responsibilities are.

Binder suggested the committee would include representatives from baseball, softball, football and hockey programs, as well as from school districts 54 and 211 and two persons not directly associated with sports programs. He said the park district would act as chairman of the group.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. Sept. 11.

Groundbreaking At Hoffman Plaza

A groundbreaking ceremony Saturday will mark the beginning of construction of the $3 million expansion of Hoffman Plaza, Roselle and Higgins roads.

Mayor Fred Downey of Hoffman Estates, village mgr., George Longmeyer and village trustees are expected to attend the 10 a.m. ceremony.

Tenants at Hoffman Plaza will include the U.S. Post Office, Jewel Foods, Denny's Restaurant, Willie Home Center, Goodyear Auto Service Center, and Ace Hardware, said Irving Kupferberg, managing partner of the plaza.

The first construction phase will be finished this winter, Kupferberg said. Denny's Restaurant, Jewel Foods, and Valweiland, will open during the winter.

The post office and Goodyear Service Center will open when the second phase is finished, sometime in the late spring or summer of 1973.

Kupferberg and some of the new tenants will also be on hand for the ceremony.

Announce Leaders In King, Queen Contest

Marcia Adams, Elizabeth Glazak and Sarah Flanagan are the present leaders in the Schaumburg Woman's Club contest to choose a queen for the village Septemberfest Sept. 4.

At a penny a vote, leading King contestants are Chris Wagner, Jeffrey Crosswell and Jamie Hansen.

Pictures of the children, all under three years old, are on display at the Jewel and True-Value Hardware in Weathersfield Commons; Baskin-Robbins, Plaster Palace, and Boutique Coffees West in Schaumburg Plaza and at the Town Square Pharmacy.

Winners of the contest will ride in the parade on Labor Day.

Mrs. Lester Grady is chairman of the event, and may be contacted for further information at 394-6004.

Book Fee Payment Day Is August 30

Parents of children who will attend the elementary and junior high schools of Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 are reminded that Wednesday Aug. 30 has been scheduled as book fee payment day.

Parents are asked to go to the school their child will attend and pay book rental and other fees. Teacher and room assignments for the 1972-73 school year will be available. Students who are eligible for bus transportation also will receive bus assignments and routes on that day.

Book rental fee and weekly newspaper cost will be $8.25 for children in grades one through six. Junior high school student fees will be $8.75 to cover book rental and newspaper cost. There also is an optional $3.75 towel fee for all students in seventh and eighth grades. The kindergarten fee is $3.75 per child. There has been no increase in book rental and towel fees over last year.

STUDENT ACCIDENT insurance will again be offered, and may be purchased on a voluntary basis. Brochures explaining the program will be sent home with students during the first week of school.

Book fee payment hours are 9 to 11:30 a.m. for people with last names beginning with letters A-L and 1 to 3 p.m. for those with last names beginning with M-Z. Fees also may be paid at each school 7 to 9 p.m. the same day.

Parents of kindergarten children who have been assigned to schools other than the ones in their neighborhoods may pay fees at either their neighborhoods or assigned schools.

Still under construction but expected to be completed by the first day of school is Dist. 54's 22nd school, the John Muir Elementary school, located on a site in the Barrington Square-Hilldale Village area of Hoffman Estates.

Families new to the area who have not enrolled their children may do so at their neighborhood schools beginning Thursday.

Developers Given 3 Weeks To Correct Drainage System

By LYNN ASINOF

Cook County Circuit Judge Daniel Covelli has given developers involved in the long-standing Cambridge subdivision drainage dispute three weeks to improve their temporary drainage system in the Jackson Drive area.

At a hearing Wednesday, Covelli ruled that the present system is not adequately draining the area and is partially responsible for the serious flooding that occurred during heavy rains earlier this summer.

The present drainage system was built as part of an agreement among Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, three developers and some private citizens. The agreement supposedly ended a series of lawsuits over flooding in the area.

The suit, however, was reopened earlier this year when Harold Haar, a Jackson Drive property owner, claimed that the drainage system had now alleviated the flooding.

According to Fred Hillman, executive vice president of Chesterfield Builders, a court investigation revealed two reasons why the drainage system was not working. Part of the problem, according to Hillman, stems from a dam Haar built across his property. The dam reportedly obstructed the natural flow of water in the area.

More important, said Hillman, the drainage system was not doing its job. "The drainage ditch was not being adequately maintained, so that an awful lot of silt had built up," he said.

Hillman also said that when Lake Construction Co. began work on Lakeside Villas west of Jackson Drive, they filled in approximately 75 per cent of the temporary storage area.

Although Chesterfield no longer owns any of the property involved, they were responsible for putting in the first temporary drainage system. Therefore they have remained in the suit along with Zale and Richard J. Brown, Inc., which built Cambridge.

AT HEARINGS last week, Covelli instructed Haar to remove the dirt dam from his property to allow for natural water drainage. Haar has complied with this order by removing most of the dam.

In order to correct the rest of the problem, engineers involved with the suit devised a plan for rerouting the drainage away from Jackson Drive to connect with Zale's retention basin.

Plans for this rerouting include extending and cleaning out the present drainage ditch. Buffalo Grove Eng. Arnold Seaberg said reexcavating the ditch would "improve it to the point where water will flow as it should."

Seaberg said Buffalo Grove also wants Cambridge to improve a temporary storage basin at the southeast corner of the subdivision and connect it to the drainage ditch.

JUDGE COVELLI gave Chesterfield Builders three weeks to complete the new system. He said that if action was not taken with that time, he would issue an injunction stopping all construction by Chesterfield and Zale. A hearing will be held Sept. 7 to determine if proper action has been taken.

The temporary drainage system, however, is not expected to prevent flooding in the area. "The unfortunate part of this thing is that from the Cambridge Country-side manhole to the bottom of our temporary drainage area, the gradient is quite shallow," Hillman said.

He explained that because the water has little place to go, it backs up into Cambridge and runs over Lakeside Villas and Jackson Drive.

"The best situation is to provide a pipe system in that area," Hillman said. He added that Chesterfield had earlier attempted to obtain easements through Haar's property for sewer pipes, but that Haar had asked $15,000 for the easement rights.

COVELLI HAS instructed Zale engineers to study the problem and determine the most feasible route for a pipe system in the area. Once a route is mapped, Zale and Wheeling officials will negotiate for easement rights.

Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer said plans for a pipe sewer system had been thwarted because residents in the area were asking "outrageous prices" for easement rights.

He said that under state law, villages now have the right to condemn land outside their boundaries to install sewers pipes and the like.

Assistance From Twp. Is Life Saver

by DAVE MAHSMAN

Township public assistance can be called a short-term life saver that will keep a family above financial waters until a rescue ship of funds comes from the county, state or federal government.

For example, a partially blind mother of five was recently deserted by her husband. She applied for Cook County assistance, but funds from that source would take more time than she could afford. She turned to Wheeling Township for help.

The same day the woman came into Wheeling Town Hall, she got $25 worth of food orders to feed her hungry family and $10 cash to do the laundry, which totalled $85 for food and $20 for laundry. Help from the township stopped two weeks later as quickly as it had begun when she got her first assistance check from the county.

Wheeling Township gave away some $23,000 of its budgeted $46,110 for general assistance during the 1971-72 fiscal year, said Fran Brossett, who handles most of the welfare cases. She explained that budgeted amounts are usually in excess of spending, because the township must be ready for any emergency that might arise. She added that funds left at the end of the fiscal year are carried over into the next year. This year's budget allows $52,650 for assistance.

"WE WILL definitely spend more this year than last (on general assistance)," Mrs. Brossett said. She explained that there is "greater demand" for the welfare benefits. The township's population is constantly increasing, and more town-

LOOKING OVER POST CARDS she might like to send home to England, Shirley Tyson, center, gets suggestions from Claudia, left, and Diane Claeys of Arlington Heights. Shirley is living with the Marvin Claeys family until next July. She is in this country as part of the foreign exchange program offered by the American Field Service (AFS). Shirley will be attending Wheeling High School this fall and will be Diane's "little sister."

Claudia, who is enrolled at Western Illinois University (WIU), will be studying in Madrid, Spain for the entire school year. The Claeys learned about the need for homes for foreign exchange students from an article in the Herald, and informed the AFS of their interest. According to everyone involved "the matchup couldn't have been better."

AFS Student Arrives From England

Visitor To Get Fill Of Hamburgers

by RICH HONACK

When school starts in a few weeks at Wheeling High School, there will be a new member of the senior class. Shirley Tyson, 17, will be attending WHS for the first time. In fact it will be the first time Shirley has ever attended an American high school.

That's because she has just arrived in this country from Cumberland, England, a town in the northern half of that country.

She is here as part of the American Field Service (AFS) student exchange program.

Shirley will be making her home with the Marvin Claeys family, 904 W. Hintz Rd., Arlington Heights. According to the visiting British lassie, "They are breaking me into the states little by little."

SHIRLEY ARRIVED in the United States last week along with 62 other foreign students. At New York the students enjoyed displaying their customs and talked over what they thought the U.S.

would be like.

"When we first got here we couldn't believe the size of the cars. They are all so big, and there are so many. Everyone was amazed," she said.

It was also in New York that the young visitor was introduced to the "hamburger." "We ordered hamburgers wherever we went. I find them very delicious," she said laughingly.

From New York began what seemed to Shirley a never-ending trip to Naperville. "We boarded the coach (that's a bus to us) and rode for more than 19 hours. And all we could see as we rode were miles of flat land," she said disappointedly.

IT SEEMS, according to Mrs. Claeys, that the students crossed the more mountainous regions of the east coast at night and were unable to see the Allegheny Mountains.

When she arrived in Naperville Shirley was greeted by several students from Wheeling High School, as well as her foster family. However, what she didn't know was that she had yet another hour of Coach riding ahead.

This time, however, the ride was in Jack Kinsey's youth group bus and was a little less boring than the first ride. Since then however, Shirley has been driven by car or walked to most places in the area.

Also since her arrival in Arlington Heights she has noticed a few things about the American way of life.

"ONE OF THE MAIN things I've noticed is the amount of Coca Cola that people drink. We have lower age limits for drinking alcoholic beverages in Cumberland, so hardly anyone has soft drinks," she said.

She's also noted that things in "the states" are much bigger and newer than things in Cumberland. "I don't know if that means they're better — I'll have to wait and see."

Another point Shirley noticed since her arrival is the television programming in Arthur "Bud" Miller, First Asst. Fire Chief in Wheeling, died Wednesday in Highland Park Hospital, after suffering a heart attack Monday night.

Koepen said the department has suffered a great loss in Miller's death. "He was someone you could always count on. He was my assistant since I took over as chief, and it is a personal loss for me."

THE 45-YEAR old fireman owned the Jeffery Bowling Lanes in Wheeling since 1964. Aside from the fire department, he was also a member of the Amvets Post 66 and the Des Plaines Elks 1526.

He is survived by his son Jeffrey, and sisters, Mrs. Ardith Laurence and Mrs. Marilyn Kelm of Wheeling and Mrs. Donna Jean Sanders of Palatine.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

General Motors Corp and Chrysler Corp. joined American Motors in refusing Nixon administration pressure to cut back price increase requests on 1973 models to recover the cost of adding anti-pollution and safety hardware.

A Federal grand jury indicted Daniel Moore, former U.S. deputy controller of the currency, on charges of mis-handling $8.1 million in bank funds, securities and obligations.

Sen. George S. McGovern, smarting under White House charges that he may have jeopardized Vietnam peace negotiations, charged that it was President Nixon who was interfering by sending Henry Kissinger on a "global junket." McGovern, in Wisconsin, said the Kissinger trip from Paris to Saigon was designed to manipulate public opinion.

Presidential Adviser Henry Kissinger and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu met for more than two hours in Saigon, but details of their Vietnam War talks were cloaked in secrecy.

The State

William G. Karnes, a trustee of the University of Illinois, resigned Thursday in the wake of conflict-of-interest charges by the student newspaper. The newspaper carried a story July 21 making the accusations against Karnes, the chairman of Beatrice Foods Co. of Chicago because the food company had contracts with the university.

The Illinois Electoral Board postponed ruling on whether Communist party and Socialist Workers party slates will be allowed on the ballot in November.

Governor Richard B. Ogilvie said he would conduct a "person-to-person" campaign from the tip of Southern Illinois to Chicago — by camper. His Democratic opponent, Daniel Walker, walked the length of the state last year, more than 1,000 miles.

The World

Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer adjourned the 15th game of their world chess championship with Spassky's king in check after 40 moves.

Twelve African countries have indicated they will withdraw from the 20th Olympic Summer Games if Rhodesia participates, according to Willy Daume, president of the organizing committee.

Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, chief negotiator of the Viet Cong delegation at the Vietnam peace talks, said she agreed with President Nixon's political opponents that he missed a chance to make peace when he took office in 1969.

The War

U.S. earplanes seized advantage of the best flying weather in weeks and swarmed over North and South Vietnam with almost 700 strikes in two days, the U.S. command reported. South Vietnamese marines clashed several times with the North Vietnamese around the demolished provincial capital of Quang Tri.

Student-Carpenters Gave This House Attention

by WANDALYN RICE

No house has ever gotten as close attention from a group of carpenters as has Chester Sponder's summer home near Lake Geneva.

The house, in the Abbey Springs condominium development, was built by 12 students from Forest View High School in the district's first in home construction.

As the students worked last week to finish their project to the tune of rock music blaring from a radio, they devoted time to details. Two boys spent more than 20 minutes hanging a bedroom door to make sure it was just right.

By the time the students finished Saturday, the major carpentry was done, and Sponder from Park Ridge, needed only to do finishing work. The house should be finished by late this month.

THE STUDENTS, supervised by Forest View teachers James MacDonald and Grant Winsauer, spent eight-hour days on the project and their nights at a church camp near Conference Point, Wis. Sponder paid for materials, room and board for the students and the lot on which the house was built.

"Once we're finished, we will have the house appraised and then we can look at our bills and see how much money we saved," MacDonald said. He estimated that Sponder spent $20,000 on materials.

The project began last fall as a brainstorm by MacDonald and Winsauer. They found a willing client and their class set about designing the house.

Some of the students had taken earlier classes in mechanical drawing; others had taken wood-working, but all the students worked on both the design and building of the house, MacDonald said.

"They designed to the client's wishes. They originally came up with four designs. This house is almost exactly like one of the designs, except we had to eliminate the basement," he said.

THE ACTUAL construction proceeded smoothly this summer, the teachers said, with only 1 1/2 days delay because of weather. The biggest problem at first was the muddy roads leading through the development to the building site.

"We prefabricated the walls in 24-foot sections and then hauled them up here by truck," MacDonald said. "but the roads were so muddy, the truck sank and it took two 'cats' to pull it out."

The students quickly threw themselves into their work, he added, and those who had taken wood-working before taught the others.

"It's fantastic to watch kids who've never had a bit of wood-working learn to work at almost the same level as the kids who had it," MacDonald said. "It's a real pleasure to work with kids like this because you can really see how much they've learned."

The job has not been only work for the boys, however. At the camp they have found time in the evenings to play golf, go boating and generally relax.

"The really surprising thing is how much energy they have at the end of the day," MacDonald said. "Also because the kids are living together for 24 hours a day, I think they've learned a lot just from that."

AND THE TWO teachers are already looking for a project for next year. They plan to have 20 students in this class in the fall and to take 12 of them somewhere to build another house during the summer.

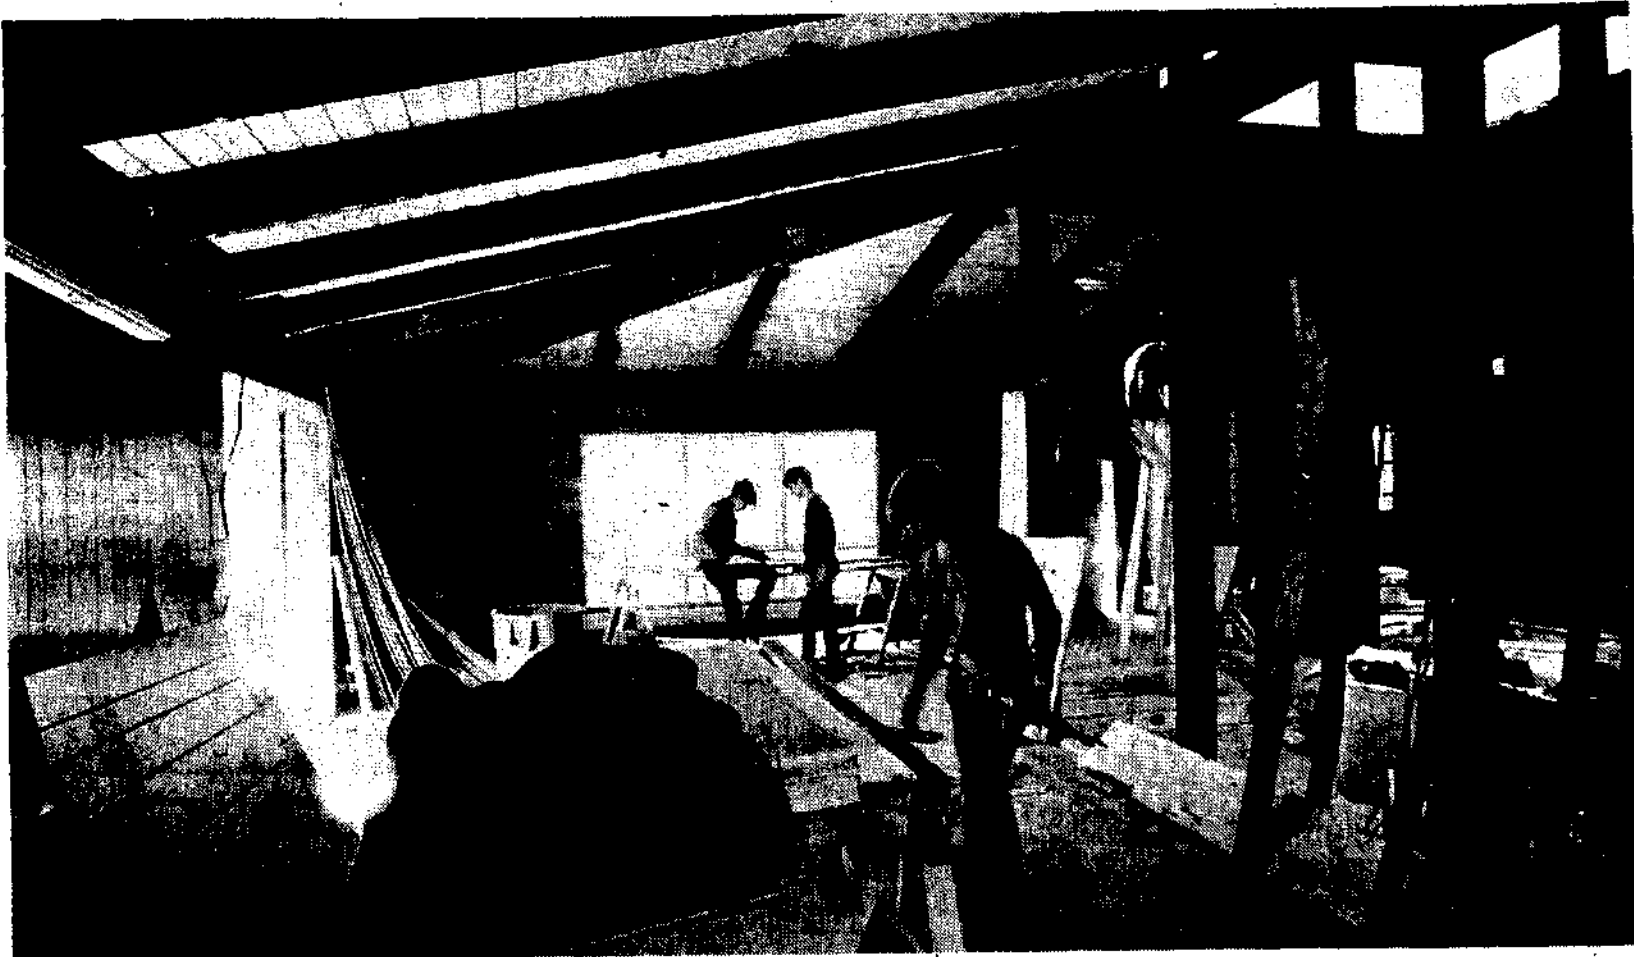

"I'm hoping we can build in this area again," MacDonald said. "We have been asked to build on the lot right across the road here."

But some of the persons who have seen the students work have bigger ideas, MacDonald said. "One guy wanted us to build 18 condominiums for him and said he would build us a factory where we could do it."

The house is tucked into the trees.

FRESH FROM HIS movie debut in "The Balance Sheet," checks some film cases while on the job at Novo Air-freight, Elk Grove Village, where he has been employed as a salesman for five years — three in a wheelchair.

In Need Of Help? Just Call For Pete Smith

by MARY HUTCHINGS
Pete Smith is going to frame his first movie contract and wait for Hollywood to call.

On a 24-hour pass from a recent hospital stay, he starred in his first film, "The Balance Sheet," made by Creative Establishment of Chicago.

The film will be distributed by the Governor's Commission on Employment of the Handicapped, of which Smith is an active and influential member.

Pete Smith is probably better known to Hoffman Estates residents as the civic leader who is responsible for the village's model ordinance — the first in Illinois — which requires that public buildings be architecturally accessible to the handicapped.

Smith was stricken with multiple sclerosis more than three years ago. Though he now may dream of a motorized wheelchair, he said the only difference in his life "is that it takes me a little longer to get from Point A to Point B. A transportation problem — that's all."

His attitude toward his handicap is inspirational to those who meet him as he wheels in and out of civic activities in the village.

"THE ONLY PERSON who is handicapped is the one who thinks he is," Smith said, radiating an inner strength and confidence that convinces and charms the listener.

"The day of the shut-ins is gone," he added. "If I have any message I could get up on a soapbox and preach, it's 'get out and enjoy life. Come on in, the water's fine.'"

The man familiar to parade-goers as the guy "skating" in his wheel chair behind the Jaycee car has long gotten over the "Why me?" period.

Smith's acceptance of what most would call a drastic change in his lifestyle is so remarkably good and his enthusiasm for "getting involved in anything you want" is so contagious his doctor sometimes asks him to talk with other patients.

"If anyone thinks life is passing them by, please call me," Smith offered. He's happy to help people buy wheelchairs and then teach them the fine points of "driving" one.

A salesman for Novo Airfreight in Elk Grove Village, the father of four drives himself to work in a station wagon designed with hand controls. He joked that his home at 402 Kingsdale houses a "two-chair" family — one for the home that allows him to get close to things, and one for the road, sturdy enough to bounce down curbs and do "wheelies" up them.

AN AVID CHICAGO Bears' fan, he didn't miss a home game last year, and with sons Bob, 12, and Patrick (P.J.) 6, will be rooting them on again this year.

His favorite sport, though, is "mental gymnastics."

It's hard to believe Smith when he describes himself as an "egotist," but he can quickly and accurately sense a person's "basic motivating factor" and readily admits that "fan" letters make him happy.

After the passing of the Hoffman Estates ordinance, his mail included inquiries into how to go about passing similar laws elsewhere, as well as anonymous "thank you's" from the handicapped and the elderly.

With the ranks of the handicapped being swelled here with the return of injured Vietnam veterans, Smith said the ramps and railings required in public buildings by the local ordinance will become even more important.

He praised the design of Woodfield, which "allows the handicapped to spend his money just as well as anybody else," and he's probably one of the few who has noticed the cut-away curbs on Michigan Avenue downtown and the half dozen Loop buildings with the "accessible to the handicapped" symbol.

Smith said he "couldn't make it without the help of my wife — my super-partner." His two daughters, Donna, 13, and Susie, 9, as well as the boys, the dog and two pet mice, keep the household busy. Smith included the Jaycees who "won't let me be handicapped."

Elgin Officials Protest Report

Officials at Elgin State Hospital said yesterday they would prepare a detailed response to a state legislative subcommittee report which called the Elgin institution a "blemish" on the state mental health system.

Douglas Norcross, administrative assistant for hospital director Dr. Daniel A. Manelli said the hospital intends to study the full report and prepare a response for the Illinois General Assembly within a month.

Norcross added he had seen the full report. He said the subcommittee, headed by State Sen. Frank M. Ozinga, R-Evergreen Park, held two hearings at the hospital.

Norcross declined to comment on why the hospital was so severely criticized.

THE 16-PAGE REPORT, submitted to Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie Wednesday, stated, "Elgin has become a blemish on the record of a state mental health system that has otherwise taken giant strides forward in recent years." The report stated the quality of care has risen recently because of decreased patient loads and the establishment of halfway houses and nursing homes.

"In light of these rising standards of care, the conditions at Elgin can be termed deplorable and intolerable," the report stated.

OZINGA'S SUB-COMMITTEE, is part of the Legislative Committee to Visit and Examine State Institutions, made visits to the hospital in March, April and May.

Among the specific criticisms of the hospital were that it has inadequate and deteriorating physical facilities, lapses in safety and sanitary standards, ineffective security and patient supervision and poor preparation and follow-up for patients transferred out of Elgin.

Defense Charges Panther Is 'Evasive'

Defense Atty. Thomas Sullivan says a Black Panther party member who has been under cross examination in the trial of Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan for the past three days was giving evasive answers and he planned to cross examine the witness again Thursday.

Sullivan, one of several defense attorneys defending Hanrahan and 13 others against charges of conspiring to obstruct justice, told Circuit Court Judge Philip Romiti Wednesday that Panther member Harold Bell's "attitude is to evade giving honest answers."

Bell, a survivor of the Dec. 4, 1969, police raid on an apartment in which Black Panther party leaders Mark Clark and Fred Hampton were killed, is a key witness because the defense alleges his courtroom accounts of the raid differ from accounts he gave a Black Panther attorney.

The conspiracy charges against Hanrahan and the 13 others stem from the raid.

Bell testified Wednesday that he purchased six guns within six months before the raid, but denied he or fellow Panthers handled weapons during the raid.

Sullivan quoted portions of a statement Bell purportedly gave to Francis Andrews, a Panther attorney, on Dec. 21, 1969, but Bell disavowed all remarks attributed to him in the statement.

Bell denied he had ever said he took a shotgun from an apartment bedroom used by Hampton and also denied handling any weapon during the raid.

He told Sullivan he bought two shotguns, a rifle, a revolver and an automatic pistol within six months before the raid and that he bought another shotgun less than one month after the raid.

Questions asked by Sullivan were so detailed that Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears interrupted to object that "the type of soft drink and whether they the Panther apartment occupants had beans or spaghetti and who prepared the foods is irrelevant."

Sox game with Oakland, certainly the most newsworthy game in Chicago. They did the same thing Monday morning after casually leading off with the Sox on Sunday. But on Monday they started with the Cubs again just because they won another who-cares game from New York. Obviously the guy who writes those Saturday and Monday reports needs a course on news judgment.

FAN: GOD'S LIGHTS NO GOOD

Dear Sirs:
It seems to me that an American Legion State Tournament should be played on a lighted baseball diamond. Last Sunday Arlington Heights had to play a game at 9 a.m. This is inexcusable to me. Here's the area team — the best money draw in the tourney — playing at such a terrible hour. Most good Christians are about to or are worshipping God at that time.

From reading the article on the game, I missed a good one. But being away from my family all week necessitates being home on a Sunday morning. From what I understand, only a couple hundred saw the game, but can you imagine the number had it been played at 8 p.m. instead? I'd venture to guess that a thousand would have turned out.

In such a wealthy area as the Northwest Suburbs is, you'd think that there would be at least one hardball diamond with lights. We need it more than another hockey rink, village officials!!!

SOX BLACKED OUT

Dear Sirs:
Many Sox fans, including myself, were outraged when the team's regular television station WFLD (Channel 32) failed to televise the recent crucial series at Oakland. This was the most important series for the Sox in five years and the biggest for either Chicago team in two years — and no TV whatsoever for four games. It was a double crime because three of the games were thrillers. Before WFLD's following broadcast, they used the excuse that Oakland did not have adequate equipment to borrow and Channel 32 could not transport its equipment in time. I'm not sure if this is a valid reason or not, but the Sox play in Oakland again in September and I'm sure that series will be even more important. The station has plenty of time before then to make special arrangements, so they had better have the games on. If they don't, they aren't worth two cents.

P.S.: Could the blackout have anything to do with the fact that WFLD's contract with the Sox ends after this season?

Road Run Set For Tuesday

The third annual Des Plaines Park District Runners and Joggers road race will be held Tuesday, Aug. 22, starting at 7:00 p.m. at Lake Opeka. The grade school, girls' and ladies' divisions will run one-half mile. The junior high and men over 40 will run one mile. The freshmen, sophomores, varsity, men over 30, and open divisions will run a five-and-one-half mile course through the streets of Des Plaines. There is a 50 cent entry fee and the run is open to all interested runners.

Last year 75 runners from all over the Chicago area finished the race despite a heavy rainstorm that came when the runners were half way through their course. John Keane, Maine East standout and now of Illinois State, won the open division followed by his Illinois State teammate and former Ridgewood High School star, Fred Beck. The varsity division was won by Warrior Brad Frost.

33-Team Field Challenges Golden Acres CC Sunday

by PAUL LOGAN

A decade ago a team from St. Raymond's took all the glory.

A half dozen summers ago it was a Tioga VFW team that turned the trick.

Late Sunday afternoon — barring pesky weather — the third championship team will be crowned at Golden Acres Country Club, site of the 23rd annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament.

A field of 33 teams, two more than the all-time high of last year at a Buffalo Grove Golf Club, will be on hand to challenge two of the nines on this 27-hole layout — the Red and the White courses. Mixed foursomes will begin teeing off simultaneously on both courses beginning at 10 a.m. (See teeoff schedule elsewhere in the sports section.)

The Red Nine appears to be the toughest of the two tests. Slightly longer (165 yards), the Red has more out of bounds possibilities. Water also comes into play a little more, especially since the summer's heavy rains have bloated the ponds and creeks.

"With wet conditions, the course is going to play a lot longer," warns Lew Janis, the course professional. If all the tee markers are moved back, the 18-hole layout measures 6365 yards and a par 72. A few days of dry weather, however, and quite a few of the holes will shrink in size.

Janis says the best birdie hole on the

Lew Janis

White is the eighth, a 285-yard par 4.

"It's a nice short breather type par 4," says Janis. "There are not many problems. In other words, if your tee shot is slightly to the right, you'll get past the mound. You'll catch it if you hook the ball too much."

If you do post a three on the eighth, you might need the extra stroke saved on the ninth.

"It's a long par 4," says Janis of the 460-yard test. "It's 460 yards and it IS just that. It's extra long compared to most of them. It's a backbreaker."

Janis tabs the sixth hole on the Red course as being the most demanding. Running adjacent to Roselle Road, this 440-yard test will make slicers sweat every step of the way because of the out of bounds. Then there's a creek guarding the approach with ponds and weeping willows behind and on the left of the green. Also, a large green with subtle breaks can make a 10-foot putt tougher than you might think.

The par 4, 324-yard fourth hole is the easiest, according to Janis. If your drive stays to the right, it's a short pitch and a put.

Although the scorecard lists quite a few short par fours and fives, Janis doesn't think the golfers will romp over the course.

"You've got some easy, type holes and yet you can still get mixed up," says this veteran club pro. "Most of the greens have a lot of undulation."

When golfers need to take a break, a halfway house full of hard and soft refreshment along with plenty of food is located in the center of the course. There is also a grill next to the pro shop in the basement of the clubhouse.

Golden Acres is located about a half mile south of Highway 72 and about a mile south of Highway 58 on Roselle Road.

Sgt. Toefield Rides Herd

A Big Wheel In Olympic Cycling

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK (NEA) — Members of the U.S. Olympic cycling team will readily cough up information that where there's smoke there's Alfred Toefield. Alfred Toefield is a New York City police sergeant who was accused by some cyclists of puffing cigar smoke in their faces during the recent road-racing qualifying run of Lake Luzerne, N.Y.

Toefield is also chairman of the Olympic cycling committee. He was following on motorcycle the 67 bike riders over the 120-mile course: he followed them slowly (puffing) up a mountainside; he followed them at a 60-miles-an-hour plummet down around hairpin curves; he was following to determine which of the helmeted riders had Olympian qualities of aggressiveness, cool-headedness, courage and pedal power.

"Some of 'em are on a big ecology kick, so they say I'm polluting the air," said Toefield. "They make a thing of my cigar-smoking. But they're kidding."

"They know I need an outlet for my nervousness. They know I can't take it out on the pedals like them. So I chew the hell out of my cigar."

Toefield, one hot New York morning, explained this while wiping his square-jawed face with a pink paper towel. He sat in his small office, the decor of which is highlighted by a fly-swatter on his down and around hairpin curves; he was cluttered desk and packets of Alka-Seltzer and a heartburn remedy clipped to cardboard on the wall.

When Sgt. Alfred Toefield is not chairing the cycling committee, he is working with youth gangs, which is why on this warm day he sat with V-necked T-shirt and sneakers. But lately he has spent much time and energy trying to pare down the qualifiers for the 10 track and eight road cyclists he will trundle off to Munich.

"So I've been like Speedy Gonzales," he said. "I clean up my blotter and hustle off, say to San Jose to check on the track qualifiers. We're going to have one of our best teams in years, and we've got a lot of top-notch riders to pick from. It's not like it used to be, where we were second-class athletes. Cyclists here are starting to get dignity."

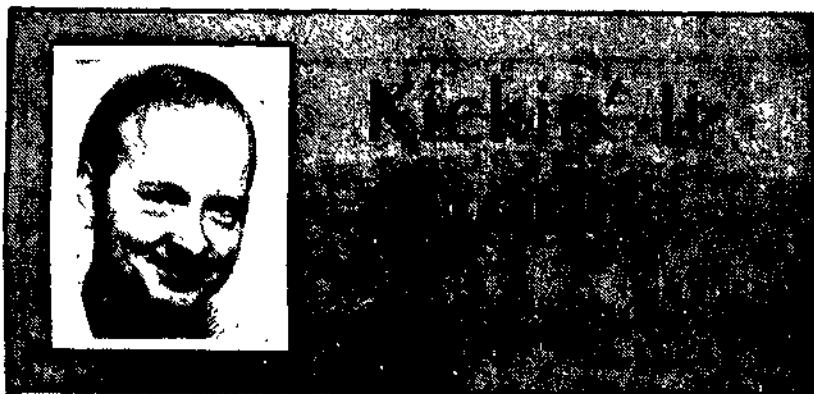

One reason for the new "dignity" is the great resurgence of popularity that cycling has achieved in this country. Another factor for the rise in dignity among cyclists is Sgt. Alfred Toefield.

Since the days when bicycles were built for two and guys wanted to marry a

WHEN THEY LET the kids play baseball, it was quite a show.

They finally settled the state legion tournament Wednesday afternoon, and you can't pack much more drama into a single baseball game.

It was a deserving, stirring victory for a fine Arlington Heights team that just didn't quit after painfully watching a seemingly comfortable lead slip away.

That championship game had to prove one thing to the fans who sat through 12 tension-packed innings. American Legion baseball is for the kids, not the adults. When they let the boys play, it's a flue show.

What transpired prior to that Wednesday showdown in Arlington Heights often bordered on the absurd. The adults took the game from the boys and played their own little games. It was patetically comical at times. You didn't know whether to laugh or cry.

The word "protest" was banded about so many times over that week I was never quite sure who was protesting what — or why. You became fearful that no game would wind to a conclusion without a protest.

The high-caliber performance on the field was often overshadowed by the performance off the field, the backstage huddles, the whispered threats and counter-threats, the telegrams, long distance calls, consultations about the rule book.

I expected columnist Jack Anderson to walk in at any time, pencil and pad in hand.

The staging of the tournament was excellent. The weather admittedly hurt with a couple bouts with the rain, but Gene Sackett and his committee did a great job under demanding circumstances. It's extremely unfortunate that all this arguing had to take some of the glitter away from this sparkling attraction.

You try to do a good job and bring some fine baseball to the area, and the whole show gets bogged down in annoying red tape that should have been taken care of before the first pitch was thrown.

You can't fault the people who brought the tournament to Arlington Heights. They weren't calling the shots on the protests. They were there to stage a tournament, and they did their part.

The major protest of the week was legitimate. You certainly don't want ineligible players in any tournament, but it does make you wonder how closely some of these rosters are examined before a tourney even begins.

If they weren't examined closely by people who know what they're doing, then somebody is very remiss in the proper delegation of authority.

It just boggles the mind that a team such as Chicago Giles could advance through a Cook County tournament and two games of the state before anyone spotted an ineligibility.

The athlete in question was a pitcher with a pretty solid high school reputation, not some kid who threw a couple innings in April on an obscure Chicago field with only his girl friend in the stands.

There obviously has to be a better way of verifying the eligibility of tournament players, a better way of examining the rosters, checking the schools a team draws from.

The coaches at the state didn't see the rosters of the competing teams before the tournament began. Wouldn't it seem logical that the coaches should have copies of the rosters and be allowed some examination on their own before a tournament opens?

Coaches remember names, schools. Maybe nobody will spot an irregularity, but they at least should have a chance to check rosters, ask some questions. They should meet with a roster committee before the first pitch is thrown, not two or three games later.

There were some minor but annoying gripes at the state. People were getting excited about the strangest things. Even the umpires got into the act, arguing among themselves about the color of the shirts they were wearing.

Did you also realize you have to have your uniform numbers a certain size? I haven't really figured out why yet.

With all the other problems, it's staggering that someone actually questioned the size of the number on some uniforms. My eyes aren't that great, but I certainly could read them on all teams. It's not like I was sitting in the top row of the Houston Astrodome.

Frankly, if a team looks presentable in whatever uniform they choose to wear, the size of their numbers hardly seems worthy of debate.

On Saturday an obscure substitute, finally getting his big chance to play in a tourney game, walked to the plate and the opposing coach immediately marched from his dugout and said he was protesting the game. The boy apparently didn't have a proper emblem on his sleeve.

Don't get me wrong. Rules should not be ignored, but there are limits to everything.

Common sense must also dictate at times. If you get so mixed down in petty details, you completely lose sight of what you're trying to achieve with the American Legion program.

Let the kids play baseball.

With all the problems and headaches, the tournament ended Wednesday on a high note with a superb display of baseball and a very worthy champion in Arlington Heights.

Hopefully, there were some lessons learned over this long week.

girl just like the girl that married dear old dad, cyclings had come under public opprobrium. Motorists and cops alike believed that bicycles and baby buggies should be kept on sidewalks. Cops ticked cyclists; motorists took devilish delight in running them off the road.

Now, with a growing concern for ecology, bicycles are thought better than cars as far as congestion, pollution, taxes, accidents and exercise are concerned.

Toefield has also contributed greatly to the image and growth of cycle racing here. Once a cyclist himself, he has for 25 years hustled money from amateur groups and bicycle manufacturers to aid cycle clubs and the Olympic team. He says one of his proudest achievements was getting New York officials to open

Central Park for the 1960 Olympic cycling qualifying run. "It was the first time in history that Central Park was closed to vehicular traffic," he said.

When Toefield's team is assembled he will insist (as he did in '68 and in the last two Pan-Am Games) that his team adhere to strict codes: curfew is usually at 10 p.m.; dress is standard (the makes the cyclists send home all "civilian" clothes). He denies that he runs a "mini" police state.

"What I do is to enhance our image abroad," he says. "I don't want people from other countries thinking that the American is obnoxious."

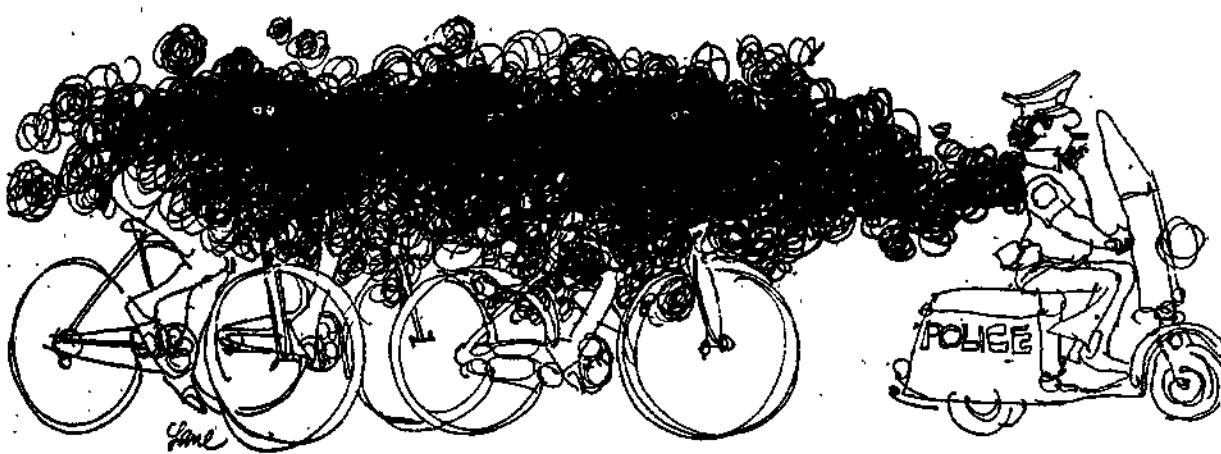

Toefield says that his committee is the only one to send an Olympic member home from the Games. That happened in Mexico City four years ago. Dave Mulky, according to Toefield, broke training rules. "He disputed the idea that we knew more about what was good for him than he did," said Toefield.

One thing Toefield is certain is good for everyone is cycling. "The more we do it," he said, "the healthier we'll be as a nation."

"Like the story I heard the other day, supposed to be true. A big gruff executive was told by his doctor that he should ride to work on a bike. The first day he does it the business tycoon is feeling so good that he comes bounding into the office for the first time in history, says, 'Good morning, everybody!' Four secretaries fainter."

Wells Captures Diamond Honors

Tom Kennelley's second-inning home run was the only hit for the Wells squad in the Des Plaines Little League championship game, but it was enough as Wells hung on to defeat pesky Iroquois 1-0 for the all-city title last Saturday.

Both clubs represented the South Side Little League. Wells had won the South League championship and Iroquois had been runner-up, and both earned their way into the finals by besting entries from the other four leagues in the city.

Wells dumped West League foe Weber 13-1 in the first round and Iroquois romped to a 10-3 decision over the Orioles of Devon-Higgins. Other first-round action included Gleason's, of the Northwest Little League, beating the Sox of Devon-Higgins 5-4, the Elks of the Central League downing West League opponent Rotary 9-1, and Central League's Police ball club ousting Northwest's Ladendorf 8-3.

All winners drew byes for the second round except Wells and Police. John Lownds' sixth-inning homer lifted Wells to a tense 3-2 victory and put Wells into the semi-finals with Gleason's, Elks and Iroquois.

Heavy rains forced postponement of the semis for three days but they were finally staged a week ago with the two South League teams, Wells and Iroquois, posting triumphs over Gleason's (2-0) and Elks (6-3), respectively.

That set the stage for Saturday's heroics by Kennelley. His home run was the only safety surrendered by Iroquois hurler Bill Garesche. But Wells' Phil Edwards limited the losers to one hit himself, an infield single by shortstop Tom Gebhardt. Gebhardt advanced to third on two putouts and attempted to score the tying run when a pitch escaped from the Wells catcher. But Edwards applied the tag to Gebhardt to abort the threat and eventually give Wells the Des Plaines Little League championship.

"STARS" DO NOT A PENNANT MAKE

Dear Sirs:

I'm tired of hearing about how lucky the White Sox are and how they don't have a lineup of pennant caliber. It takes something more than just so-called All-Stars at every position. The floundering Cubs have proved that since their collapse in 1969. It takes the blend of youth and experience, a manager who knows how to utilize everyone and keep everyone happy, a strong coaching staff, and a strong front office organization. It's very tiring to have a team picked apart position by position when they're batting for first place. If this late in the season a team is good enough to be in a pennant fight, more power to them. So the White Sox have obvious weaknesses. So what? Their strengths obviously overshadow these weaknesses.

POOR JUDGMENT

Dear Fans Forum:

Sometimes these guys who give sports on the radio disgust me. Last Saturday I tried to find out the White Sox score on WBBM radio about 9 in the morning and when they gave the sports, they led off with the cube's meaningless win over New York and then gave the National League scores before even getting into the White (Continued on next page)

Demos Pull 'Power Play' on Coroner Issue

by ROGER CAPELLINI
A News Analyst

While the Cook County Board acceded to mounting public pressure in the past few years by voting to provide the voters their opportunity to do away with the coroner's office, it neatly gutted the issue of one of its major goals.

The county commissioners, in a special meeting Wednesday night, gave the voters the chance to eliminate the office when they voted to place a referendum question on the November ballot. Basically, the voters will be asked to decide if they want to retain the current coroner system or replace it with a medical examiner system.

The coroner's system in general and Coroner Andrew Toman's office in particular, have been under constant fire in recent months, and have been the subject of great controversy.

On the eve of the board action ever, the issue had become lopsided. Speaking in support of the referendum and, in fact, of the abolition of the coroner's office was Dr. Toman and Dr. James H. Ryan, coroner of Kane County.

Finally, almost everyone seemed to agree the coroner's office was obsolete and should be abolished. Several members of the county board expressed that opinion and the vote to place the question before the voters was unanimous.

BUT EVEN AS they voted, the county commissioners may have taken the heart out of the matter by simply changing a few words in the question which will appear on the ballot.

In addition to the criticism of the coroner's office to the effect it is archaic, inefficient and inconsequential in the administration of justice, the system has been rapped on the basis of political control.

Many of the critics are more concerned with the fact the coroner is an elective position and therefore becomes political. The feeling has been that the coroner should be a professional — not a politician — and not accountable to either political party.

The widely supported medical examiner system is headed by a chief medical examiner, which is an appointive office. That, the critics of the coroner's system claim, would take this step in the process of justice out of political control.

AS ORIGINALLY proposed by Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines at a meeting Aug. 7, the referendum, if approved by the voters would have established a medical examiner system headed by a licensed forensic pathologist. That chief would have been chosen by a commission composed of the chiefs of the pathology departments of the major medical schools in the county.

That method of selecting the chief examiner would have taken control of the office out of the hands of the Democrats, currently, or whatever party controls county offices in the future.

But County Pres. George Dunne and the rest of the Daley Democrats on the county board would have none of that.

While trying to maintain the appearance they were going along with the public in seeking to abolish the coroner's office, they succeeded in retaining political control.

Dr. Toman initiated the change when he addressed the board to support placing the question on the ballot.

Dr. Toman suggested that instead of having the chief examiner appointed by a commission of pathologists, the appointment should be made by the county board. He said, "The public should have some interest in the conduct and selection of the medical examiner."

HE SAID WITH the method of selection proposed by Fulle, there would be "a danger, in that there would be no clearly defined line of authority." That way, the coroner added, "The public will still have some voice."

Later, County Comr. John Stroger picked up the ball. He said he has long opposed the coroner system, but also opposed giving the responsibility of selection to a group of pathologists. "It only creates chaos to delegate out our responsibility to professional people," Stroger said.

Fulle argued the point with Stroger and Dunne for several minutes, but, faced with almost total control of the board by the Democrats, finally revised his proposal.

As approved by the board, the voters still will have the choice of the two systems, but if they choose the medical examiner, he will be appointed by the county board president. Additionally, he will not have to be a licensed forensic pathologist, but merely a licensed physician.

COINCIDENTALLY, Dr. Toman fits that description.

So while the board, and specifically the Democrats, gave the appearance of representing the consensus of the public, they not only did not do away with political control of the office, but actually increased that control by giving the county president direct power of appointment.

But that was not the only political power play at the special meeting of the board.

Before they finally voted, the Democrats, on the board, led again by Dunne, denied a Republican the opportunity to speak on the issue.

The Republican was Donald Mulack, candidate for coroner, who has been running on the platform of abolishing the office.

MULACK, ALONG with Mrs. Mary Powers, asked the board Aug. 7 to place the question on the ballot. It was as a result of those suggestions that Fulle offered his resolution.

Mulack had reached only the seventh word of his short, prepared statement when he was interrupted by Dunne.

The board president objected to Mulack's claim that he had "brought this to the board Aug. 7." Dunne said it was Fulle and Mrs. Powers who brought it to the board, not Mulack.

As the candidate began his second sentence, Dunne again interrupted, on the same objection. Mulack said he, too, made the suggestion in addition to Mrs. Powers.

THEN IT WAS Comr. John Touhy's turn to carry the Democratic banner. With obvious hostility Touhy asked "to who" did Mulack make the suggestion. As Mulack tried to answer, Touhy said, "If you're going to come in here you better be factual."

Dunne then moved that Mulack be denied the opportunity to continue speaking, calling Mulack, "a candidate for public office using a public forum for his own selfish purposes."

Touhy said no one was trying to deny Mulack his rights, accusing the candidate of, "trying to get a platform to speak to the press."

Mulack continued, criticizing the coroner's handling of the Black Panther inquest, and was interrupted still again.

When Mulack said something about waste in county government, again the Democrats renewed their verbal hostilities.

THE END CAME when Mulack said, "If you fail to act in time to meet the deadline date of Aug. 21, I will seek the help of every civic group of our community . . ."

Comr. Jerome Huppert broke in, "We are not going to accept any threats from you." Then Dunne renewed his motion to rule Mulack "out of order," a motion seconded by Democratic Comr. Charles Benk.

Eight Democrats voted that Mulack should not be allowed to speak. Four Republicans opposed them.

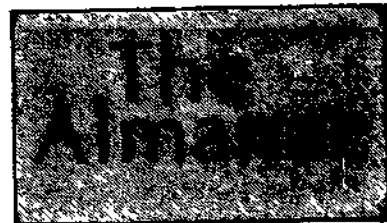

Mulack sat down. He was denied his right to address the governmental body presumably because he was leaving the "meat of the issue" to interject comments favorable to his candidacy.

YET A SHORT time earlier his opponent, Dunne, was permitted to go uninterrupted while defending the operation of the office under his direction for the past 12 years.

Dr. Toman outlined the office as he inherited it, told the commissioners what changes he made in procedure, and about the new equipment he purchased for the office. He spelled out the advantages and disadvantages of the coroner system and then denied that his remarks were "politically motivated."

The coroner took the time to deny his office is steeped in patronage positions, adding, "I don't even know their political views." And, he said, "To say the coroner's office is a political plum rampant with patronage is ridiculous."

While gagging Mulack from making what he called a "political speech," Touhy said the coroner was allowed to give similar remarks because, "He IS the coroner, sir."

Elk Grove Jrs. Sponsor House Walk

The oldest and the newest will be featured in the Sept. 17 house walk being sponsored by Elk Grove Junior Woman's Club.

The oldest home is that occupied for the last 25 years by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Zender. Across from Alexian Brothers Hospital, it is the original home of the Biesterfelds, for whom Biesterfeld Road is named.

The new home on the walk is the Japanese style residence of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Kerstin, which is both constructed and decorated in Japanese fashion.

Also on the house walk will be the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Thompson. It is being featured for its landscaping, particularly the rock garden.

THE WALK, which starts at the Elk Grove Municipal Building, includes 10 homes in all. Each house was chosen for a special reason, according to the chairman of the walk, Mrs. Thomas Bessey and Mrs. Steven Bailey.

A guide will be given to each house walk guest. Designed by Mr. and Mrs. Wes Bois, it will picture and describe each home.

In addition Mrs. Richard Carlson and her committee are contacting merchants to be included in the guide as a handy reference in fields related to home maintenance and improvement.

Tickets for the house walk, which is from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sept. 17, are now available at $1.50 from Mrs. Richard Anderson, 956-0972, or Mrs. Richard Mayworm, 439-2853.

Proceeds from the house walk will be used by the Elk Grove Juniors for its charitable activities. The club now is 13 years old.

Oakton, Local Bus Lines To Be Linked By Shuttle Service

A shuttle bus service, connecting Oakton Community College with local bus lines in Des Plaines, Niles, Park Ridge, Skokie, and Morton Grove, will begin when classes start Aug. 30.

The college board of trustees awarded a contract to the Marlin Bus Service, Inc.,

Skokie, during its regular board meeting Tuesday. Buses will run from eight to fourteen hours per day depending on the number of students using the service. A report on the effectiveness of the service will be made in November.

Last semester, the college used a shuttle bus service to and from college parking spaces at Niles West High School, Skokie. The college hopes to extend the service to Lincoln Avenue and Oakton Street in Skokie, pending approval by the Skokie Village Board.

The western extension will end at Milwaukee Avenue and Oakton Street, connecting with United Motor Coach lines running north on Milwaukee Avenue to Niles and west on Dempster Street to Des Plaines, south through Park Ridge and east to Skokie and Chicago.

IN OTHER ACTION Tuesday night,

the board of trustees voted to create a day care center for children of students, staff and faculty members of Oakton Community College. The center, to be located in building six, will operate from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. There will be a maximum of 20 children in the center, with at least one adult for every eight children. The fee will be 50 cents per hour per child.

Although the center will serve only as a babysitting service this year, college officials hope to make the center into a child development laboratory in cooperation with child care, practical nursing, sociology and psychology programs at Oakton next year.

Clarence Luther, coordinator of the child care program, told board members, "I feel a day care center at Oakton Community College would be a great asset to the child care curriculum. Not only would it provide a lab situation for students, but would facilitate completion of many of the behavioral objectives of the course."

Walter Bobkiewicz, assistant professor of psychology, said the center would give his students "the opportunity to observe and experience child behavior."

A NEW GRADING system, adding two non-passing grades to the existing grade scale, was also approved by the board. The mark, "R," meaning repeat, will be assigned by the teacher when a student must repeat a course to obtain credit, and "N," meaning "no show" will be assigned by the teacher when a student fails to attend class sessions.

The two new grades will be added to the existing system using A, B, C, and D as passing grades and X meaning the student has failed to complete the course but has one more semester to fulfill course requirements; W meaning the student has withdrawn from the course; and V meaning the student does not wish to take the course for college credit.

The board approved the hiring of seven new teachers for the 1972-73 academic year. Carol Ann Davis, Chicago, was hired as a student counselor; Rosario DiPrizio, Skokie, mathematics; Helene M. Helford, Highland Park, child care; E. Jerome Maas, Cincinnati, Ohio, chemistry; Eugene D. Stern, Highland Park, music; and Terry N. Trobec, Baton Rouge, La., biology; and John J. Mikulski, Chicago, biology.

Oakton Final Registration Starts Aug. 23

Final registration for fall semester classes at Oakton Community College will be held Aug. 23, 24, and 25. Anyone who has not applied for admission to the college may file an application and enroll in fall semester classes during the registration period next week.

Students who had previously applied for admission began registering June 19. According to college officials, 2,238 full-time and part-time students have registered to date. A final enrollment of 3,500 students is anticipated.

Students may register next week in building three on the interim campus at 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove, from 9 a.m. to noon and from 4 to 7 p.m. A $10 fee is required at the time of registration. Course fees are $10 per semester hour for in-district students. Ten counselors and advisors, faculty members, and students are available to assist in student registration.

The modern student registration system, using the college's IBM 360 computer, provides the enrolling student with immediate information by means of video-terminal display on details pertaining to fees, time conflicts, credit hours and class size.

THE ENROLLING student can also use the college catalog, the schedule of classes, and the OCC Directory to assist in the selection of courses. The directory is a unique publication in that it provides the student with a complete listing of courses, course objectives, and the instructor's method and approach to teaching his subject.

Faculty student grouping is according to the cluster system. Oakton has four clusters or college groups at present, each headed by a chairman. These groups are organized according to teaching method rather than subject matter. Thus the student is placed in the learning environment to which he responds best.

Athletics play an important role in student life. With the acquisition of a fifth building, the college's interim campus will have space for on-campus athletic and physical education programs. Oakton has a wide variety of intramural sports and fields teams in basketball, baseball, cross country, golf, wrestling, and tennis in the Skyway Athletic Conference.

This fall students will have the opportunity to participate in "The Semester for Self-Directed Study." This program allows the individual student, aided by his instructors and peers, to develop, share, and fulfill behavioral objectives which stem from his own special interest areas and satisfy content requirements as well. These educational goals will be directly related to one or more projects, conceived by the student and covered in a contract agreement negotiated with the instructors involved in the program. Projects involve the four subject matter areas: literature, political science, psychology and sociology. Thus, the student receives three semester hours in each of the four subject areas for a total of 12 semester hour credits.

Parents will be notified by mail of the date and time of their child's interview.

This first meeting will provide an opportunity for each child to see and talk to his two teachers and become familiar with the surroundings of the Nursery School. Regular classes will begin the following week.

There are a few openings in each of the three sessions available to any child who will be four years old by Dec. 1. For registration information call the church office at 827-5561 or the director at 827-6400.

THIS BEING an election year, the college will encourage student interest in a course entitled "Election '72 Symposium." This 12-hour course is taught by four teachers. Each student selecting this course must enroll in four subjects — communications, economics, political science and psychology, all related to the 1972 presidential election.

Oakton Community College offers the following degrees, diplomas, and certificates: associate in arts degree; diploma in arts; associate in applied science degree; diploma in applied science; and certificate — completion of special programs. But at Ziebart, we use the patented spray-on rustproofing to get inside your car's body. Inside, where rust starts. We cover every square inch of rust-prone metal with our unique coating. To make your car absolutely rustproof. Up to 35% more soundproof. And worth more money when you trade it in. The Ziebart process is so foolproof, in fact, that we'll guarantee your new car against rust for 5 years or 80,000 miles. There's only one Ziebart process. And only one place to get it. City Continues Efforts To Clear Way For Overpass

The City of Des Plaines is continuing its efforts to clear the way for construction of a River Road overpass downtown at Miner Street and the Chicago and North Western Rwy. tracks.

Mayor Herbert Behrel yesterday said new engineering plans are being prepared that would steepen and shorten the approaches to the proposed overpass.

If state highway officials approve the new plans, the mayor told the Herald, "We may be able to appease at least some of the problems that we're facing."

Behrel also said he has set a tentative meeting Sept. 5 with County Cmr. Floyd Fullilove to discuss acquisition of forest preserve land needed to build a connection of Thacker and Dempster streets at the Des Plaines River.

FEDERAL AND state approval of the River Road overpass, seen by officials as a needed part of downtown redevelopment, has been coupled to the Thacker-Dempster connection.

Both projects have thus been stymied by the Cook County Forest Preserve District administration's decision to reject a city request for property in the Northwestern Woods east of the river that would be used for the Thacker-Dempster bridge.

In rejecting the request for land in Northwestern Woods, forest preserve officials said the bridge would isolate 1.8 acres of forest preserve property. They said the city should find an alternate route for the connection.

At its meeting Aug. 7, the county board of commissioners, sitting as the forest preserve district board, accepted petitions signed by some 1,500 persons opposed to the River Road overpass.

BY SHORTENING THE approaches to the River Road overpass, the mayor indicated, yesterday, the city may be able to eliminate objections from residents of an apartment building at River and Thacker Street.

Owners of condominium apartments in the building, 800 River Rd., have been critical of plans for the overpass, which would block their access to River Road.

Under the new plans, Behrel said, River Road would be two feet one inch higher than ground level in front of the building at Thacker. In the old plans, it was three feet higher than ground level, he said.

The mayor also said that under the new plans, River Road would leave ground level at a point 25 feet north of the driveway of the house at 930 River, next door to the apartment building. The approach would thus have to rise more steeply than had been previously planned, he said.

IN ADDITION, the approach to the overpass north of Miner Street would also be shortened and made more steep, the mayor said.

However, he added, it may still be necessary to purchase six houses located on River north of Miner because the overpass approach would block them off from River. Four of those houses are on the west side of River and two are on the east side, Behrel said.

One of the houses on the east side, 709 River, is owned by Burton Kosmen head of the Citizens Action Committee, which has opposed the overpass and obtained the 1,500 petition signatures presented to the county board.

Behrel, who stressed that purchase of the six houses is only a possibility at this point, said he hopes the project will not force anyone to move.

"I FEEL SORRY for any resident that has to be relocated," he said. "But how

Decision On Monday On Cumberland

Officials at Des Plaines Elementary School Dist. 62 will decide Monday whether Cumberland School, damaged by tornado-like winds last month, will be open for classes on Aug. 31.

Cumberland School, 700 Golf Rd., Des Plaines, suffered about $200,000 damage July 14 when winds ripped off the roof on the west wing of the school, exposing eight classrooms and sending debris into homes, 100 yards away.

Clean-up and repair work began immediately and the board of education authorized Holmes and Fox Architects, 72 N. Broadway, Des Plaines, to supervise repairs. Harold Brieschke, Dist. 62 director of business services, told the board every effort would be made to make the school safe for children by the beginning of the fall term.

WHEN A PORTION of the roof on the east wing of the building was blown away, an outside wall was pulled out of place. Brieschke said the wall has been set back and the east wing roof repaired.

The roof on the west wing of the school has been replaced and weatherproofed, said Brieschke. Electrical contractors began installing lighting fixtures and other wiring yesterday and painters are scheduled to work on the interior walls today. Brieschke said the floor will be inspected and tiles replaced if necessary.

Richard Fox, architect, is optimistic the school will be ready when classes begin Aug. 31. He said repairs have to be made on the windows and ceiling tiles will be installed next week.

According to Brieschke, the damage to the school is completely covered by insurance and there will be no cost to the school district.

Park Ridge Man Electrocuted

An 18-year-old Park Ridge youth was electrocuted yesterday while using an electric air hammer at a Des Plaines construction site.

Police said a defective electrical cord attached to the air hammer may have caused the electric shock that killed Paul A. Gustafson, of 424 N. Lincoln, Park Ridge.

According to reports, Gustafson, an employee of the Custer Construction Co., 225 N. Arlington Heights Rd. Elk Grove was working on a new building site at 31 E. Oakton St., Des Plaines when he was electrocuted.

Police said Gustafson's father, Paul H. Gustafson who was also working on the site, tried to revive his son with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation after his son dropped to the floor of electric shock about 2:30 p.m.

Gustafson was taken to Holy Family Hospital by a Des Plaines Fire Department ambulance and was pronounced dead at the hospital at 2:53 p.m. after attempts to revive the youth failed.

Two Colorado Grads

Jeffrey Seaton and Nancy Whiting both of Des Plaines have graduated from Colorado College with bachelor of arts degrees.

Parking Meter Stolen

A parking meter valued at $150 and containing $10 in coin was stolen from a Des Plaines parking lot sometime Tuesday.

Police said the thieves apparently shook the meter until it became loose then pulled it out of the ground. The meter was located in a Des Plaines City parking lot located south of Ellinwood Street and west of River Road.

Environment Group Studies Gas Leak

A Chicago based environmental group has begun an investigation of continued gasoline leakage at a downtown Des Plaines service station.

The Citizens for a Better Environment (CBE) is investigating whether gasoline leaking from Ross Automotive Cigo Station, 697 River Rd., are turning up in the Des Plaines River a couple of blocks behind the station.

Phillip Miller of the CBE's research department told the Herald traces of gasoline were definitely visible as a floating film on top of ground water in a hole next to the service station. Miller saw the ground water located in a hole dug in front of the station last year so that the gasoline riding on the water could be pumped out.

Miller said his organization would be "greatly concerned" if gasoline were entering the Des Plaines River through the ground water table.

THE SOURCE of the gasoline leaks has been a controversy since last fall when Burton Kosmen, of 709 River Rd., located next door to Ross Automotive, reported gasoline was seeping into his basement.

Kosmen said he removed 16 pails of "raw gasoline" from his basement sump hole last fall which prompted the closing of the service station in March and the digging up of two 6,000 gallons gasoline storage tanks underneath the station 15 feet from Kosmen's home.

The two tanks were removed and replaced with new ones. While Kosmen insisted the old tanks were leaking Cigo denied the tanks had leaks while they were removed.

Since then Kosmen says he still detects the odor of gasoline in his basement and on several occasions Herald reporters have smelled gasoline in Kosmen's basement and observed the characteristic rainbow caused by petroleum products floating on the water Kosmen's basement sump hole.

The Des Plaines fire department is still waiting for tests to be completed on water samples taken from Kosmen's sump hole; from the hole dug down to the ground water level located between Kosmen's home and Ross Automotive and from another hole dug alongside the underground gasoline storage tanks at the station.

The problem was aggravated when on July 3 a truck driver from Cigo accidentally allowed between 75 and 100 gallons of gasoline to spill over and soak into the ground surrounding the underground storage tank cavity.

Since then a separator which skims petroleum products off the top of water has been in use in an effort to remove gasoline in the tank cavity hole.

AS LATE AS Tuesday the hole alongside the tanks had to be pumped completely dry because the liquid found there was tested by the fire department and found to catch on fire when a fireman put a lighted match to it.

Lt. Richard Arthur of the fire department has said the flammable liquid was probably gasoline spilled July 3 that had washed into the tank cavity by heavy rains.

Despite the continuous use of the petroleum separator and the pumping dry of the storage tank cavity, gasoline has still managed to seep into the water table which is concerning both Kosmen and the CBE.

Cigo officials have remained adamant during the controversy denying the storage tanks have been the source of gas leaks. The oil firm has canceled its lease with the owner of the station, Ronald Ross, and will have to remove the tanks after Sept. 21.

Kosmen has charged city officials with dragging their feet in getting to the bottom of the problem and hopes the CBE investigation will help get results.

Miller told the Herald if his group finds conclusive evidence that gasoline is entering the Des Plaines River along with the ground water, it will file a complaint with the Illinois Pollution Control Board.

Miller said if the pollution control board rules in its favor then the city would be ordered to make a concentrated effort to stop the gasoline pollution no matter what its source is.

Fire department officials doubt that the new gasoline storage tanks are leaking. They say gasoline in the ground from leaks in old storage tanks coupled with the July 3 gasoline spill could be accounting for evidence of gasoline in the hole adjacent to the tanks. However, the fire department is not sure that those factors could cause gasoline to be present in the ground water and in Kosmen's basement.

The fire department has said gasoline was present in Kosmen's basement but has indicated it cleared up the problem when the old storage tanks were removed and the petroleum separator installed at Ross Automotive.

Lt. Arthur told the Herald yesterday that the liquid in Kosmen's basement may not contain a petroleum product but said nothing could be known for sure until the test results are released today.

General Motors Corp and Chrysler Corp. joined American Motors in refusing Nixon administration pressure to cut back price increase requests on 1973 models to recover the cost of adding anti-pollution and safety hardware.

A Federal grand jury indicted Daniel Moore, former U.S. deputy comptroller of the currency, on charges of mis-handling $8.1 million in bank funds, securities and obligations.

Sen. George S. McGovern, smarting under White House charges that he may have jeopardized Vietnam peace negotiations, charged that it was President Nixon who was interfering by sending Henry Kissinger on a "global junket." McGovern, in Wisconsin, said the Kissinger trip from Paris to Saigon was designed to manipulate public opinion.

Presidential Adviser Henry Kissinger and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu met for more than two hours in Saigon, but details of their Vietnam War talks were cloaked in secrecy.

The State

William G. Karnes, a trustee of the University of Illinois, resigned Thursday in the wake of conflict-of-interest charges by the student newspaper. Twelve African countries have indicated they will withdraw from the 20th Olympic Summer Games if Rhodesia participates, according to Willy Daumie, president of the organizing committee.

Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, chief negotiator of the Viet Cong delegation at the Vietnam peace talks, said she agreed with President Nixon's political opponents that he missed a chance to make peace when he took office in 1969.

The War

North Vietnam said Thursday there has been no progress toward a settlement either in private or public Vietnam talks, and the Viet Cong backed reports that President Nixon missed a chance to make peace early in 1969.

Oakton, Local Bus Lines To Be Linked By Shuttle Service

A shuttle bus service, connecting Oakton Community College with local bus lines in Des Plaines, Niles, Park Ridge, Skokie, and Morton Grove, will begin when classes start Aug. 30.

The college board of trustees awarded a contract to the Marlin Bus Service, Inc.,

Skokie, during its regular board meeting Tuesday. Buses will run from eight to fourteen hours per day depending on the number of students using the service. A report on the effectiveness of the service will be made in November.

Last semester, the college used a shuttle bus service to and from college parking spaces at Niles West High School, Skokie. The college hopes to extend the service to Lincoln Avenue and Oakton Street in Skokie, pending approval by the Skokie Village Board.

The western extension will end at Milwaukee Avenue and Oakton Street, connecting with United Motor Coach lines running north on Milwaukee Avenue to Niles and west on Dempster Street to Des Plaines, south through Park Ridge and east to Skokie and Chicago.

IN OTHER ACTION Tuesday night,

the board of trustees voted to create a day care center for children of students, staff and faculty members of Oakton Community College. The center, to be located in building six, will operate from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. There will be a maximum of 20 children in the center, with at least one adult for every eight children. The fee will be 50 cents per hour per child.

Although the center will serve only as a babysitting service this year, college officials hope to make the center into a child development laboratory in cooperation with child care, practical nursing, sociology and psychology programs at Oakton next year.

Clarence Luther, coordinator of the child care program, told board members, "I feel a day care center at Oakton Community College would be a great asset to the child care curriculum. Not only would it provide a lab situation for students, but would facilitate completion of many of the behavioral objectives of the course."

Walter Bobkiewicz, assistant professor of psychology, said the center would give his students "the opportunity to observe and experience child behavior."

A NEW GRADING system, adding two non-passing grades to the existing grade scale, was also approved by the board. The mark, "R," meaning repeat, will be assigned by the teacher when a student must repeat a course to obtain credit, and "N," meaning "no show" will be assigned by the teacher when a student fails to attend class sessions.

The two new grades will be added to the existing system using A, B, C, and D as passing grades and X meaning the student has failed to complete the course but has one more semester to fulfill course requirements; W meaning the student has withdrawn from the course; and V meaning the student does not wish to take the course for college credit.

The board approved the hiring of seven new teachers for the 1972-73 academic year. Carol Ann Davis, Chicago, was hired as a student counselor; Rosario DiPrizio, Skokie, mathematics; Helene M. Helford, Highland Park, child care; E. Jerome Maas, Cincinnati, Ohio, chemistry; Eugene D. Stern, Highland Park, music; and Terry N. Trobec, Baton Rouge, La., biology; and John J. Mikulski, Chicago, biology.

Oakton Final Registration Starts Aug. 23

Final registration for fall semester classes at Oakton Community College will be held Aug. 23, 24, and 25. Anyone who has not applied for admission to the college may file an application and enroll in fall semester classes during the registration period next week.

Students who had previously applied for admission began registering June 19. According to college officials, 2,238 full-time and part-time students have registered to date. A final enrollment of 3,500 students is anticipated.

Students may register next week in building three on the interim campus at 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove, from 9 a.m. to noon and from 4 to 7 p.m. A $10 fee is required at the time of registration. Course fees are $10 per semester hour for in-district students. Ten counselors and advisors, faculty members, and students are available to assist in student registration.

The modern student registration system, using the college's IBM 360 computer, provides the enrolling student with immediate information by means of video-terminal display on details pertaining to fees, time conflicts, credit hours and class size.

THE ENROLLING student can also use the college catalog, the schedule of classes, and the OCC Directory to assist in the selection of courses. The directory is a unique publication in that it provides the student with a complete listing of courses, course objectives, and the instructor's method and approach to teaching his subject.

Faculty-student grouping is according to the cluster system. Oakton has four clusters or college groups at present, each headed by a chairman. These groups are organized according to teaching method rather than subject matter. Thus the student is placed in the learning environment to which he responds best.

Athletics play an important role in student life. With the acquisition of a fifth building, the college's interim campus will have space for on-campus athletic and physical education programs. Oakton has a wide variety of intramural sports and fields teams in basketball, baseball, cross country, golf, wrestling, and tennis in the Skyway Athletic Conference.

This fall students will have the oppor-

Accounting Director Hired For Oakton

The Oakton Community College board of trustees has hired Mrs. Ginger G. Parker as director of accounting services, effective Sept. 11. Mrs. Parker, a resident of Des Plaines, has been an accountant for the city of Des Plaines. Her previous experience has been as an accountant with the Department of the Army, Joliet, Illinois, and St. Louis, Missouri.

Mrs. Parker received her bachelor of science degree in business from Wayne State College in Wayne, Nebraska and has done graduate work at the University of Nebraska. She lives in Des Plaines with her husband, Wesley.

Methodist Nursery School Opens Sept. 4

Children enrolled in the nursery school at First United Methodist Church of Des Plaines, Graceland and Prairie avenues, will begin the school year with a "get-acquainted interview" the week of Sept. 4.

Parents will be notified by mail of the date and time of their child's interview.

This first meeting will provide an opportunity for each child to see and talk to his two teachers and become familiar with the surroundings of the Nursery School. Regular classes will begin the following week.

There are a few openings in each of the three sessions available to any child who will be four years old by Dec. 1. For registration information call the church office at 827-5561 or the director at 827-6400.

Makes Honor Roll

John Aming of 924 Jeanette, Des Plaines has been named to the honor roll at Utah State University with a grade point average of 3.89 of a possible 4.0.

tunity to participate in "The Semester for Self-Directed Study." This program allows the individual student, aided by his instructors and peers, to develop, share, and fulfill behavioral objectives which stem from his own special interest areas and satisfy content requirements as well. These educational goals will be directly related to one or more projects, conceived by the student and covered in a contract agreement negotiated with the instructors involved in the program. Projects involve the four subject matter areas: literature, political science, psychology and sociology. Thus, the student receives three semester hours in each of the four subject areas for a total of 12 semester hour credits.

THIS BEING an election year, the college will encourage student interest in a course entitled "Election '72 Symposium." This 12-hour course is taught by four teachers. Each student selecting this course must enroll in four subjects — communications, economics, political science and psychology, all related to the 1972 presidential election.

Oakton Community College offers the following degrees, diplomas, and certificates: associate in arts degree; diploma in arts; associate in applied science degree; diploma in applied science; and certificate — completion of special programs. Upon graduation the student may transfer to a four-year educational institution, or he may decide to pursue a career in business or industry.

Oakton also offers a wide range of occupational courses, including accounting aide, accounting assistant, architectural technology, chemical technology, child care, data processing, fire science technology, industrial management supervision, marketing and middle management, medical laboratory technician, medical record technology, medical transcriptionist, office skills, physical therapy assistant, and practical nursing.

All courses are open to prospective students who meet course prerequisites and wish to attend. Non-graduates, 18 years of age or older, may be admitted with the consent of the director of admissions.

Students who wish further information may telephone 967-5120, extension 392 or 393.

The auto-makers haven't done it. So we did.

They still haven't unveiled the rustproof car.

And they probably never will.

Because real rustproofing just can't be handled on an assembly line. And undercoating and ordinary rustproofing don't help either.

But at Ziebart, we use a patented spray-on rustproofing process. Inside, where rust starts to get inside your car's body. Inside, where rust starts to get inside your car's body. Inside, where rust starts to get inside your car's body.

We cover every square inch of rust-prone metal with our unique coating. To make your car absolutely rustproof. Up to 35% more soundproof. And worth more money when you trade it in.

The Ziebart process is so foolproof, in fact, that we'll guarantee your new car against rust for 5 years or 50,000 miles.

There's only one Ziebart process. And only one place to get it. Through an authorized Ziebart dealer. The one nearest you is listed on the back.

How Did Your Suburb Rank?

by KURT BAER

Among this week's best-read news stories was the purported ranking of 200 Chicago suburbs by the Chicago Regional Hospital Study, whomever or whatever that is.

The study, I'm sure you saw it, was duly published in this and probably every other Chicago area newspaper. It gave everyone the admittedly thrilling opportunity to run down the list of 200 suburbs, locate his or her hometown and then check anxiously whether it was "better" or "worse," "higher" or "lower" than any other given suburb.

Boy, 5, Injured By Automobile

A five year-old Palatine boy was injured at about 4:30 Thursday when he either ran into or was hit by a passing motorist.

Laurence Carew, 245 W. Johnson St., Palatine, was listed in good condition last night at Northwest Community Hospital, where he was taken by his mother. The boy received chest and chin abrasions in the accident.

Roswitha Ulm, 18, 2718 N. Patton Ave., Arlington Heights, the driver of the car, told police that Carew and several other boys ran out into the street between two trucks parked near 935 N. Kennicott Ave. Arlington Heights. She said she did not think she hit the boy, but that he ran into the car. The boy, however, said the car hit him.

Miss Ulm did not report the accident to police until 10 p.m. Thursday.

No charges were filed against Miss Ulm last night.

PTA Councils Set Recycling Days

Arlington Heights residents have two months to collect used bottles, cans and newspapers to help make recycling days, to be sponsored by the Arlington Heights Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, a success.

The recycling event, to be held at all schools in Arlington Heights, will be held Oct. 16 and 17.

To save time and space, the PTA council asks that bottles and jars be rinsed and metal rings be removed, newspapers should be tied or bagged, and tin cans should be rinsed, labels and ends removed and cans flattened. Bottles and jars should also be separated into clear, brown and green glass.

money from family members at the same time. Such an arrangement would normally not be permitted, but a U.S. Supreme Court decision three years ago threw out requirements that a family has to support indigent relatives. This makes it difficult for welfare agencies to detect cases that are receiving money on the sly from relatives or friends.

"Some cases have to be getting money elsewhere to make ends meet. Or they may be working on the side," Mrs. Kolarus contended. "But we never know for sure. We're not a policing department."

In most cases, though, unqualified welfare applicants are detected after an initial payment is made, Mrs. Brossett said.

"We have to believe them (as to applicants' qualifications for assistance) until we can check them out," she said. "We give them the barest payment to begin with."

FOR THOSE WHO qualify, however, township officials said welfare services is fast, with a minimum of red tape. Applicants need only stop by the township offices, 1818 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, talk to a caseworker about their problems and fill out a standard application for general assistance. Benefits usually begin the same day.

But those who think the township is a source of easy money will receive a rude awakening. Mrs. Kolarus said the township very rarely gives cash payments, but rather uses disbursement orders for food, rent and clothing — they supply only the necessities. What's more, payment is made directly to the store or landlord, not to the recipient, though some exceptions are made.

"Some people have the attitude that we owe it to them," Mrs. Kolarus said, shaking her head, then going on to sum up the township's program: "We do our best to service everyone who really needs help."

The rank of any given community was determined by a carefully conceived socio-economic equation whose two principal factors were median family income and the number of years of formal education of its residents.

Just to make it official, the Chicago Regional Hospital Study told us they had gleaned these telling social indicators from nothing less than the 1970 U.S. Census.

After all, what are people, not to single out suburbanites, more interested in than how much money the next guy is making and how many years he could afford to stay out of a job and in school. The study's human interest is obvious.

BUT SURELY the Chicago Hospital Study group didn't put in all this work just so Chicago's two evening newspapers could have a page one headline guaranteed to catch the eye and a dime of every suburban rail commuter. No, there must be another reason.

Perhaps the reason was to provide some guidelines for the development of future suburban medical facilities. An important criterion has to be the ability of local inpatients to pay for their medicine. And, in case it was any secret, the study "proved" that the average Arlington Heights resident was a better hospital risk than the average resident of, say, Calumet City.

Maybe there was no such ulterior motive behind the study. The statisticians behind the Chicago Regional Hospital Study may merely have wanted to provide us all with a few moments interesting reading, and, if you live in the "right" suburb a little bit of reinforcement as to our relative socio-economic worth. (If you lived in a "wrong" suburb you probably wouldn't care, anyway.)

ONLY SUBURBS with a population of at least 2,500 inhabitants were ranked, the study says. The others presumably being either too small to worry about if they're "poor" or to capitalize on if they're "rich."

Too bad. Just think what it could do for Palatine's rating next time the contest rules could somehow be altered so that village could include Inverness residents. Why, Morton Grove might even be able to nose out Munster if it could count the 400 or so inhabitants of the wealthy little village of Golf.

As for me, I'm dying to see whether Barrington Hills beats out Kenilworth for ole No. 1.

ERRATUM. The jig was nearly up Wednesday night for an attorney seeking approval of a plat of subdivision for 12 lots just north of Olive Street between Belmont and Douglas avenues. A letter of notice received by neighboring residents said that the property was up for rezoning for a cocktail lounge. So when a number of steamed citizens showed up at the plan commission hearing demanding to know why a tavern was being planned for their quiet residential neighborhood, Atty. Vincent Lucchese sheepishly explained that his secretary had inadvertently confused the subdivision request with another one of his cases, a liquor license application for a restaurant. He assured the commissioners that a letter of apology had been mailed to all misled residents.

LONG BUMPY ROAD. Commissioners should know better than to try to take a vacation, as Jean Hanson, member of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission has found. First she conceded to retype a report during her vacation. This week another study was presented at the meeting, and commissioners were asked to review and comment on it. "Well, I guess I could read it in the car . . ." Mrs. Hanson said hesitantly. "Sure, it sure beats listening to the kids fight," encouraged Mary Schlett, ECC member.

The film showing is open to the public. Another society film will be shown Aug. 25.

Developer Takes Low-Key Approach

by KURT BAER

The prospective developers of Arlington Heights' first major townhouse project took a low-keyed approach in outlining the features and evolution of their plans for a 45-acre site near the northeast corner of Palatine Road and Rte. 53.

Representatives of I. Simon, Inc., presented two alternate building plans for the site. The first, an all-townhouse project, contained 380 one and two-story single-family attached homes.

The second proposal was for what project architect Larry Booth called a "synthesis community" of 348 townhouses and 60 condominium apartments in a single, 4½ story building.

The new development appeared to be more to the liking of neighboring Greenbrier residents than was an earlier proposal, known as Chelsea Square, which was sharply criticized for its high density.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Greenbrier Civic Association did raise some questions about the impact the proposed new townhouse development would have on schools, traffic, water supply, sewers, the surrounding neighborhoods and zoning.

These points and others will be taken up by the plan commission's plat and subdivision committee before the next full commission hearing on the project now set for Nov. 1.

If approved the townhouse project would be developed in stages over a four-year period from 1974 to 1977. The anticipated selling price of the townhouse units was given as $40,000 to $50,000 and up.

Booth said plans for the project emphasized open space with 63 per cent of the site left undeveloped. Plans called for the creation of a permanent retention lake and the maintenance of an existing row of trees along the eastern edge of the property as a buffer to the Greenbrier single-family subdivision.

SCHOOL IMPACT studies prepared by the developer estimated that the project would generate an additional 380 elementary school-aged children and 70 high school-aged students.

Atty. Joseph Ash said the developer would prefer to make a cash rather than a land donation to the Arlington Heights Park District and School Dist. 25 but added that these details still remained to be settled.

Other projections presented by the developer included a total real estate tax benefit of $75,000 to the Village of Arlington Heights, $320,000 to Dist. 25, and $270,000 to Dist. 214.

On a cost per student basis, the developer said the project would just about break-even with elementary students and would generate a surplus of $165,000 for high school students' education.

WATER TO THE development could be supplied from a 12-inch water main from the north and an eight-inch main from the south, according to testimony by the developer's engineer. Storm water would be carried to a 36-inch Metropolitan Sanitary District storm sewer which is now stubbed at Richmond Street.

Access to the development would be by the Frontage Road which parallels Rte.

53. As planned now, Williamburg, Cambridge and Richmond streets leading to Greenbrier subdivision would not be extended into the townhouse project but would be points of access for emergency vehicles.

Because the Rte. 53 Frontage Road continues north into the Village of Palatine, Fred Zajonc, a Palatine village trustee, asked the plan commission to consider widening the Frontage Road to four lanes.

Zajonc also asked that a copy of the development plans be forwarded to the Village of Palatine.

Question Impact Of Atrium Townhouse

The Greenbrier Civic Association, which represents 400 of Greenbrier's 511 families, raised some questions and apprehensions about the proposed Atrium townhouse development and its potential impact on the neighboring single-family subdivision.

"It is our belief, from direct experience within the subdivision, that this plan will produce a number of conditions adversely affecting the immediate area, as well as the village in general, unless adequate safeguards for the maintenance of living standards are required for approval of this proposed land use," the association said in a letter to the plan commission.

To deal with the influx of children from the proposed development, the civic association asked that plans be made for a 75 per cent physical expansion of Greenbrier School before the approval of the development.

Also cited as a concern of the association was the traffic pattern in and around the Greenbrier subdivision, particularly on Kennicott, Palatine and the Frontage roads.

The letter also suggested that the new development, if approved, be serviced from a water source separate from that now serving Greenbrier or that the Greenbrier system be sufficiently enlarged to accommodate the new dwellings.

"AS EVIDENCED by the village's restricting of sprinkling to three days a week, availability of water in the area can be described as marginal," the letter said.

The letter referred to storm water drainage in the subdivision as "marginal and in some cases totally inadequate."

The association asked that new sewer construction be designed large enough to accept both Greenbrier's storm water as well as that from the new development.

"We should expect the developer of this property to guarantee that the planned community will be compatible with the existing community and will be in keeping with the quality and character of living in the immediate area, as well as in the Village of Arlington Heights," the letter said in a fifth point.

Finally, the association requested that the townhouse development be guaranteed as "for sale" properties as now proposed.

Tax Exemption Deadline Nears

The deadline for Illinois' senior citizens who own their homes to apply for Homestead Exemptions is only two weeks away.

Sept. 1 is the last date to submit applications to the Cook County assessor for the exemption, which will allow those who qualify in Wheeling Township to knock about $115 off their property tax bill. The saving will vary in other townships.

To qualify for the exemption, senior citizens must supply proof that they own the property on which they live and that they are at least 65 years of age as of Jan. 1, 1972. Also necessary is the property owner's permanent real estate index number, which may be found on a recent tax bill.

Marshall P. Theroux, Wheeling Township assessor, has application forms and will assist qualified township residents in filling them out. He will also see that the applications are mailed to the county building in Chicago when they are completed.

Theroux said that anyone needing information on the exemption should visit his office at 1818 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, or phone, 258-9080. He added that he will come to the home of anyone who cannot make it to the township office.

Because he has offered to visit senior citizens in their homes, Theroux said he was surprised when he was paid a visit by who he says is "the most senior senior citizen" that has applied for the Homestead Exemption in Wheeling Township.

Viola Schwolo, 75, 9 N. Pine Ave., came into Theroux's office Wednesday to apply for her exemption. But what struck the assessor as remarkable was that she brought along her mother, Emma Wiese, who lives next door to her daughter at 13 N. Pine Ave. and also wanted to apply for the tax saving. Mrs. Wiese is 96 years old.

WE APPRECIATE THE EFFORTS OF NURSES

Some of our most favorite persons are the nurses. They never seem to feel they have done enough and are always trying to do something more. They never seem to tire or lose their cheerfulness.

In the broad category of nursing there are those with Ph.D.'s, college degrees, hospital diplomas, a greatly increasing number of licensed practical nurses and, to further complicate things, more and more males are now in the nursing profession. One and all we greatly appreciate their efforts and feel privileged that a great many nurses have chosen us to be their personal pharmacy.

A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENJOY us with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?

numbers, the three substations are often given different names.

"I was a banana, but now I'm a cherry," said Marcella Gall, 6, proudly, recalling her summer's swim instruction. Improvement, no matter how little, is recognized.

"There is real pride in moving up a station," said Toepke. "The kids get to announce their name over the loudspeaker when they move up a step."

Some parks have a recognition board. At Pioneer Park, the board is loaded with autographed fish at different stations.

THOUGH THE last of five summer swim sessions is now in progress, Anderson attributes the success of the total program to the year-round sessions. Swim lessons will be taught at the indoor Olympic Park pool through the winter.

"Once a child starts swimming during the summer at his neighborhood pool, he can stay with it during the winter at Olympic," said Anderson. "The follow-through rate is good. Out of 14 children in one class I know of, 12 are coming back for the next session."

If the kids come back long enough they can go out for one of the competitive swim teams, senior lifesaving, synchronized swimming or the water safety aid program.

"There's a place in our program for anyone who's interested in swimming," Anderson said.

Township Public Aid: 'Temporary Help For The Needy'

by DAVE MAHSMAN

Township public assistance can be called a short-term life saver that will keep a family above financial waters until a rescue ship of funds comes from the county, state or federal government.

For example, a partially blind mother of five was recently deserted by her husband. She applied for Cook County assistance, but funds from that source would take more time than she could afford. She turned to Wheeling Township for help.

The same day the woman came into Wheeling Town Hall, she got $25 worth of food orders to feed her hungry family and $10 cash to do the laundry, which totalled $85 for food and $20 for laundry. Help from the township stopped two weeks later as quickly as it had begun when she got her first assistance check from the county.

Wheeling Township gave away some $23,000 of its budgeted $46,110 for general assistance during the 1971-72 fiscal year, said Fran Brosseit, who handles most of the welfare cases. She explained that budgeted amounts are usually in excess of spending, because the township must be ready for any emergency that might arise. She added that funds left at the end of the fiscal year are carried over into the next year. This year's budget allows, $52,850 for assistance.

"WE WILL definitely spend more this year than last (on general assistance)," Mrs. Brosseit said. She explained that there is "greater demand" for the welfare benefits. The township's population is constantly increasing, and more township residents are becoming aware of the program.

Township Supr. Ethel Kolerus, who is also supervisor of general assistance, said township assistance programs were set up in Illinois to help the needy who do not qualify for such categorical aid programs as assistance to the blind or disabled, old age benefits and Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). Local assistance may also be used to help those who are waiting to be accepted for other assistance, as in the case of the partially blind mother.

Each township in the state funds its own general assistance program. Wheeling Township taxes its residents an average of one cent per $100 assessed valuation for its program.

Because Wheeling Township receives no state funding for its welfare program, there is no legal ceiling on the amount any one case can collect in assistance payments. Yet the township does try to follow county guidelines for payments to discourage welfare cases from moving into the area to collect a bigger check, Mrs. Brosseit said.

Township officials say they keep a tight rein on their welfare funds, keeping their eyes open for so-called "welfare freeloaders." Wheeling Township's relatively light caseload (25 to 40 cases each month as compared to 300 or 400 in some of Cook County's townships) makes it fairly easy to see that no one gets money who doesn't deserve it, Mrs. Kolerus said.

BUT WHO REALLY knows for sure (who is freeloaders?) Mrs. Brosseit asked.

Mrs. Kolerus admitted that some cases may be receiving township funds and (Continued on page 3)

Welfare Payments Too Low For Life In Suburbia

by DOUG RAY

She is a tall, frail woman with five school-age children living in a large wood-frame house in Arlington Heights. She is like her neighbors in many ways, but unlike them in a most important way: she is a suburbanite on welfare.

Although the house carries a $250 a month price tag, it is meager by local standards. There is no carpeting, little furniture and not much food in the refrigerator.

Cook County welfare payments will give the family $292 each month making their time in the suburbs likely to be shortlived.

"The public aid housing allowance isn't enough to live in that area," said an official of the Cook County welfare department. "There's virtually no way for them to make it in the suburbs."

The family's bags are packed. Inside the dining room sits piles of household belongings and boxes overflowing with clothing.

Where will they go? The 37-year-old woman says to a city with public transportation and lower rents.

For suburban welfare recipients that usually means Chicago where poor people find themselves in concentrated numbers.

THE OPENING of school is rapidly approaching and she hopes to find a new home before then, lessening the confusion for the children.

The family has received aid. Wheeling Township provided temporary funds until the public assistance was approved. The Northwest Opportunity Center gave free legal assistance concerning an eviction notice that is still pending.

A neighbor took her to the laundromat and to the grocery store to pick up a food order from the township.

But time is running out. The rent was due yesterday. Public aid has offered to move her and the children to another location. She feels they would be better off in downstate Illinois, near Belleville where she lived several years ago.

No financial aid from the county is available to relocate the furniture and other belongings which may cost as much as $500, she says. And she doesn't have it.

"We'll just have to start over again somewhere," she said. "I want to get the kids in school and try to get established."

School Business Manager Worried About State Aid

Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 may lose some money if a lawsuit filed by Cook County Assessor P. J. Cullerton succeeds, but Business Manager Dan Suffoletto is more worried about the district's state aid for the coming year.

"Right now the Cullerton suit is hypothetical, and we don't even have the figures they're using in their state aid computation," Suffoletto said. "The suit will have to go through the court system and probably won't effect our state aid for the coming year."

Cullerton has charged school districts in Cook County are losing state aid money because one of the factors used in computing state aid, called the equalizer, has been set too high. But the result of lowering the equalizer would be the loss of tax revenue, and most school district officials say the net result would be a loss of revenue to their district.

SUFFOLETTO SAID state aid for the coming year will be $149,000 more than last year's state aid, but $103,000 less than he originally expected. State aid for the coming year, totaling $3,434,694, was finalized by the state last week.

Since the state aid was included in the tentative budget—now on display at the district administration building—includes Suffoletto's original state aid estimate, some adjustments will have to be made.

"If the state aid was $500,000 less than we expected, that would be a problem, but $100,000 we can handle," Suffoletto said. He expects some funds will be adjusted in the budget and more tax anticipation warrants will be sold.

State aid went up this year because of several changes in factors in the state aid formula. According to Suffoletto, the most important change for Dist. 25 was in the computation of average daily attendance figures. The factor, one of the main formula factors, was previously computed on the basis of the current school year. Now the average daily attendance of either this or last year can be used.

Last year's average daily attendance in the district was higher than this year's, therefore, Dist. 25's state aid has increased.

Carnival To Fight Muscular Dystrophy

A backyard carnival with proceeds to fight muscular dystrophy will be held from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Friday at the home of Nancy and Tricia Donich, 630 N. Gibbons Ave., Arlington Heights.

Games and refreshments will be provided. Admission is 25 cents per person.

AFTER THE FIRST SPLASH, swim students at Arlington Heights Park District pools are taught the fundamentals of floating, breathing and kicking—once they are persuaded to stay in the water. Marcella Gall discovers that the water isn't so scary as it looks from the edge, especially when Rond Toepke, swim instructor, is there to hold her.

Youths Not Like Ducks In Water

by CINDY TEW

Like puppies accidentally slipping into a backyard swimming pool, a dozen five and six-year-olds followed each other off the side of Pioneer Park pool, and came up spewing and grasping for the side.

"Sure I want to swim, but I've never been in a pool before," said Mary, vowing she wasn't going in anymore today. The water was too cold.

It's not easy to teach preschoolers to embrace the water they way they embrace their towels on the pool deck.

"First we do dry-land exercises. That gets them hot," said Ron Toepke, swim instructor at Pioneer Park. "Just to cool off, they want to get into the water."

THE BATTLE IS keeping them in the water once they are in, Toepke said. One trick Toepke uses is getting in the water with his class.

"We play games, because once they will stay in the water, three-quarters of the battle is won," said Toepke. Games include catch and relay races as well as "games" like learning how to kick.

This year, 310 children in the Arlington Heights Park District started off in stations, which includes nonswimmers who are afraid of the water and refuse to get their heads wet. After the completion of a 10-day session, 422 were left in station one.

The station method was adapted by the park district two years ago. Instead of labeling swimmers as "beginners," "intermediate" and "advanced," they now have a number from one to 11.

"Station one has three subsections, one-A, one-B and one-C, which is a progression from being afraid of the water to being able to float," said Don Anderson, head swim coach. "It's a big step from Station one to two."

Since station one is mostly made up of very young children who don't relate to McGovern, in Wisconsin, said the Kissinger trip from Paris to Saigon was designed to manipulate public opinion.

Presidential Adviser Henry Kissinger and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu met for more than two hours in Saigon, but details of their Vietnam War talks were cloaked in secrecy.

William G. Karnes, a trustee of the University of Illinois, resigned Thursday in the wake of conflict-of-interest charges by the student newspaper. The newspaper carried a story July 21 making the accusations against Karnes, the chairman of Beatrice Foods Co. of Chicago because the food company had contracts with the university.

The Illinois Electoral Board postponed ruling on whether Communist party and Socialist Workers party slates will be allowed on the ballot in November.

Governor Richard B. Ogilvie said he would conduct a "person-to-person" campaign from the tip of Southern Illinois to Chicago—by camper. His Democratic opponent, Daniel Walker, walked the length of the state last year, more than 1,000 miles.

Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer adjourned the 15th game of their world chess championship with Spassky's king in check after 48 moves.

Twelve African countries have indicated they will withdraw from the 20th Olympic Summer Games if Rhodesia participates, according to Willy Daume, president of the organizing committee.

Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, chief negotiator of the Viet Cong delegation at the Vietnam peace talks, said she agreed with President Nixon's political opponents that he missed a chance to make peace when he took office in 1969.

The War

North Vietnam said Thursday there has been no progress toward a settlement either in private or public Vietnam talks, and the Viet Cong backed reports that President Nixon missed a chance to make peace early in 1969.

Marilyn Hallman

This week's game between the Chicago White Sox and the Milwaukee Brewers will be remembered for a long time by two Mount Prospect boys.

Warren Hecht, a student at St. Paul Lutheran school, won four tickets to Wednesday's ball game because of his perfect school attendance this year. Accompanying him to Comiskey Park were his mother, Mrs. Donald Hecht of 22 N. Emerson St., his sister Wendy, and his friend Ricky Hartmann, 101 N. Emerson St.

During the seventh inning, Milwaukee's Mike Ferraro slammed a foul ball toward first base — right into Warren's hands.

In the next inning, Bob Heise, another Milwaukee player, walloped a foul ball in the same direction. Ricky caught that one.

"He touched it four times before he really had it," reported Mrs. Hecht. "Everyone was grabbing for it. It's the one who holds on the tightest who gets the ball. Wendy thought she'd better get out of there, since she might be the next target!"

To top off this exciting day, Warren and Ricky each collected seven players' autographs.

ONE AWARD FOLLOWED on the heels of another this summer for Sandra

Novice Swim Meet Slated Saturday

The Mount Prospect Park District's fourth annual novice swim meet will take place 9 a.m. - noon Saturday, at Lions Park Pool, 411 S. Maple St.

The meet is strictly for swimmers who have not won any competitive swim award in their individual age group. Events are open to swimmers 7 to 14 years old.

Participants certificates will be given to all competitors. First through sixth place ribbons will be awarded to individual winners. Team and relay winners will receive first and second place ribbons. A traveling trophy will be presented to the pool receiving the highest number of points in the meet.

All park district residents are invited to attend.

Mack of 208 N. Emerson St.

Sandra's first award was a scholarship for one week of art study at Allerton Park, Ill. This scholarship was given to her by the Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club.

During the week-long art school, 76 students from all over the state worked in the areas of drawing, painting, ceramics, and design under the direction of University of Illinois faculty members. At the week's end, Sandra won the first place award in the drawing division.

This fall she will be a senior at Prospect High School. After that, she plans to study art at Harper College and, hopefully, an art school.

LOCAL GARDENERS raise prize roses, spectacular dahlias, and colorful petunias — but cotton plants?

Odd as it sounds, four cotton plants are thriving in the back yard of Loraine and Bob Forrest at 1404 W. Catalpa Ln. One burst into bloom two weeks ago, and a cotton boll is now forming another.

"The plants are pretty small," reported Loraine. Down south they usually grow 3½ to 4 feet tall. These are about one foot tall. But I'm shocked that they have grown at all."

Bob's father used to be a cotton farmer in Blytheville, Ark. Last fall the Forrests returned for a visit. While they were there, they toured a cotton gin and brought home a stalk of cotton as a souvenir.

In February Loraine decided to try planting the seeds. They sprouted, and she put them outdoors late in May.

"I told my neighbors that if they hadn't grown, I would have sneaked out some night and stuck my cotton stalk in the ground," laughed Loraine. By September or October the Forrest's cotton crop should be ready for picking.

Correction

An article in yesterday's paper incorrectly stated that the Mount Prospect Extensioners were sponsoring a trip to Hawaii, including all meals, for $700. The article should have stated that the $700 package price includes no meals except those specified.

Homestead Exemption Deadline Is 2 Weeks Off

The deadline for Illinois' senior citizens who own their homes to apply for Homestead Exemptions is only two weeks away.

Sept. 1 is the last date to submit applications to the Cook County assessor for the exemption, which will allow those who qualify in Wheeling Township to knock about $115 off their property tax bill. The saving will vary in other townships.

Marshall P. Theroux, Wheeling Township assessor, has application forms and will assist qualified township residents in filling them out. He will also see that the applications are mailed to the county building in Chicago when they are completed.

Theroux said that anyone needing information on the exemption should visit his office at 1818 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, or phone, 258-9090. He added that he will come to the home of anyone who cannot make it to the township office.

Because he has offered to visit senior citizens in their homes, Theroux said he was surprised when he was paid a visit by who he says is "the most senior senior citizen" that has applied for the Homestead Exemption in Wheeling Township.

Viola Schwolo, 75, 9 N. Pine Ave., came into Theroux's office Wednesday to apply for her exemption. But what struck the assessor as remarkable was that she brought along her mother, Emma Wiese, who lives next door to her daughter at 13 N. Pine Ave. and also wanted to apply for the tax saving. Mrs. Wiese is 96 years old.

Seniors Can Apply For Exemption

Charles A. Hodlmair, Elk Grove Township assessor, said senior citizens in Elk Grove Township may file for the exemption at the township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

To apply for the exemption, senior citizens must present a warrant deed or title, a tax bill and either a Medicare card or driver's license.

Photostats of the documents will be made and sent with the application to the county assessor's office.

Girl, 12, Linked To Neighborhood Thefts

Mount Prospect Police believe that their apprehension of a 12-year-old girl has solved a number of neighborhood burglaries in the southwest portion of the village.

The girl allegedly used a key, which she had earlier stolen, to enter the Haver LeRoy home, 911 S. Waverly Ave., while the family was on vacation last month, police said. Some loose change, children's jewelry and a high school ring were taken.

The girl also has been linked to a burglary at 1203 Green Acres Ln., the home of Lee Barsi. Here, police theorize, a house key was taken from its regular garage keeping place and used to enter the home about July 23. Four pool passes, $252.50 in cash and a $400 wedding ring were taken.

All items taken in both thefts have been returned, police said. They are investigating the possibility the girl was involved in other similar burglaries. She will appear Aug. 31 in juvenile court.

Park District Tennis Tournney Is Next Week

This year there will be nine singles divisions and eight doubles divisions. Divisions added new this year include a men's 25 years and under and a men's 25 years and over event. Also included this year for the first time is a mixed doubles event.

Adults will play at the Lions Park tennis courts, 411 S. Maple. Junior participants, those 17 and under, will play at Prospect High School, 901 W. Kensington Rd. Reporting time for junior divisions is 9 a.m. Monday. This meeting will be for pairing and first round single action. Reporting time for adults is 6:30 p.m. at the Lions Park courts in Mount Prospect.

The tournament is open only to resident of the Mount Prospect Park District. No fee will be charged. All interested residents are invited to attend.

Charge Pair With Gambling

Agents of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation (IBI) arrested two Chicago men Wednesday afternoon at Arlington Park Race Track and charged them with illegal gambling.

Arlington Heights police observed John Contreras, Chicago, watching the races from a service station on the northwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road, then making calls from a telephone booth. While more police were being summoned to the scene, Contreras entered the track, where police say IBI agents saw him receive large sheets with painted numbers from another man, later identified as Angelo J. Contreras.

When John Contreras returned to the phone booth, another IBI agent allegedly saw him make a call and heard him say, "Number two for today," before he hung up. Both men were then arrested. Police say they believe the numbers were used for betting.

The men were booked at Arlington Heights Police Department where they were lodged in the jail to await bond. Court date for the two has been set for Sept. 8.

This was the second arrest this season for illegal betting at Arlington Park.

Advisory Council Weighed For CAP Reorganization

An advisory council made up of representatives from every organized group in Mount Prospect is being considered as a step toward reorganization of the Mount Prospect Community Action Plan (CAP).

Village Mgr. Robert Eppley suggested that CAP officials send letters to presidents of some 50 to 100 organizations in the village, asking them to sit on the council. Eppley and CAP officials said they thought the council, which would meet two to four times a year, might broaden CAP's base of support in the village. Under the proposal, CAP still would retain a board of directors and a director to make decisions.

Eppley's suggestion came Wednesday night at a meeting with Mayor Robert Teichert, CAP officials, and volunteers from the PUMP House hotline and ICE House, both operated by CAP. The meeting was called by Teichert to discuss the future of CAP, which began about two years ago as a program to combat drug abuse in the village. About 40 persons attended the meeting.

The meeting came in the wake of criticisms leveled at CAP board members and CAP director, Robert Day. Jackie Kruse, social therapist in charge of the ICE House, earlier this month accused the board and Day of failing to provide effective leadership or to raise funds for the program. She also accused hotline volunteers of being unwilling to work with counselors at the ICE House.

Eppley said he was glad the meeting was held but said "it was a little inconclusive." Eppley said he will meet with Mrs. Kruse, Day and Mike Meehan, supervisor of the hotline, next week "to try and open communications." Eppley must make a report on the program to the Mount Prospect Village Board, which has appropriated $20,500 for CAP.

Day, who said he will "stick with the program, believes establishments of a council is a good idea. He said CAP officials will work to coordinate an effort to appeal for members.

"MEMBERS OF THE council would provide an endorsement of the program and would let more people in Mount Prospect become actively involved," Day said. He said if community leaders endorse the program, raising funds would be easier. "Maybe we'd have funding then on a more permanent basis," he said.

CAP has failed in two attempts to raise funds. The program now has to raise $9,000 for training for volunteers at the hotline and the ICE House.

Meehan said he was "happy with the meeting because it was positive." He said he supports the idea of a council "to get back the total support of the community," which the program seemed to have when it started. "Maybe if we get the council going, more people will know about CAP, and will want to be volunteers. Also more funds would probably be brought in."

Hotline volunteers had mixed reactions to the meeting, Meehan said. "Some seem to want to go to the having no control philosophy and some like the idea of an advisory council," he said. Meehan said volunteers would discuss the proposal further at a business meeting Sunday.

BOB VAUGHN, A COUNSELOR AT the ICE House, said he was "disappointed" in the meeting. "I went there expecting a lot more and all that happened is one massive protective umbrella went up over Day," he said. "We need new leadership. Letters won't do it. You have to talk to people over the phone or in person if you want them to help."

A list of priorities from Vaughn and other ICE House counselors was read at the meeting. They included funds for counselor training, an answering service or paid receptionist to answer ICE House calls and publicity. ICE House volunteers counseling center under a single full-time director, thus eliminating the need for a part-time hotline supervisor.

Teichert said the groups should not get "mixed up" with details. "I have no doubts in my mind that the ICE House and the PUMP House will function without more phones or if training is not forthcoming," he said. "I thought we came here to decide where do we go from here and how do we keep the community support. The community accepts CAP and likes it."

Unlike some other people, Teichert said, he feels CAP is not having a "crisis." "It's a cycling operation that shows up every couple of months," Teichert said. "Each time some people feel CAP is at a breaking point, but it hasn't broken yet."

TEICHERT POINTED out that the success of CAP cannot be measured "like the water system can." "It shouldn't disturb anyone if they don't know what's going to happen next week. They should go on and bend to what comes along," he said.

"I don't know where CAP is today but I submit to you that after looking at all the people here, it's okay," Teichert said.

Plan Probe Of Mosquito Abatement District Here

Marjorie Boswell, Mount Prospect's health services director, plans an investigation of Northwest Mosquito Abatement District (NMAD) operations in the village.

Her investigation results from an unusually high number of citizen complaints about mosquitoes and the steps NMAD is taking to control them.

"I want to see for myself," she said, "before forming an opinion."

Mrs. Boswell will go out Tuesday with NMAD Technical Director Wilbur Mitchell on a tour of the Mount Prospect area. She will be shown exactly what measures have been taken by the area-wide taxing body.

According to Mitchell, mosquito counts have been as high as 10,000 a day in this area. He said this was considerably higher than previous years. Mitchell will also prepare a report on his agency's actions and procedures for the village.

Paul Garvin, chairman of the local Board of Health, has suggested that the village pass a resolution forbidding all but emergency situation spraying and fogging in the village. Such emergency situations would be determined by the board of trustees.

Garvin's reasoning was not that the pesticides might be environmental pollutants, but rather that the fogging and spraying results are negligible or ineffective.

Insecticide spraying with some chemicals has been banned by Palatine and Schaumburg.

AS SUMMER SHADOWS grow longer, a bicycle must be in good condition so a young rider can get in a few extra hours before school bells again begin to ring.

Rob Roy Decision Delayed

The Mount Prospect Village Board has put off until the Sept. 12 special meeting any final decision of the rezoning of the 36-acre Rob Roy Driving Range.

That is the date for the preannexation hearing of the same property, owned by Kenroy, Inc. of Skokie. Kenroy seeks to build 544 multi-family units on the northern half of the property and to sell the southern half to the River Trails Park District.

Prior to reaching agreement on the sale of the property, the park district had started condemnation proceedings in court to obtain the land for park purposes.

DONALD J. BOSTRUM, 1600 Ironwood Dr., told the board that the River Trails Citizens Association, of which he is president, vigorously opposed the present Kenroy plan.

"We can't resist progress. We know something has to be built there," he said. "But we ask that the front section be zoned as to give us some protection on the golf course. When we rallied 80 per cent of our people to vote for annexation, we believed in Mount Prospect and your motto."

Bostrom, like Trustees Daniel J. Ahern and George B. Anderson, are concerned that rezoning of the driving range for multi-family use will ensure similar rezoning of the adjacent 180-acre Rob Roy Golf Course.

In other action, the village board Tuesday:

— Put into committee a request by the Prospect Cab Co. for three additional taxi licenses;

— SET SEPT. 19 as the date for a final vote on the planned unit development proposed for the northwest corner of River and Kensington roads;

— Approved a $125,000 Motor Fuel Tax fund resolution for the improvement of Sunset Street from William to Edward, William Street from Golf to Weller Creek, Burning Bush from Euclid to Tano, and 150 feet of Henry Street;

— Denied a petition by George Podlin to permit the operation of a preschool nursery in a house at 216 W. Rand Rd.;

— Set Sept. 5 for a vote on Moose Lodge 660's request for a special use as a private club;

— APPROVED Robert Novak's variation for a two-bedroom addition to 700 S. Can-Dota Ave.;

— Passed an amendment to the business license code that corrects the fees for laundromats;

— Granted rezoning for a White Hen Pantry store and center on Camp McDonald Road, just west of River Road;

— And annexed and rezoned the Klein-feld property, located west of Busse Road and south of the village.

Park-School Agreement Is Closer

School Dist. 23 and the Prospect Heights Park District came one step closer to a new park-school agreement Wednesday when committees from both sides planned a temporary pact which each side will vote on separately next week.

If approved by each board, the terms will allow the park district to use all Dist. 23 facilities when they are available, rent-free until September of next year.

In return, the park district will improve and maintain the baseball diamond at John Muir School along with rebuilding the Eisenhower School path and grading an adjacent playground area at a cost of about $1,000.

The Eisenhower PTA was to have financed the project because school and park officials could not agree on who would reimburse the PTA for the bill.

REPRESENTATIVES did agree however that the PTA should spend its money on education and not on maintaining school grounds.

The project is expected to begin once work on a sewer hookup to the school is complete.

If both boards adopt the temporary plan, School Board Atty. Henry Valley will explore the possibilities of granting the parks a long-term lease on school facilities.

Current state legislation allows leases of up to only 10 years but park board members indicated they would like to have a long-term lease as possible.

The two committees will meet again after both sides have voted to discuss possible amendments to the temporary pact as well as the final agreement.

Schools Keep Close Surveillance

Keeping Ahead Of Developers A Full-Time Job

Editor's note: School district officials sometimes play the role of sleuths searching out developers and keeping as close a surveillance as possible. Remaining one step ahead of prospective housing developments and anticipating student enrollment is a year-round job for Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

by JOANN VAN WYE

An aerial map with red, yellow and green shapes pasted on it hangs in the office of Deputy Supt. Joseph Kiszka. The map outlines the boundaries of Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 and the colored shapes designate active developments under way within the boundaries.

The splashes of color are most prominent in the upper right hand corner of the map, the Northeastern section of Dist. 15.

This is the area Kiszka describes as "most volatile."

There are currently nine active developments in the district. Of these four are building multiple dwelling units in the northeast corner of the district where more than 3,500 units are under construction.

THE OTHER five active developments are in the central or southwest section of the district but only two are multiple use and the other three are single-family subdivisions.

In order to plan for the students from these developments, know where to acquire school sites and know when and where to construct new schools, Dist. 15 officials have to keep tabs on these and other proposed developments within the district's boundaries.

Kiszka or another district representative attend all zoning hearings in Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Hoffman Estates, Arlington Heights and Schaumburg if the proposed rezoning would have an effect on the district. There are also Cook County Zoning Commission hearings to attend.

"We don't attempt to tell anyone how to develop the land, we feel that is best left to the commissions," said Kiszka. "What we try to do is explain how a development would affect the district financially and how it would affect school facilities."

THE DEVELOPMENTS place a burden on the district because the district has to educate children coming out of the developments for at least a year until it receives tax revenue from the development, said Kiszka. He estimates the cost of educating one student at more than $800 a year.

"Someone has to pay for these children. If the developers won't make a contribution then the burden is passed on to the taxpayers in the form of higher taxes," said Kiszka.

Dist. 15 representatives have never been denied an opportunity to be heard but some commissions are more attentive to what we have to say than others, said Kiszka.

Technically the commissions cannot force developers to make contributions to school districts but they can make it pretty hard on them if they don't, said Kiszka.

AS SOON AS district officials learn there are plans to develop land within Dist. 15 boundaries Kiszka or Supt. Frank Whiteley contact the developers to discuss a contribution in the form of land or money.

"Most developers are cooperative and are at least willing to come in and talk," said Kiszka. "They are usually a little skeptical when they come in and we have to convince them we are not trying to get all we can."

The board of education's site committee has established guidelines for builder's contributions. The guidelines call for the donation of five acres of land and an additional acre for every 100 elementary age children coming out of the development and $100 for every bedroom in the development.

"We never get all we ask for. Builders try to hold the contribution down because they have to pass it on to the buyer or renter and their price has to be competitive," said Kiszka.

DIST. 15 officials are aware of development plans in the district long before actual construction starts.

With 35 per cent of the land within the

Dist. 15 boundaries undeveloped and the cost of land prohibitive for anything but commercial or multiple-family use we have to know what is being planned so we can do our own planning, said Kiszka.

Dist. 15 officials have the land broken into four categories: active, zoned and ready, waiting for zoning and negotiating.

In the zoned and ready category Dist. 15 has 11 developments listed for a total of 5,789 units. Nine of the developments zoned and ready are in the Northeastern corner of the district where 5,334 units are planned.

KISZKA SAID while these developments are zoned and ready the district has no idea when they will be built because this depends on how easy it is to get money and how easy it is to sell or rent units.

Some of the zoned land is held by land speculators who will probably sell it rather than build on it themselves, according to Kiszka. Regardless, the district officials are negotiating with all of these developers. The proposals may change before construction starts but the developers will go for more not less units, said Kiszka.

Centex Builders fall in the waiting for zoning category but theoretically they are seeking a preannexation agreement with Hoffman Estates.

Our experience with Centex has been that once they get the zoning they start building like crazy so we have to watch this one closely said Kiszka.

CENTEX HAS proposed construction of 428 units.

In the negotiations category are four parcels held by land speculators, tied up in court litigation or awaiting funds from the federal government.

All of these developers have been contacted by Dist. 15 officials and are either still negotiating or have agreed to the contribution of a school site or a per unit donation ranging from $50 to $200.

Teachers Work On Way For Faith In Classroom

by CINDY TEW

Fear and insecurity are reasons for faith. Faith is a cultural adjustment.

The statements could have been made by atheists listing reasons not to believe in God. They were made, however, by a group of St. Viator High School teachers — wrestling with how, or if, to incorporate faith in the classroom.

Besides restructuring St. Viator High School curriculum, the teachers are taking a new attitude to their classroom. Instead of the traditional impersonal student-teacher relationship, the teachers are trying to provide for more individualization and a more meaningful relationship with students.

The past week has been a series of seminars on religious dimensions of teaching for the teachers.

"Expressing our own faith perspective is difficult. Religion is a personal thing," said the Rev. John Linman, from the Center of Religion and Life, University of Nevada. "But we must be aware of our own feelings, and realize our fears to be able to deal with our students who are just starting to question their existence."

Seminars including intense religious discussions have provided an interesting week for some teachers, a tormenting week for others and a boring week for some.

"I think we have come to a beginning," said Rev. Linman on Wednesday. "We are beginning to explore faith together as believers and doubters."

At the same time, teachers have been developing curriculum for their particular group. The group emphasizing man and his relation to society in their curriculum has found polar viewpoints on some issues. Heated discussions are not uncommon.

"I should have said this yesterday, but it really bothered me that you were drawing football plays for the past few days — you don't seem to be with us," one teacher challenged another.

The challenged teacher explained that he felt his ideas, which are more liberal than his fellow group members were being discarded or altered so badly that it was hopeless to participate in the conversations.

Marla Richardson, who is Jewish, admitted that she was jealous of her challenged colleague who could find something else to do when the discussion got boring.

"All this discussion on religion is not really relevant to me," Mrs. Richardson said. She is a Spanish teacher, and feels that since Spanish is a skill course she can keep theology out of it.

Other teachers, who run the religious gamut from Catholic clergymen to atheists, enjoy the discussions out of curiosity. Some like the soul-searching questions presented.

"We managed to evade discussing religion for the first 40 minutes," one discussion leader said.

"We decided that faith should be a positive thing, full of joy and hopefulness," another discussion leader reported.

50 Take 'Making It In College'

More than 50 high school graduates and college students have enrolled in the Countryside YMCA's "Making It In College" course which begins Monday night.

Registrations for the course, which costs $20, may be made at the door Monday. The five-night, two-hour lectures will be given at Harper College in Building E, Room 197 197.

Purdie Associate Professor James R. Blackwell heads the course from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. Students from six area high schools have enrolled in the course, and others are expected.

Youths may register for the course in advance by calling the Countryside Y at 359-2400. Only high school graduates and college students may enroll for the course.

1 of 3 Is Found Guilty Of Battery

One of three men charged with battery during a scuffle in a Palatine restaurant in June was found guilty yesterday by Circuit Court Judge Anthony J. Scuttillo.

James Panagakis, owner of the Palatine House Restaurant, will be sentenced on Sept. 28. The charges stemmed from a June 26 incident at the restaurant, 217 W. Colfax St. James Weaver, husband of a former waitress at the restaurant, brought the charges against Panagakis, John Bakopoulos and Gus Kotsiavas.

Bakopoulos and Kotsiavas were acquitted of the charges.

Birch Society Will Show Free Movie

The second film in a series of films dealing with national themes will be presented by the John Birch Society today.

The society's film forum will show a film titled "Great Pretense" at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the home of H. C. McCallum, 1302 Clarendon, Arlington Heights.

The film showing is open to the public. Another society film will be shown Aug. 25.

Though the religion aspect of the seminar hasn't been the most enjoyable for Mrs. Richardson, she believes the process of sharing professional experience and grinding out a curriculum together has been rewarding.

"It hasn't been easy working with our own peers in intense sessions, but we've done it," she said. "It can work with students, too."

School Signup Begins Tuesday

Registration for kindergarten and new students in all Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 schools will be held next Tuesday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1 to 4 p.m.

Parents must bring their child's birth certificate. A transfer slip is also necessary if the child is coming from a different district.

LWV Submits 2,032 Signatures

Petitions Assure Vote On Township Government

With the Palatine League of Women Voters' (LWV) submission yesterday of petitions bearing the signatures of 2,032 township residents, the question of whether to retain the township level of government is assured of a spot on the Nov. 7 general election ballot.

The league's effort to do away with township government is a precedent-setting move statewide, representing the first attempt to dissolve or merge townships as allowed under the 1970 Illinois Constitution.

Alice DeViney, chairman of the LWV township committee, said the league considers the township duplicative, costly, ineffective, outdated and "really unfair" to the people who live in municipalities.

The township's response? Not so in fact, says Township Supervisor Howard J. Olsen. "The township services should be expanded rather than retracted," he declined to elaborate on the statement.

The league says the township is "the middle man in government," an unnecessary level for which taxpayers "pay a good deal of money and get little in return."

If the league's referendum proves successful, taxpayers who live in municipalities would save an estimated $10 a year on property assessed at $10,000. The league estimates these 42,100 residents would still pay about $4 for the general assistance functions currently handled by the township, and for road maintenance within their villages.

The remaining 12,717 township residents who live in unincorporated areas would still pay about the same amount — $16.40 per $10,000 assessed valuation — but the tax money would go to other governmental agencies.

Cook County would take over many of the services currently provided by the township if the referendum were successful, according to the LWV.

Mrs. DeViney said George W. Dunne, president of the Cook County Board of Commissioners, has assured her the county would be willing to offer the same services to the residents of unincorporated Palatine Township they currently receive from the township.

The township currently levels three taxes — for the town, general assistance and road and bridge funds.

According to Mrs. DeViney, the $127,400 town fund contains an overabundance of salaries of township officials — $25,300.

An additional $59,000 in the town fund — a disproportionate amount for the township to assume, according to the LWV — supports The Bridge, a youth services bureau which is regarded as the main project of the township.

Mrs. DeViney suggested that The Bridge could solicit funds on its own, work through the Countryside YMCA or be included in an area mental health district.

"There are at least two dozen organizations in the Northwest suburbs that could provide the services The Bridge does," Mrs. DeViney said. "The only difference is they're not all in one place."

She added that the part-time nurse at The Bridge who is an employee of the Cook County Dept. of Public Health would be available to township residents regardless of whether The Bridge exists.

The general assistance fund of $15,000 is "hardly worth maintaining a government structure," according to Mrs. DeViney.

She said Dunne volunteered the services of the county in providing general assistance to families experiencing crises, as well as providing street maintenance.

The maintenance provided by the township through its road and bridge fund costs about $2,857 per mile, according to the LWV. Road maintenance in Palatine amounts to $1,787 per mile, the LWV says.

In addition, the league objects to residents of municipalities having to contribute to the township's road and bridge fund, because the township roads consist mainly of small streets in unincorporated subdivisions.

The league proposes that the voter registration functions of the township could be handled through other municipal offices by the appointment of deputy clerks.

The likelihood of the league's succeeding in dissolving the township? "We're going to have to leave that up to the voters," Mrs. DeViney says. "Anybody who is aware of all the facts and studies the issues may feel much like the league does."

Set Sunday School Picnic Saturday

The annual Sunday School picnic supper for the Palatine Bible Church is set for Saturday, with games starting at 2 p.m. followed by supper at 6 p.m.

Boy, 5, Injured By Automobile

A five-year-old Palatine boy was injured at about 4:30 Thursday when he either ran into or was hit by a passing motorist.

Laurence Carew, 245 W. Johnson St., Palatine, was listed in good condition last night at Northwest Community Hospital, where he was taken by his mother. The boy received chest and chin abrasions in the accident.

Roswitha Ulm, 19, 2718 N. Patton Ave., Arlington Heights, the driver of the car, told police that Carew and several other boys ran out into the street between two trucks parked near 935 N. Kemmick Ave. Arlington Heights. She said she did not think she hit the boy, but that he ran into the car. The boy, however, said the car hit him.

Miss Ulm did not report the accident to police until 10 p.m. Thursday.

No charges were filed against Miss Ulm last night.

Charge 2 With Gambling (What Else) At Race Track

Agents of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation (IBI) arrested two Chicago men Wednesday afternoon at Arlington Park Race Track and charged them with illegal gambling.

Arlington Heights police observed John Contreras, Chicago, watching the races from a service station on the northwest corner of Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road, then making calls from a telephone booth. While more police were being summoned to the scene, Contreras entered the track, where police say IBI agents saw him receive large sheets with printed numbers from another man, later identified as Angelo J. Contreras.

When John Contreras returned to the phone booth, another IBI agent allegedly saw him make a call and heard him say, "Number two for today," before he hung up. Both men were then arrested. Police say they believe the numbers were used for betting.

The men were booked at Arlington Heights Police Department where they were lodged in the jail to await bond. Court date for the two has been set for Sept. 8.

This was the second arrest this season for illegal betting at Arlington Park.

City Should Control Fire District

We urge Rolling Meadows residents to vote "yes" tomorrow allowing the City of Rolling Meadows to take control of the fire protection district.

There will be two questions on the ballot. The first proposition asks voters whether they wish the city to provide local fire protection. The second asks for an annual tax levy not to exceed 40 per cent — the same rate now being levied by the fire protection district.

We support both proposals. And although the referendum is not binding, it is assumed the city and fire district will take the matter to the Cook County courts for final ratification.

The need for city control of fire protection is apparent. The fire protection district is taxed to its limit with responsibilities for fire protection in a city which continues to

Referendum facts

What: A referendum seeking to transfer control of the Rolling Meadows Fire Protection District to the City of Rolling Meadows, and to give the city council power to levy a 40 cents per $100 assessed property valuation fire protection tax.

When: From 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 19.

Where: Voting will take place at the Rolling Meadows Fire Station, 3111 Meadow Dr.

How: By Paper Ballot.

Who can vote: All registered voters who reside within the corporate limits of the City of Rolling Meadows.

What voters will be asked: If they think the City of Rolling Meadows should assume responsibility for fire protection within the city; if they will authorize the city to levy a fire protection tax not to exceed the 40 cent rate now levied by the fire district.

THE CITY of Rolling Meadows promises not to exceed the .40 tax levy and plans to bolster the department with men and equipment financed by sales tax returns.

Three full-time firefighters will be hired after the referendum with funds from a city sales tax surplus. Three more men will be hired when the merger is finalized probably early in 1973.

Rolling Meadows simply has outgrown the fire protection district which was formed as a volunteer unit in 1958.

The three fire district trustees have done an exceptional job. Trustees James Service, Robert Ulbrich and Victor Schrock should be commended for directing a superior fire department in recent years with budgetary limitations.

Construction On J. C. Penney Store To Begin Soon

Foundation construction on the J. C. Penney Treasury Store, to be located near Algonquin and Golf roads in Rolling Meadows, is expected to begin within three weeks.

Larry Niffenegger, Penney's field manager for the project, said actual construction will begin as soon as possible after the necessary building permits are secured from the city.

Work crews began clearing the site along Algonquin Road about 10 days ago, and so far are primarily involved in land balancing and grading.

Niffenegger said the project will be completed some time next fall.

The development will include the Treasury discount department store and satellite stores, possibly including a grocery store, dry cleaner and liquor store.

Schools Keep Close Surveillance

Keeping Ahead Of Developers A Full-Time Job

Editor's note: School district officials sometimes play the role of sleuths searching out developers and keeping as close a surveillance as possible. Remaining one step ahead of prospective housing developments and anticipating student enrollment is a year-round job for Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

by JOANN VAN WYE

An aerial map with red, yellow and green shapes pasted on it hangs in the office of Deputy Supt. Joseph Kiszka. The map outlines the boundaries of Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 and the colored shapes designate active developments under way within the boundaries.

The splashes of color are most prominent in the upper right hand corner of the map, the Northeastern section of Dist. 15.

This is the area Kiszka describes as "most volatile."

There are currently nine active developments in the district. Of these four are building multiple dwelling units in the northeast corner of the district where more than 3,500 units are under construction.

THE OTHER five active developments are in the central or southwest section of the district but only two are multiple use and the other three are single-family subdivisions.

In order to plan for the students from these developments, know where to acquire school sites and know when and where to construct new schools, Dist. 15 officials have to keep tabs on these and other proposed developments within the district's boundaries.

Kiszka or another district representative attend all zoning hearings in Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Hoffman Estates, Arlington Heights and Schaumburg if the proposed rezoning would have an effect on the district. There are also Cook County Zoning Commission hearings to attend.

"We don't attempt to tell anyone how to develop the land, we feel that is best left to the commissions," said Kiszka. "What we try to do is explain how a development would affect the district financially and how it would affect school facilities."

THE DEVELOPMENTS place a burden on the district because the district has to educate children coming out of the developments for at least a year until it receives tax revenue from the development, said Kiszka. He estimates the cost of educating one student at more than $600 a year.

"Someone has to pay for these children. If the developers won't make a contribution then the burden is passed on to the taxpayers in the form of higher taxes," said Kiszka.

Dist. 15 representatives have never been denied an opportunity to be heard but some commissions are more attentive to what we have to say than others, said Kiszka.

Technically the commissions cannot force developers to make contributions to school districts but they can make it pretty hard on them if they don't, said Kiszka.

AS SOON AS district officials learn there are plans to develop land within Dist. 15 boundaries Kiszka or Supt. Frank Whiteley contact the developers to discuss a contribution in the form of land or money.

"Most developers are cooperative and are at least willing to come in and talk," said Kiszka. "They are usually a little skeptical when they come in and we have to convince them we are not trying to get all we can."

The board of education's site committee has established guidelines for builder's contributions. The guidelines call for the donation of five acres of land and an additional acre for every 100 elementary age children coming out of the development and $100 for every bedroom in the development.

"We never get all we ask for. Builders try to hold the contribution down because they have to pass it on to the buyer or renter and their price has to be competitive," said Kiszka.

DIST. 15 officials are aware of development plans in the district long before actual construction starts.

With 35 per cent of the land within the

Dist. 15 boundaries undeveloped and the cost of land prohibitive for anything but commercial or multiple-family use we have to know what is being planned so we can do our own planning, said Kiszka.

Dist. 15 officials have the land broken into four categories: active, zoned and ready, waiting for zoning and negotiating.

In the zoned and ready category Dist. 15 has 11 developments listed for a total of 5,789 units. Nine of the developments zoned and ready are in the Northeastern corner of the district where 5,334 units are planned.

KISZKA SAID while these developments are zoned and ready the district has no idea when they will be built because this depends on how easy it is to get money and how easy it is to sell or rent units.

Some of the zoned land is held by land speculators who will probably sell it rather than build on it themselves, according to Kiszka. Regardless, the district officials are negotiating with all of these developers. The proposals may change before construction starts but the developers will go for more not less units, said Kiszka.

Centex Builders fall in the waiting for zoning category but theoretically they are seeking a preannexation agreement with Hoffman Estates.

Our experience with Centex has been that once they get the zoning they start building like crazy so we have to watch this one closely said Kiszka.

CENTEX HAS proposed construction of 428 units.

In the negotiations category are four parcels held by land speculators, tied up in court litigation or awaiting funds from the federal government.

All of these developers have been contacted by Dist. 15 officials and are either still negotiating or have agreed to the contribution of a school site or a per unit donation ranging from $50 to $200.

Department Heads Begin Budget Work

The Village of Palatine is getting an early start on its budget for the next fiscal year.

A preliminary planning meeting was held this week between Village Mgr. Berton G. Braun and the heads of the six village departments.

The department heads were given basic worksheets which are to be completed, indicating the anticipated needs of their departments, and returned to Braun by mid-September.

Braun said he hopes to present a preliminary budget to the village board in early November and to "try to get the whole thing wrapped up by the first of the year."

The budget does not have to be adopted until next May 1, and planning does not generally begin until early in the year.

BUT THIS YEAR, mainly because village elections are scheduled for next April, Braun hopes to get the budget out of the way before campaigning takes up the time of the trustees.

Braun said he has "no idea" how big the budget will be, but characterized it as "an important budget from a lot of respects."

In the past couple of years, he said, the public works department has undertaken major renovations in the village water system, and such special projects as paving the parking lot at the transportation center.

Now, he said, the public works department will be catching up on street resurfacing which was put aside as work was completed on the other projects.

The other village departments preparing requests for funds for the 1972-73 fiscal year are police, fire, finance, building and zoning, and health.

East and westbound traffic on Ill. Rte. 72 (Higgins Road) is prohibited from turning left onto Rte. 58 (Golf Rd.) in Schaumburg until road construction at that intersection is completed.

The question of left turns onto Rte. 58 was raised by Henry Netter at Monday night's meeting of the Hoffman Estates Village Board.

Although the intersection lies within another village, Netter asked that traffic regulation be investigated and the public informed. Schaumburg Police Sgt. Robert Hammond said left turns onto Rte. 58 have been stopped, pending the completion of the road work in November.

"This has been done in order to keep traffic moving at the intersection while construction is in progress," Hammond said Tuesday. It is expected signals will be installed at the intersection when work is completed, Hammond added.

1 of 3 Is Found Guilty Of Battery

One of three men charged with battery during a scuffle in a Palatine restaurant in June was found guilty yesterday by Circuit Court Judge Anthony J. Scuttillo.

James Panagakis, owner of the Palatine House Restaurant, will be sentenced on Sept. 28. The charges stemmed from a June 20 incident at the restaurant, 217 W. Colfax St. James Weaver, husband of a former waitress at the restaurant, brought the charges against Panagakis, John Bakopoulos and Gus Kotsiosvos.

Bakopoulos and Kotsiosvos were acquitted of the charges.

Petitions Assure Vote On Township Government

With the Palatine League of Women Voters' (LWV) submission yesterday of petitions bearing the signatures of 2,032 township residents, the question of whether to retain the township level of government is assured of a spot on the Nov. 7 general election ballot.

The league's effort to do away with township government is a precedent-setting move statewide, representing the first attempt to dissolve or merge townships as allowed under the 1970 Illinois Constitution.

Alice DeViney, chairman of the LWV township committee, said the league considers the township duplicative, costly, ineffective, outdated and "really unfair" to the people who live in municipalities.

The township's response: Not so. In fact, says Township Supervisor Howard I. Olsen, "the township services should be expanded rather than retracted." He declined to elaborate on the statement.

The league says the township is "the middle man in government," an unnecessary level for which taxpayers "pay a good deal of money and get little in return."

If the league's referendum proves successful, taxpayers who live in municipalities would save an estimated $10 a year on property assessed at $10,000. The league estimates these 42,300 residents would still pay about $6 for the general assistance functions currently handled by the township, and for road maintenance within their villages.

The remaining 12,717 township residents who live in unincorporated areas would still pay about the same amount—$16.40 per $10,000 assessed valuation—but the tax money would go to other governmental agencies.

Cook County would take over many of the services currently provided by the township if the referendum were successful, according to the LWV.

Mrs. DeViney said George W. Dunne, president of the Cook County Board of Commissioners, has assured her the county would be willing to offer the same services to the residents of unincorporated Palatine Township they currently receive from the township.

The township currently levels three taxes—for the town, general assistance and road and bridge funds.

According to Mrs. DeViney, the $127,400 town fund contains an overabundance of salaries of township officials—$25,300.

An additional $50,000 in the town fund—a disproportionate amount for the township to assume, according to the LWV—supports The Bridge, a youth services bureau which is regarded as the main project of the township.

Mrs. DeViney suggested that The Bridge could solicit funds on its own, work through the Countryside YMCA or be included in an area mental health district.

"There are at least two dozen organizations in the Northwest suburbs that could provide the services The Bridge does," Mrs. DeViney said. "The only difference is they're not all in one place."

She added that the part-time nurse at The Bridge who is an employee of the Cook County Dept. of Public Health would be available to township residents regardless of whether The Bridge exists.

The general assistance fund of $15,000 is "hardly worth maintaining a government structure," according to Mrs.

DeViney.

She said Dunne volunteered the services of the county in providing general assistance to families experiencing crises, as well as providing street maintenance.

The maintenance provided by the township through its road and bridge fund costs about $2,857 per mile, according to the LWV. Road maintenance in Palatine amounts to $1,787 per mile, the LWV says.

In addition, the league objects to residents of municipalities having to contribute to the township's road and bridge fund, because the township roads consist mainly of small streets in unincorporated subdivisions.

The league proposes that the voter registration functions of the township could be handled through other municipal offices by the appointment of deputy clerks.

The likelihood of the league's succeeding in dissolving the township? "We're going to have to leave that up to the voters," Mrs. DeViney says. "Anybody who is aware of all the facts and studies the issues may feel much like the league does."

Electric Power Off For 2,500

Nearly 2,500 electric power customers were without electricity for an hour yesterday because of a power failure of undetermined origin.

Power went off about 3:30 p.m. yesterday for 1300 customers in an area bounded by Rand Road on the south, Checker Road on the north, Buffalo Grove Road to the east and Long Grove Road on the west, according to Jack Stephens, district superintendent of the Commonwealth Edison Co.

Nearly 1,200 customers were without power in an area near the intersections of Thomas Street and Kennicott Avenue in Arlington Heights. Part of the Arlington Crest subdivision of Palatine was also blacked out.

Stephens said yesterday afternoon that the cause of the blackout was still undetermined. He guessed that it may have been caused by a break in an underground cable or an equipment failure at the power company's substation near the intersection of Rand and Arlington Heights roads.

The Ol' Swimming Suit About Ready For Retirement

by JULIA BAUER

The most painful time of year is about to engulf the under-18 population. Not only are school bells sounding their solemn dirge, but the most revered sign of summer—the ol' swim suit—is just about ready for retirement.

For some Northeast suburban youth, swim suits are worn out instead of being outgrown from summer to summer. The tattered suits probably belong to the kids enrolled in indoor swimming classes sponsored by the Countryside YMCA each season.

Autumn classes begin the Monday after Labor Day for old kids, young kids, handicapped kids, babies and whales—whales? Actually, the yellow, red and blue "whales" are still kids underneath it all. The terms identify ability levels for beginning swimmers. The real treat is to beginning a blue whale, alias advanced beginner in lapdubber's terms.

The smallest schools of fish paddling around the St. Viator High School's pool are appropriately named Wee Ones and Tiny Tots—groups of 6-month to 2-year-olds and 3-to-5 year olds.

BABIES WHO can't walk, talk or feed themselves are learning coordination in three feet of water. They're also learning that having their head under water doesn't mean instant death, a fact too many adults still haven't realized. Mamas are there in the water providing crucial support to their infants. Some playfully dip their child to the full 3-foot depth and help the baby surface.

Except for a little water in the nose, the kids come bubbling to the top, ready for another dip.

The real beginners could be spotted by their disposable diapers bulging out of the form-fitting suits. Elders in the kids' group were at least to the training level.

It could be that the mothers were having more fun than their children, as they pulled, pushed, dunked and caressed their spluttering babies.

"Most of the kids don't have enough coordination yet to kick their legs instead of peddling like they're on a bicycle," swimming supervisor Karen Koehl said as she watched the tots splash around.

But a couple of the 2-year-olds can move all the right limbs and make some progress. The big ability jump comes in the 3-to-5 age group.

"There are some 5-year-olds that can swim the length of the pool," Miss Koehl said.

Classes in the greatest demand are the 3-to-7 year groups. Seasonally, spring classes are most popular, followed by summer, fall, and winter sessions, Y program director Roberta Turcotte said.

Up to 80 people are allowed to enroll in each class. Once in the class, swimmers are divided into ability levels and instructors handle groups of 5 to 10 students.

"THE POORER swimmer gets more attention," Mrs. Turcotte said. In the beginning the 5 to 1 ratio is sometimes too much.

"If someone is really scared, we'll work one on one until the swimmer gets more confident," Miss Koehl explained.

Time seems to be the biggest limiting factor on swimming class enrollments. Since the Y is renting the St. Viator pool until their own facility is completed next year, classes must be cut back during the school year to week-day evenings and Saturday mornings.

"We could keep a pool filled (with classes) if we had more time," Mrs. Tur-cotte said. There will be more pool to fill when the Y complex at Colfax Street and Northwest Highway is completed—the new indoor pool will have six lanes, one more than the St. Viator pool.

One of the most popular swimming programs is the "Fun Swim" for adults and families. Enrollment has doubled to 110 families in the past year. A 4-to-6 p.m. swimming slot has allowed commuters to get in a dip before supper, Mrs. Turcotte said, adding "The people have discovered us!"

Some 3,000 members, including families, are enrolled in the Countryside YMCA, which serves eighteen communities in the Northwest suburbs.

A Federal grand jury indicted Daniel Moore, former U.S. deputy comptroller of the currency, on charges of mis-handling $8.1 million in bank funds, securities and obligations.

Sen. George S. McGovern, smarting under White House charges that he may have jeopardized Vietnam peace negotiations, charged that it was President Nixon who was interfering by sending Henry Kissinger on a "global junket." McGovern, in Wisconsin, said the Kissinger trip from Paris to Saigon was designed to manipulate public opinion.

The Illinois Electoral Board postponed ruling on whether Communist party and Socialist Workers party states will be allowed on the ballot in November.

Governor Richard B. Ogilvie said he would conduct a "person-to-person" campaign from the tip of Southern Illinois to Chicago—by camper. His Democratic opponent, Daniel Walker, walked the length of the state last year, more than 1,000 miles.

The World

Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer adjourned the 15th game of their world chess championship with Spassky's king in check after 40 moves.

Twelve African countries have indicated they will withdraw from the 26th Olympic Summer Games if Rhodesia participates, according to Willy Daume, president of the organizing committee.

Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, chief negotiator of the Viet Cong delegation at the Vietnam peace talks, said she agreed with President Nixon's political opponents that he missed a chance to make peace when he took office in 1969.

The War

North Vietnam said Thursday there has been no progress toward a settlement either in private or public Vietnam talks, and the Viet Cong backed reports that President Nixon missed a chance to make peace early in 1969.

Developers Given 3 Weeks To Correct Drainage System

by LYNN ASINOF

Cook County Circuit Judge Daniel Covelli has given developers involved in the long-standing Cambridge subdivision drainage dispute three weeks to improve their temporary drainage system in the Jackson Drive area.

At a hearing Wednesday, Covelli ruled that the present system is not adequately draining the area and is partially responsible for the serious flooding that occurred during heavy rains earlier this summer.

The present drainage system was built as part of an agreement among Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, three developers and some private citizens. The agreement supposedly ended a series of lawsuits over flooding in the area.

The suit, however, was reopened earlier this year when Harold Haar, a Jackson Drive property owner, claimed that the drainage system had now alleviated the flooding.

ACCORDING TO Fred Hillman, executive vice president of Chesterfield Builders, a court investigation revealed two reasons why the drainage system was not working. Part of the problem, according to Hillman, stems from a dam Haar built across his property. The dam reportedly obstructed the natural flow of water in the area.

More important, said Hillman, the drainage system was not doing its job. "The drainage ditch was not being adequately maintained, so that an awful lot of silt had built up," he said.

Hillman also said that when Zale Construction Co. began work on Lakeside Villas west of Jackson Drive, they filled in approximately 75 per cent of the temporary storage area.

Although Chesterfield no longer owns any of the property involved, they were responsible for putting in the first temporary drainage system. Therefore they have remained in the suit along with Zale and Richard J. Brown, Inc., which built Cambridge.

AT HEARINGS last week, Covelli instructed Haar to remove the dirt dam from his property to allow for natural water drainage. Haar has complied with this order by removing most of the dam.

In order to correct the rest of the problem, engineers involved with the suit devised a plan for rerouting the drainage away from Jackson Drive to connect with Zale's retention basin.

Plans for this rerouting include extending and cleaning out the present drainage ditch. Buffalo Grove Eng. Arnold Seaberg said reexcavating the ditch would "improve it to the point where water will flow as it should."

Seaberg said Buffalo Grove also wants Cambridge to improve a temporary storage basin at the southeast corner of the subdivision and connect it to the drainage ditch.

JUDGE COVELLI gave Chesterfield Builders three weeks to complete the new system. He said that if action was not taken with that time, he would issue an injunction stopping all construction by Chesterfield and Zale. A hearing will be held Sept. 7 to determine if proper action has been taken.

The temporary drainage system, however, is not expected to prevent flooding in the area. "The unfortunate part of this thing is that from the Cambridge Country-side manhole to the bottom of our temporary drainage area, the gradient is quite shallow," Hillman said.

He explained that because the water has little place to go, it backs up into Cambridge and runs over Lakeside Villas and Jackson Drive.

"The best situation is to provide a pipe system in that area," Hillman said. He added that Chesterfield had earlier attempted to obtain easements through Haar's property for sewer pipes, but that Haar had asked $15,000 for the easement rights.

COVELLI HAS instructed Zale engineers to study the problem and determine the most feasible route for a pipe system in the area. Once a route is mapped, Zale and Wheeling officials will negotiate for easement rights.

Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer said plans for a pipe sewer system had been thwarted because residents in the area were asking "outrageous prices" for easement rights.

He said that under state law, villages now have the right to condemn land outside their boundaries to install sewers pipes and the like.

Assistance From Twp. Is Life Saver

by DAVE MAHSMAN

Township public assistance can be called a short-term life saver that will keep a family above financial waters until a rescue ship of funds comes from the county, state or federal government.

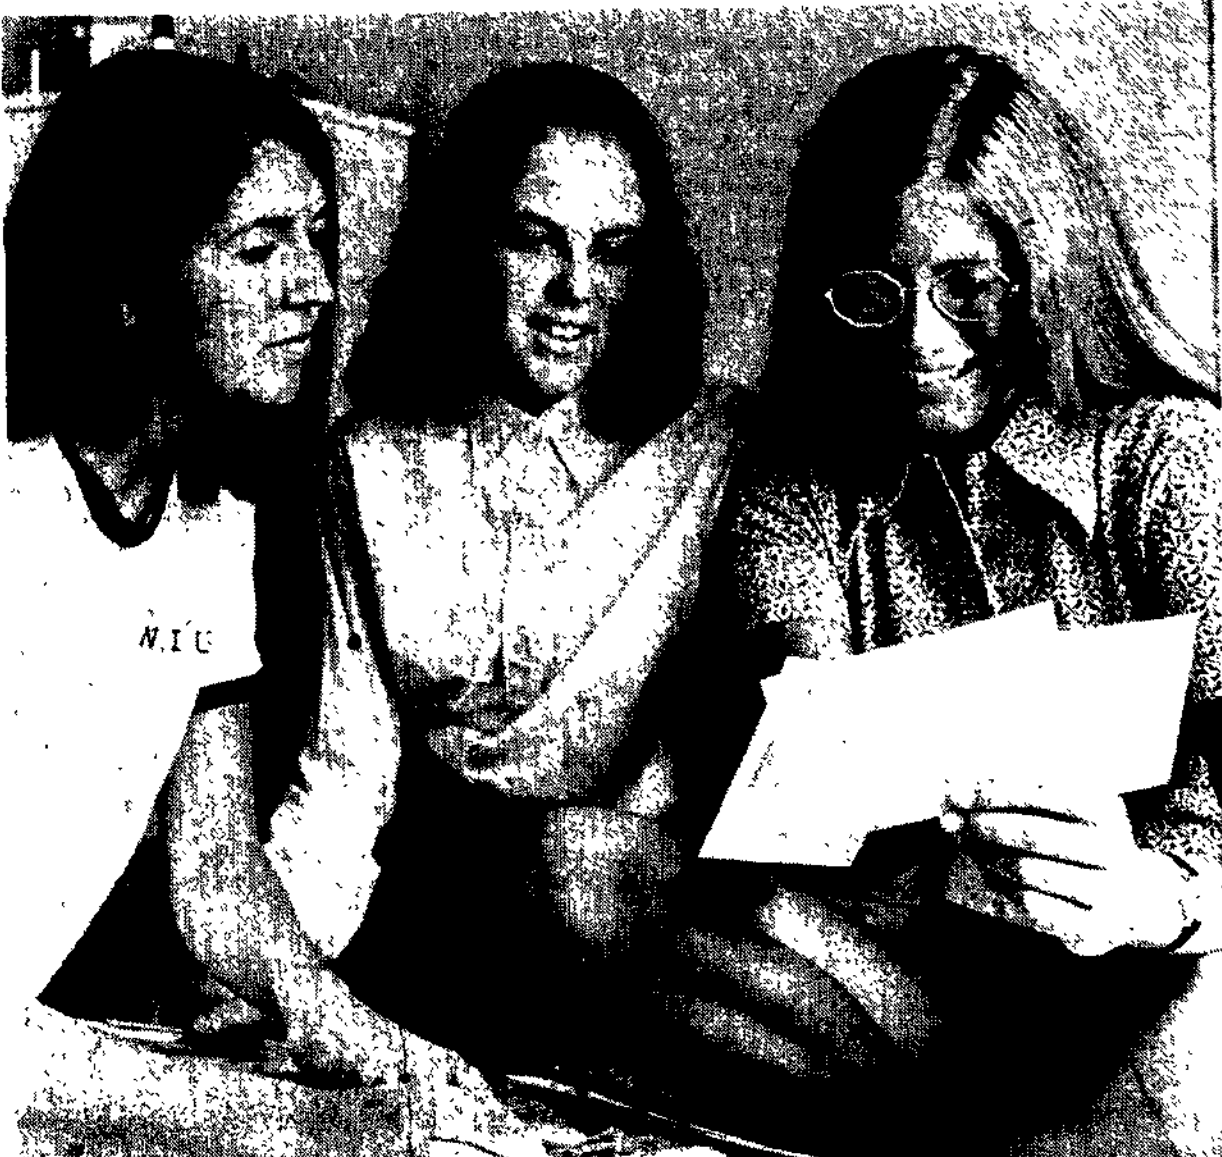

For example, a partially blind mother of five was recently deserted by her husband. She applied for Cook County assistance, but funds from that source would take more time than she could afford. She turned to Wheeling Township for help.

The same day the woman came into Wheeling Town Hall, she got $25 worth of food orders to feed her hungry family and $10 cash to do the laundry, which totalled $85 for food and $20 for laundry. Help from the township stopped two weeks later as quickly as it had begun when she got her first assistance check from the county.

Wheeling Township gave away some $23,000 of its budgeted $46,110 for general assistance during the 1971-72 fiscal year, said Fran Brossett, who handles most of the welfare cases. She explained that budgeted amounts are usually in excess of spending, because the township must be ready for any emergency that might arise. She added that funds left at the end of the fiscal year are carried over into the next year. This year's budget allows, $62,850 for assistance.

"WE WILL definitely spend more this year than last (on general assistance)," Mrs. Brossett said. She explained that there is "greater demand" for the welfare benefits. The township's population is constantly increasing, and more town-

LOOKING OVER POST CARDS she might like to send home to England, Shirley Tyson, center, gets suggestions from Claudia, left, and Diane Claes of Arlington Heights. Shirley is living with the Marvin Claes family until next July. She is in this country as part of the foreign exchange program offered by the American Field Service (AFS). Shirley will be attending Wheeling High School this fall and will be Diane's "little sister"

Claudia, who is enrolled at Western Illinois University (WIU), will be studying in Madrid, Spain for the entire school year. The Claes learned about the need for homes for foreign exchange students from an article in the Herald, and informed the AFS of their interest. According to everyone involved "the match up couldn't have been better."

AFS Student Arrives From England

by RICH HONACK

When school starts in a few weeks at Wheeling High School, there will be a new member of the senior class. Shirley Tyson, 17, will be attending WHS for the first time. In fact it will be the first time Shirley has ever attended an American high school.

That's because she has just arrived in this country from Cumberland, England, a town in the northern half of that country.

She is here as part of the American Field Service (AFS) student exchange program.

Shirley will be making her home with the Marvin Claes family, 904 W. Hintz Rd., Arlington Heights. According to the visiting British lassie, "They are breaking me into the states little by little."

SHIRLEY ARRIVED in the United States last week along with 62 other foreign students. At New York the students enjoyed displaying their customs and talked over what they thought the U.S.

would be like.

"When we first got here we couldn't believe the size of the cars. They are all so big, and there are so many. Everyone was amazed," she said.

It was also in New York that the young visitor was introduced to the "hamburger." "We ordered hamburgers wherever we went. I find them very delicious," she said laughingly.

From New York began what seemed to Shirley a never-ending trip to Naperville. "We boarded the coach (that's a bus to us) and rode for more than 19 hours. And all we could see as we rode were miles of flat land," she said disappointedly.

IT SEEMS, according to Mrs. Claes, that the students crossed the more mountainous regions of the east coast at night and were unable to see the Allegheny Mountains.

When she arrived in Naperville Shirley was greeted by several students from Wheeling High School, as well as her foster family. However, what she didn't know was that she had yet another hour of Coach riding ahead.

This time, however, the ride was in Jack Kinsey's youth group bus and was a little less boring than the first ride. Since then however, Shirley has been driven by car or walked to most places in the area.

Also since her arrival in Arlington Heights she has noticed a few things about the American way of life.

"ONE OF THE MAIN things I've noticed is the amount of Coca Cola that people drink. We have lower age limits for drinking alcoholic beverages in Cumberland, so hardly anyone has soft drinks," she said.

She's also noted that things in "the states" are much bigger and newer than things in Cumberland. "I don't know if that means they're better — I'll have to wait and see."

Another point Shirley noticed since her arrival is the television programming in

by STEVE FORSYTH

The recent "snobburb" study — the Chicago Regional Hospital study — is indeed a strange waste of time.

The study does little more than make some people willing to pay more to live in certain places (Kenilworth, for example) and make others wonder what is wrong with their communities — places where they have enjoyed living for years.

What differences does it really make where a person lives, in regard to income or education? After all, a college graduate, or even a person with a doctorate, can be just as obnoxious as any other neighbor. The graduate is just as capable of spilling garbage on your lawn, or shoveling salt-laden snow from his driveway onto your grass, ruining a summer of gardening work.

The primary reason for the study, since it was done by a hospital group, must be to determine who the best hospital "customers" are.

Picture the scene — a two-car crash somewhere in the suburbs. An ambulance arrives and finds two seriously injured persons lying on the pavement. What is the first thing the attendant does?

Look for some identification, of course. ONE MAN ROLLS the injured people over, and the other looks for identification in the wallets. One of the drivers is from that wonderful place in the sky, Kenilworth.

The other victim is from Lake Zurich, which happens to rank 75th on the snob appeal scale. Still pretty good overall, but a long way from the top.

There is only room in the ambulance for one of the victims, so the rescue driver looks at the list pasted inside on the dashboard. He immediately calculates the economic status of each victim, and makes his choice.

A second ambulance is called to take care of the Lake Zurich man, and the Kenilworth man is on his way immediately.

There are obvious flaws in the system. The ambulance driver can't be expected to find out, for example, that that Kenilworth man lost his job last week, his mortgage is being foreclosed, and he has $10,000 in bad gambling debts.

The list is still interesting to others. Buffalo Grove residents may be pleased to know that 5.6 per cent of the families in town earn more than $25,000. That is especially nice if you happen to be part of the 5.6 per cent. The rest of the neighborhood can go around now trying to find out who the rest of the 5.6 per cent are.

SERIOUSLY, THERE are many more factors to consider, when selecting a community for your family, than income and education status. Community government, services and responsibility to the citizens are important. So are school districts, park districts and library systems.

The fact that Buffalo Grove ranks 46th on the scale, Wheeling 76th, and Arlington Heights 29th has little to do with the quality of the communities. It probably has even less to do with a citizen's ability to pay his hospital or ambulance bills. It probably has little to do with hospitals, either.

Assistance From Twp. Is Life Saver

Township Supr. Ethel Kolerus, who is also supervisor of general assistance, said township assistance programs were set up in Illinois to help the needy who do not qualify for such categorical aid programs as assistance to the blind or disabled, old age benefits and Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). Local assistance may also be used to help those who are waiting to be accepted for other assistance, as in the case of the partially blind mother.

Each township in the state funds its own general assistance program. Wheeling Township taxes its residents an average of one cent per $100 assessed valuation for its program.

Because Wheeling Township receives no state funding for its welfare program, there is no legal ceiling on the amount any one case can collect in assistance payments. Yet the township does try to follow county guidelines for payments to discourage welfare cases from moving into the area to collect a bigger check, Mrs. Brosseit said.

Township officials say they keep a tight rein on their welfare funds, keeping their eyes open for so-called "welfare freeloaders." Wheeling Township's relatively light caseload (25 to 40 cases each month as compared to 300 or 400 in some of Cook County's townships) makes it fairly easy to see that no one gets money who doesn't deserve it, Mrs. Kolerus said.

BUT WHO REALLY knows for sure (who is freeloaders)? Mrs. Brosseit asked.

Mrs. Kolerus admitted that some cases may be receiving township funds and money from family members at the same time. Such an arrangement would normally not be permitted, but a U.S. Supreme Court decision three years ago threw out requirements that a family has to support indigent relatives. This makes it difficult for welfare agencies to detect cases that are receiving money on the sly from relatives or friends.

"Some cases have to be getting money elsewhere to make ends meet. Or they may be working on the side," Mrs. Kolerus contended. "But we never know for sure. We're not a policing department."

In most cases, though, unqualified welfare applicants are detected after an initial payment is made, Mrs. Brosseit said.

"We have to believe them (as to applicants' qualifications for assistance) until we can check them out," she said. "We give them the barest payment to begin with."

AFS Student Arrives From England

America. "I think it's really funny how they put quiz shows one after another in the mornings," she said.

"We even used to laugh at the way all these horror movies are on after midnight, and at some of the titles, when I was back home," she said.

SHIRLEY ALSO said it seemed to her that Americans watch much more television than the English do. "Of course," she added "our television day only runs from 4 to 11:30 p.m."

However, two of the Clays' daughters, Diane and Claudia, as well as one of their sons, Tom, said they are going to try to get Shirley to become a television bug like much of the American youth population.

According to Shirley, that is probably one of the few differences between American youth and youth from other nations. "Basically," she said, "I think most of the youth in the world are the same. Even when I was in New York and we had kids from all over the world, there was no language barrier."

Shirley's favorite hobby is "Sports." She said she was active in several sports in school in Cumberland. Some of the top sports are field hockey and net ball

"IN ENGLAND, girls participating in sports is just accepted. In fact, usually the most popular girls in school are those who are on the first hockey team," explained Shirley.

"Claudia is going to Spain in September to spend the school year studying in Madrid. Our other daughter, Susan, is in school at Mankato State College in Minnesota, so Shirley will live with Diane, who will be her "big sister" at WHS," said Mrs. Clays.

DURING HER one-year stay in the United States the Clays plan to take Shirley sight-seeing to different areas of the country. They aren't saying where they're going for fear that if plans have to be changed Shirley may be disappointed.

Shirley is probably one of the few students in the area who is looking forward to two weeks from now, when she will start school. "I can't wait to meet all the students and see how it compares to our schools," she explained.

In the meantime, Shirley will have to continue her observations while eating hamburgers, drinking cola and watching television... what better way to be welcomed to the United States
